By an agreement in contemplation of marriage the intended husband agreed that he would settle (inter alia) the sum of £5,000, & any further moneys & property which he should receive & be entitled to under the will of his mother. The mother afterwards by her will, in exercise of a power of appointment contained in the will of her father, gave to the husband a life interest subject to forfeiture upon alienation or attempted alienation by him:—Held: the husband was entitled to this life interest under a will of his mother; it was not comprised in the agreement for a settlement & there had been no forfeiture.—*Re CRAWSHAY, WALKER v. Part of the real estate was situate in Ireland, & under Irish Land Act, 1903 (c. 37), was purchased by the occupying tenants for a gross sum of £340,380, with the result that A. was entitled, as vendor, to a bonus of £40,845 by Irish Land Act, 1903 (c. 37), s. 8:—Held: this bonus was not subject to the covenant to settle after-acquired property contained in the personalty settlement, as it was an interest in real estate specifically excepted from the operation of the covenant.—*Re ANNALY'S (LADY) TRUSTS, ANNALY (LADY) v. 538. Life interest subject to restraint on anticipation—Where intention to include life interests.]—In 1877 a domiciled Scotsman married a domiciled Englishwoman.

By a marriage settlement in Scottish form made between the husband & the wife with her father's consent, funds belonging to the husband were settled for the life-rent use of the wife if she survived him, with remainder to the children of the marriage as therein expressed, the provisions to be in bar of claims to jus relictae & legitim out of the husband's movable estate.

By a contemporaneous settlement in English form made between the wife's father, the wife, the husband, & the trustees funds belonging to the wife were settled in trust for the wife for life for her separate use without power of anticipation with remainder to the husband for life until he died, or alienation, & subject thereto on the usual trusts for the issue of the marriage, with an ultimate trust in default of issue for the wife if she survived the husband, or her statutory next of kin if she predeceased him.

The after-acquired property clause included life interests. The income of these life interests was to be paid to the wife for her separate use without power of anticipation. They were excluded from the trust for conversion & could only be sold with her consent. Under the wills of her mother & brother, who died after the passing of Married Women's Property (Scotland) Act, 1881 (c. 21), the wife became entitled to life interests in movables for her separate use without power of anticipation.

The wife died on Aug. 19, 1909, domiciled in Scotland. She was possessed of considerable free movable estate, representing savings of income of movable property settled to her separate use. By her will she disposed of this property to the exclusion of her husband & child:—Held: the after-acquired life interests were caught by the English settlement, notwithstanding the restraint on anticipation imposed by the donors.—*Re MACKENZIE, MACKENZIE v. II. Property Subject to Power of Appointment in Covenantor.

539. General power of appointment—Power exercised in own favour—Appointment of annuity.]

—In a marriage settlement the intended wife assigned all the property to which she then was, or to which she or her intended husband in her right should, during the coverture, become entitled, to trustees, upon the trusts thereby declared, for herself, the husband & the children of the marriage. After the marriage her father died, having by his will given her a general power of appointment over his residuary estate. The wife, during the coverture, in exercise of the power contained in the will, appointed to herself, for her separate use, a gross sum of £1,000, & an annuity of £100 for her life, & amongst her family the residue, upon trusts differing from those of the marriage settlement, reserving a power of revocation:—Held: (1) the terms of the assignment by the wife in the marriage settlement did not amount to a covenant to exercise a general power of appointment in favour of the objects & in conformity with the trusts of such settlement, & property over which the wife afterwards acquired a general power of appointment was not by that circumstance brought within the operation of the settlement; (2) upon the appointment by the wife of the £1,000 for her own absolute use that sum became bound by the trusts of the settlement, & the power of revocation was ineffectual; (3) the interest in the annuity of £100 for her own life for her separate use, which the wife took under her appointment, an interest which was in conformity with that which she would have taken under the trusts of the settlement if the annuity had been otherwise acquired, was not disturbed by the effect of the settlement, inasmuch as it was not the intention of the contract expressed therein that any after-acquired property should be converted, or taken otherwise than in the state in which it should be so acquired.—*EWART v. By his will, made in 1884, the father of M. bequeathed to the trustees of the will a sum of £4,000 upon trust for such persons & purposes as M. should appoint in writing, & in default of or subject to any such appointment in trust for her sole & separate use, & testator declared it to be his intention that M. might be able, by exercising her power of appointment, to defeat the operation of the covenant contained in her marriage settlement for the settlement of her after-acquired property. Testator died in 1887. M. appointed that the sum of £4,000 should be held in trust for her separate use by nine separate appointments, made in separate days, & each under £500 in amount:—Held: the sum of £4,000 had been properly appointed by M., & was payable to her, & was not bound by her covenant to settle after-acquired property.—*Re GERARD (LORD), OLIPHANT v. Property, exceeding £200 in value, was subsequently bequeathed in trust for such purposes as she should appoint, & in default of appointment to her absolutely for her separate use. She executed deeds-poll purporting to appoint out of the property several sums of £199 each to herself absolutely:—Held: notwithstanding the general power of appointment, the bequeathed property was bound by the covenant, & the deeds-poll were therefore ineffectual.—*Re O'CONNELL, MAWLE v. 544. ——— After termination of coverture.]—By a voluntary settlement dated Mar. 26, 1902, appct., a married woman, covenanted to settle all real & personal property to which she was then, or should at any time during her then present coverture become, entitled for any estate or interest whatsoever in possession, reversion, remainder, contingency, or expectancy. There was no child of the marriage, which was dissolved on the wife's petition as from June 9, 1904, & the property of the wife comprised in her marriage settlement was ordered to be conveyed to her as if the husband had died in her lifetime.

In these circumstances questions arose whether the trustees of the voluntary settlement were entitled by virtue of the above-mentioned covenant to the following moneys, namely:—(a) A sum of £2,800, which became payable on Apr. 12, 1905, representing appct.'s fund settled by her marriage settlement, & at the date thereof neither ascertained nor payable, over which fund, in the event of there being no child of the marriage, appct. had a general power of appointment exercisable by deed while not under coverture, or by will whether covert or sole, & to which fund in default of any such appointment she was absolutely entitled if she survived her husband. On Dec. 4, 1905, appct. had appointed the marriage settlement funds to herself absolutely. (b) A sum of £241 4s. arising upon the sale by appct. as tenant for life, of certain land in Ireland comprised in the voluntary settlement, sold by her, after the dissolution of her marriage, under the provisions of the Irish Land Act, 1903 (c. 37). The sum in question represented the 12 per cent. bonus payable to vendors under s. 48 (1) of that Act, & by virtue of the provisions of Irish Land Act, 1904 (c. 34), belonged to appct., as tenant for life, as her "own proper moneys for" her "own use & benefit":—Held: (1) on (a) the determination of the question of title to the sum of £2,800 turned upon the distinction between power & property, & although the exercise of the power after the dissolution of her marriage created property, yet during the coverture all that appct. had was a power of appointment over the fund, & a power not being within the scope of the covenant, the sum of £2,800 belonged to her absolutely; (2) on (b) adopting the view taken of the nature of the bonus in Re Annaly's (Lady) Trusts, Annaly (Lady) v. Bourke, No. 536, ante, the bonus was not merely a by-product of appct.'s life estate, but was an interest in the settled hereditaments accruing to her when the Irish Land Act, 1903 (c. 37), interpreted by Irish Land Act, 1904 (c. 34), came into operation on Nov. 1, 1903, & the bonus was caught by the covenant & must be retained by the trustees of the voluntary settlement.—*TREMAYNE v. The wife's father, reciting that he wished to give her property without the obligation of having it settled, bequeathed a share of his estate, exceeding £5,500 in value to such uses & on such trusts as she might appoint, & in default of appointment, in trust for her for life, for her separate use, with remainders over.

The wife then executed eleven deeds, each appointing to her separate use £499 19s. 11d., four of the deeds being executed on one day, six on another, & one on another:—Held: the wife was entitled to the eleven sums of £499 19s. 11d. for her separate use, without any obligation to settle them.—*BOWER v. The husband died & left all his property to his wife absolutely. The wife's father died before the husband; & by events which happened after the husband's death, a sum of £100, previously reversionary, devolved on the widow in possession under her father's will:—Held: the property left by the husband was not subject to the covenant but the £100 was.

The husband also covenanted for the settlement of any personal estate that should "at any time thereafter" come to him. The wife survived the husband, & after his death became entitled to a fund in ct. as next of kin of an intestate :—Held : the wife's covenant was to be read as operative during coverture only, & this construction was assisted by the recital, which might be referred to in order to explain the ambiguity in the covenant.—*Re COGHLAN, BROUGHTON v. 563. Spes successions.—Whether "estate or interest in personal property."—A wife's mere spes successions, such as her hope of succession to a share of her husband's personal property upon his death, under the Scottish law of the jus relicta, which jus vests in the wife only upon the death of the husband, even though coupled with an indemnity by the husband in damages if the spes should be disappointed, is not an "estate or interest in personal property" coming to her "during the coverture," within the meaning of the usual covenant in a marriage settlement for the settlement of the wife's after-acquired property.

An ante-nuptial settlement, made in 1873, contained a covenant by the husband & wife that if during the coverture the wife or husband in her right should become entitled to any personal property which should amount to £200, for any estate or interest whatsoever, they would respectively assure same to the trustees upon the trusts of the settlement. The husband & wife separated, & by a separation deed made in 1894 the husband, who was a domiciled Scotsman, agreed that in the event of his death in the lifetime of the wife her rights in his means & estate should not be less than she would have been entitled to by the law of Scotland if he had been a domiciled Scotsman at the date of his death. The husband died, leaving net personal estate of £16,000, to one-third of which the wife would by the law of Scotland have been entitled under her jus relicta :—Held : the equivalent share to which the wife was entitled under the separation deed was not bound by her covenant to settle her after-acquired property.—*Re SIMPSON, SIMPSON v. 564. —.]—By a marriage settlement of 1898 a sum of £10,000, which included a sum of £5,539 secured to the trustees by the covenant of the wife's father, was settled on certain trusts for the wife, husband & children, the wife taking the first life interest, & covenanting to settle after-acquired property, to which she became entitled during the coverture, on substantially the same trusts. By his will of 1905 the father gave one-third of his residuary real & personal estate to the wife for her separate use absolutely. The father died during the coverture. His clear residuary estate, subject only to the covenant, was £80,000, all personality :—Held : the bequest was a satisfaction as to the wife's life interest in the £5,539 secured by the covenant, but not as to the interest of other cestuis que trust not mentioned in the will, taking no direct interest in the bequest, & only in fact taking derivatively under the after-acquired property clause, because the bequest happened to take effect during the coverture. The wife was therefore the only person put to election.

The covenant only extends to property to which the wife becomes entitled "during the said intended coverture." If her husband had died during testator's lifetime the wife would have taken her share absolutely, free from the covenant. So if she had died in testator's lifetime leaving issue who survived testator, her share would have formed part of her estate, under Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 33, but would not have been bound by the covenant (SWINFEN EADY, J.).—*Re BLUNDELL, BLUNDELL v. 574. ——— Under decree of foreign court.—

By a settlement in English form executed in 1878 in contemplation of a marriage between a domiciled Italian & an Englishwoman, it was agreed that the trustee should hold a sum of money secured upon an English mtge. upon trust to invest in English securities & to hold the same upon trusts for the benefit of the wife & husband & their issue. The settlement contained a covenant to settle after-acquired property of the wife. The marriage took place in Italy, where the husband & wife continued to reside. In 1898 a decree for the voluntary separation of the husband & wife was made by the Italian Ct., & they had since lived apart from each other. In 1881 the wife's father died, having by his will bequeathed to the wife certain legacies subject to his widow's life interest therein. The will contained a declaration that all money payable to any female should during coverture be paid to her for her separate use without power of anticipation. The widow died in 1899:—Held: (1) assuming English law to be applicable, the restraint on anticipation lasted until the date of payment, namely, the death of the widow, & the legacies were therefore bound by the covenant; (2) inasmuch as the decree of the Italian Ct. for separation did not, like an English decree for judicial separation, affect the rights of property of the parties, Davenport v. Marshall, No. 553, ante, did not apply, & the covenant to settle after-acquired property was still binding.—Re BANKES, REYNOLDS v. ELLIS, [1902] 2 Ch. 333; 71 L. J. Ch. 708; 87 L. T. 432; 50 W. After that moiety had fallen into possession, a moiety of the other moiety descended to the wife, not in possession but subject to a life interest:—Held: nevertheless, it, as well as the settled moiety, were saleable under the power.

As soon as Mrs. J. became entitled to the interest in reversion or remainder expectant on her sister's death in a moiety of a moiety of the farm, she & her husband were bound to convey it, so that it might become subject immediately, & not when it

584. Contingent interest under voluntary settlement—Becoming vested during coverture.—A covenant by an intended husband & wife to settle the wife's after-acquired property:—Held: to sever the wife's joint interest in personal estate created by a subsequent instrument.

Three years after that marriage settlement a voluntary settlement is made by P., in which there is an ultimate trust, if certain prior trusts fail, for his next of kin. That, as soon as the settlement was executed, did give a contingent interest to any person who might prove to be entitled under those words. Of course, it could not then be ascertained that these parties could take anything under it, because the next of kin of P. were the persons contingently entitled, & they could only be ascertained at the time at which he died. I do not, therefore, agree in the view that the settlement did affect this particular property at the time at which the voluntary settlement was made in 1883; though, no doubt, a possibility of succeeding to that property as one of the next of kin might thenceforward have been in the contemplation of the parties. But when P. died it was known who his three next of kin were, & those persons at once had an immediate interest. I do not say an interest in possession, but they had a clear interest in the property, although, no doubt, it might be a very remote interest, & possibly might fail; but there was an interest which vested in the next of kin at that time, & Mrs. H.'s [the wife's] share in which, according to my view of the covenant, the parties had bound themselves to convey & assure when circumstances should permit (NORTH, J.).—Re HEWETT, HEWETT v. HALLETT, [1894] 1 Ch. 362; 63 L. J. Ch. 182; 70 L. T. 393; 42 W. R. 233; 38 Sol. Jo. 113; 8 R. 70.

585. Contingent reversionary interest under will.—A settlement made in 1870, on the marriage of L., the husband & D., the wife, contained a covenant by both of them with the trustees of the settlement that all other, if any, the present & future real & personal estate & effects whatsoever, whether in possession or expectancy, of or to which L. & D., or either of them in her right, or by marital right, should at any time or times during the coverture become seised, possessed, or entitled, or of or to which L., or any person claiming through or under him, should by any means whatsoever become, in her right or by marital right, at any time or times after solemnisation of the marriage, seised, possessed, or entitled, except only such estate & effects as should be settled on her for her separate use, should from time to time, as soon as might be thereafter, or after they or he should become possessed of or entitled to the same, be conveyed, assigned, transferred, or paid unto the trustees, & be settled & assured upon the trusts of the settlement, or such of them as should be subsisting & capable of taking effect.

D. in 1871, during the coverture, became entitled under her mother's will to a contingent reversionary interest in part of the proceeds of sale of realty & personalty which was given for her separate use, & under a codicil to the same will to a contingent reversionary interest in another part of the proceeds, which was not given for her separate use. After L.'s death the interest under the will fell into possession; the interest under the codicil was still reversionary:—Held: (1) the interest under the will was not within the operation of the covenant; (2) the interest under the codicil was within the covenant.

Semble: it always has been possible, whether before or after Malins' Act [Married Women's Reversionary Interests Act, 1857 (c. 57)], by a properly framed covenant as to after-acquired property in a marriage settlement, to bind a married woman's reversionary interests, whether contingent or otherwise, acquired during coverture, but not falling into possession until afterwards; & the ct. can & always could, notwithstanding technical difficulties as to getting an actual conveyance, bind the property in the hands of every

By the marriage settlement of N. S. & M. S. dated June 6, 1860, M. S. assigned the £3,500 to the trustees, upon trusts under which N. S. had the first life interest, & in default of children, M. S. had a general testamentary power of appointment. There was also a covenant by N. S. & M. S. that if they, or either of them, should during the coverture become entitled to any real or personal property, except certain specified interests, the same should be forthwith assured to the trustees.

On June 20, 1860, A. & B. appointed that a moiety of the residue unappointed of the trust funds under the settlement of 1830 should, after the decease of the survivor of them, go to M. S., during her coverture, for her sole & separate use, without power of anticipation, her receipt to be a sufficient discharge for the payment thereof. There was a proviso that if M. S. should die in the lifetime of N. S., leaving no children, the same moiety should go to the brother of M. S. absolutely, & that if M. S. should survive her husband, the same moiety should go to M. S. absolutely.

M. S. died in 1887 leaving children, & having by her will appointed & bequeathed all her property to N. S. & appointed him sole exor. A. & B. had both pre-deceased M. S.:—Held: the appointment by A. & B., of June 20, 1860, showed an intention to exclude N. S. & any interest which he would take if the fund was caught by his marriage settlement; though the restraint on anticipation must be rejected, yet taken together with the gift over in default of children & the receipt clause, it showed an intention that the separate use should apply only to the income accruing during the particular coverture, & that M. S. should have no power of disposition over the corpus, such a limitation was clearly good & therefore, the fund having accrued during the coverture, the corpus was caught by the after-acquired property clause.—*SHUTE v. 601. —.]—A marriage settlement recited that it had been agreed that the intended husband & wife should covenant for the settlement of such property as should devolve upon the wife or the husband in her right through M.; & the husband & wife thereby severally covenanted that if the husband & wife or the husband in right of the wife should become possessed of or entitled to any such property, except interests given to the wife for her life, & which, as was thereby stated, should, unless settled to her separate use, be so settled, then such property should be settled upon the trusts of the settlement:—Held: the terms of the covenant did not include property bequeathed by M. to the wife absolutely for her separate use, & the construction was not altered by the recital or the words of exception.—BURN-MURDOCH v. CHARLESWORTH (1875), 23 W. R. 743.

602. —.]—By a marriage settlement, after a recital that on the treaty for the marriage it was agreed that all real & personal property which during the coverture should devolve upon or vest in the wife or the husband in her right to the value of £200 at any one time should be settled upon the trusts thereafter declared, it was witnessed that it was thereby agreed & declared between & by the parties thereto, & the husband thereby covenanted with the trustees that if at any time during the coverture any real or personal estate should devolve on or vest in the wife or the husband in her right to the amount in value of £200 at any one time, the husband would make, do, & execute, or cause & procure to be made, done, & executed, & join & concur in making, doing, & executing all such conveyances, etc., as would effectually vest such real & personal estate in the trustees upon the trusts therein declared. After the marriage a deed was executed by the wife's mother, under which, during the coverture, a sum exceeding £200 became payable to the wife for her separate use:—Held: as the operative part of the deed was clear, the recital could not control it; as the operative part of the deed only related to acts to be done by the husband, the agreement & declaration between & by the parties that those acts should be done did not import a covenant by any other party that they should be done, & there was, therefore, no covenant by any one but the husband; the covenant by him could not be held to relate to property over which he had no power & in which he had no interest & the wife therefore was not bound to bring into settlement property given to her separate use.—*DAWES v. By a subsequent deed of separation the husband covenanted that all such estates, real & personal, which might at the date of the marriage settlement, or which during the joint lives of husband & wife, should descend or come to, or devolve upon or be given or devised or bequeathed, or conveyed to or in trust for him, should be holden, enjoyed, sold, given away, devised, bequeathed & disposed of by the wife, her heirs, exors., administrators & assigns respectively. Two children of the marriage attained their ages of twenty-one, & died intestate, leaving the husband their sole next of kin:—Held: (1) the beneficial interests which the children had acquired under the settlement, & which devolved upon the husband as next of kin, were not bound or affected by the husband's covenant in the separation deed; (2) such beneficial interests formed part of the husband's personal estate.—*HUDSON v. Afterwards he effected certain life & accident policies, one of which contained a clause against assignment:—Held: the covenant was severable; the policies fell within the class defined by the covenant as property to which he became entitled by purchase, & therefore were bound by the covenant, notwithstanding the clause against assignment, the object of which was treated as being merely the protection of the co.—Re TURCAN (1888), 40 Ch. 610. Interests expressly included in settlement deed—Left to revert to settlor.—By a marriage settlement, dated in 1875, personal property of the wife was settled upon trust for the wife for life, & after her death upon trust to pay the income to the husband "so long as he shall remain unmarried, & from & after the death of the survivor," to hold the capital in trust for the children of the marriage, as the husband & wife or the survivor should appoint, & in default for sons at twenty-one & daughters at that age or marriage. There was a power of advancement exercisable with the consent of the husband & wife or the survivor during their lives. The ultimate trust in default of issue was for the wife if she survived, & if the husband survived for the appointee of the wife by will, & in default for her next of kin, as if she had died without having been married. The settlement also comprised a policy on the life of the husband which was settled upon like trusts, except that if the wife survived & married again the policy moneys were to be held upon the same trusts as if she were then dead. Then there was a covenant in the common form for the settlement of other & after-acquired property of the wife. There were six children of the marriage. The wife died in 1886, & the husband took out administration to her estate. In Jan. 1889 he married again. The question was, who since the husband's second marriage was entitled to the income of the property of the wife which was included in the settlement:—Held: upon the marriage again of the surviving husband, there was a resulting trust of the income during the rest of his life, to the legal personal representative of the wife; & the husband as administrator of his wife was entitled to the undisposed of income.

Such a command is not intended to settle such part of the property expressly included in the deed as is left to revert to the settlor, but to settle property which otherwise the deed would not affect at all (KAY, J.).—Re WYATT, GOWAN v. WYATT (1889), 60 L. T. 920.

In 1868 J., another daughter of testatrix, married, & by her marriage settlement covenanted that any real or personal property to which she then was entitled for any estate or interest whatsoever in reversion, remainder, or expectancy should be settled upon the trusts of the settlement. W. died in 1912 without issue, & leaving J. her sole next of kin:—Held: inasmuch as the covenant did not relate to any defined spes successionis it was too vague to be enforceable in equity; & consequently the property to which J. became entitled as next of kin of her sister was not comprised in the settlement.—Re MUDGE, [1914] 1 Ch. 115; 83 L. 616. Property not capable of being transferred by lex loci—Land in Jersey.—A marriage settlement, executed in 1897, contained a covenant whereby it was agreed that all real & personal property to which A. M. H., the intended wife, then was or at any time during her coverture should be or become entitled, "except her freehold & leasehold property in Jersey, & any cash, stocks, funds, or other securities, now in the actual possession, or standing in the name of A. M. H." should be assured & transferred by A. M. H., & all other necessary parties, if any, to the trustees of the settlement upon trust to sell & hold the proceeds upon the trusts relating to the wife's trust fund. At the date of the settlement A. M. H. was absolutely entitled to certain real estate in Jersey. In 1901 she became absolutely entitled to a share in certain other freehold property in Jersey. By the law of that country trusts of this character were not recognised, & all transfers of property were required to be made for adequate pecuniary consideration:—Held: although the words of the exception in the covenant did not exclude the subsequently acquired property of the wife in Jersey, yet, having regard to the law of Jersey which rendered the transfer of such property to the trustees inoperative, it was not caught by the covenant to settle.—*Re PEARSE'S SETTLEMENT, PEARSE v. 617. Sum raised by appointment under power in will.—By a settlement, made on the marriage of B., she was empowered to appoint that the trustees of the settlement should raise out of the settled fund any sums not exceeding in the whole £2,000, & pay the same to B. for her separate use. The settlement contained a covenant by B. to settle any after-acquired property of the value of £200 or upwards.

The father of B., who died in her lifetime, gave a fourth of his residuary estate in trust for each of his two daughters, & directed his trustees to hold the shares "upon the same trusts & with & subject to the same powers, including the powers of investment, as are in their respective marriage settlements contained with respect to the funds thereby settled." There were separate settlors, separate funds, & separate sets of trustees:—Held: B. was entitled to raise by appointment, out of her share of residue, the sum of £2,000 & the £2,000 was subject to the covenant as to after-acquired property.—*Re BEAUMONT, BRADSHAW v. 618. Mortgage granted by husband—In consideration of release of rentcharge.—A marriage settlement dated in 1884 contained a covenant for the settlement of the after-acquired property of the wife. The husband covenanted to secure to her a yearly rentcharge of £500, which he charged upon certain property. He subsequently executed a deed for that purpose. Some years later the wife released to her husband the rentcharge, & the husband mortgaged the property to the wife to secure the payment to her of £10,000. This mtg. was subject to a first mtg. of even date. By his will the husband devised the property upon trust for his wife for life, with remainder to such son of his as should first attain twenty-one. After the death of the husband the widow, in exercise of her power as tenant for life, sold the property. The first mtg. was then paid off:—Held: the widow was entitled to the £10,000 with interest & the £10,000 was not subject to the covenant to settle after-acquired property.—Re BISCOE, BISCOE v. BISCOE (1914), 111 L. T. 902.

A. Limitations as to Amount, Time and Source.

(a) In General.

619. What property within exception—Property not given so as to be capable of settlement—Residuary bequest to trustees to settle upon trusts of settlement.—By a marriage settlement, the intended husband & wife covenanted that if the wife should become thereafter entitled to property exceeding in value £500, it should be settled upon the trusts of the settlement under which the wife & husband took life interests, with limitations over:—Held: in computing this value, a residuary bequest to the trustees of the settlement upon the trusts of it ought not to be reckoned, but that the value was to be that of the future property, which could be settled.—FORSTER v. DAVIES (1861), 4 De G. F. & J. 133; 31 L. J. Ch. 276; 5 L. T. 532; 8 Jur. N. S. 65; 10 W. R. 180; 45 E. R. 1134, L. J.

620. — Only property of prescribed value—Arising at any one time and from any one source.—A marriage settlement contained a covenant that property to which the wife then was, or she or the husband in her right should, at any time during the coverture, become entitled, to the value of £500, should be settled:—Held: the covenant must be construed to affect only property of the prescribed value arising "at any one time, & from any one source."—Re HOOPER'S TRUSTS (1865), 5 New Rep. 463; 12 L. 621. — Legacy & share in residue under same will.—By a marriage settlement it was agreed that all property which, during the joint lives of the husband & wife, should devolve upon the wife or the husband in her right, & which should, at the time when the same should respectively so devolve, exceed the value of £500, should be settled upon the trusts of the settlement. By a subsequently executed will a legacy of £200 was left to the wife, & a share of the residuary estate of testator was also given to her for her separate use, such share being declared to be in addition to the legacy of £200. The share of the residue exceeded £500 & was paid to the trustees of the settlement:—Held: the legacy of £200 need not be settled.—Re MIDDLETON'S WILL (1868), 16 W. R. 1107.

622. — — — — ——A wife married in 1877 became, under the will of testator who died in 1880, entitled to a sum of £180, & also to an unascertained share of residue assumed to exceed somewhat the sum of £20:—Held: as between the husband & wife, although the wife took the £180 & share of residue under the same instrument, she did so under different titles, & therefore Married Women's Property Act, 1870 (c. 93), s. 7, must be applied to each sum separately & not to both in the aggregate, so that the £180, being by itself "a sum of money not exceeding £200," belonged to the wife "for her separate use."—Re DAVIES, HARRISON v. DAVIS, [1897] 2 Ch. 204; 66 L. J. Ch. 512.

623. — Legacy & share in legacy as next of kin to legatee.—By a marriage settlement it was provided that all such further or other portion or personal estate, if any, as should during the life of the intended wife become vested in or accrue to her or as should or might be assignable in law or equity either for a vested or contingent interest should be assigned to the trustees of the settlement, & it was also provided that this proviso should not extend to any chattel or interest which the intended wife might from time to time become entitled to either in possession or reversion unless every such legacy or interest should at each time amount to £500. The wife became entitled under the will of her mother to a sum of £1,000 & also to a sum of £350 on the death of one of her sisters as one of her next of kin. The property of which the £350 was a part was also derived from the will of the mother by which it was bequeathed to the sister for life with remainder to her, the sister's, next of kin:—Held: the £350 was not subject to the covenant.—*BULLER v. Under a will which came into operation prior to the date of the settlement, an annuity was given to trustees to be applied wholly or in part for the benefit of a widow, as the trustees should in their discretion think fit, the unapplied balance to be accumulated, and the accumulations remaining at the death of the widow to be divided among a class of persons, of whom the wife, party to the marriage settlement, was one.

The period for division happened after the determination of the coverture, & the share of each person participating then amounting to over £500, but neither at the date of the settlement nor at any time during the coverture, did such share amount to £500.—Held: the share was not subject to the covenant contained in the settlement.—*Re WELSTEAD, WELSTEAD v. Held: (1) the exception of "any legacy or other property acquired at one & the same time not exceeding in amount or value the sum of £200" applied to a reversionary interest belonging to the wife at the date of the settlement; (2) in ascertaining for the purpose of the exception the value of reversionary interests acquired at one & the same time from different sources (a) the value of these interests ought not to be aggregated & (b) the value of each interest must be ascertained as at the date when it vested in possession.—*Re HUGHES' SETTLEMENT, HUGHES v. (b) Ascertainment of Value.

632. What must be regarded—Beneficial receipt of covenantor—Not amount of gift.—(1) A legacy of £500, which by payment of duty at 10 per cent. has been reduced to £450, is not within a covenant to settle any after-acquired property of the value of £500 or upwards.

The legatee in each case has to suffer a deduction of duty at the rate of 10 per cent., so that each of these sums becomes, as far as her beneficial receipt of it is concerned, £450 only, & is therefore not caught by the covenant (BUCKLEY, J.).

(2) A legacy out of general estate given by a codicil to a will, & a legacy given by another codicil to the same will out of the proceeds of sale of real estate which has not yet been sold, are acquired at one & the same time, namely, the death of testatrix, & from one & the same source, namely, testatrix. They must therefore be added together & treated as one sum for the purpose of a covenant to settle any property to which a married woman should become entitled "at one & the same time and from one & the same source."—*Re PARES, Re SCOTT CHAD, SCOTT CHAD v. By the marriage settlements of H. & W., two ladies who were each absolutely entitled to a share of the proceeds of the sale of certain real property subject to a life estate, each of the husbands & wives covenanted jointly & separately that if at any time during the coverture they or either of them should become entitled to any property, it should be conveyed to the trustees of the settlement upon the trusts thereof. H. & her husband survived, & W. & her husband predeceased the tenant for life.—Held: the share of H. was bound, & the share of W. was not bound, by the covenant.

(2) "The property to be acquired is to be" of the value of £100 or upwards. 637. — Endowment policy—Value of policy at time when effected.]—A marriage settlement contained a covenant to settle all real & personal property, if any, not thereinbefore settled to which the wife after the intended marriage or at any time during her then intended coverture should be or become entitled, either in possession, reversion, remainder, or otherwise, except jewels, etc., & except also any legacy or other property acquired at one & the same time not exceeding in amount or value the sum of £200. The husband three years after the marriage effected an endowment policy for £500 on his own life. He paid the premiums & died in 1909, & his wife received the money. There was one son surviving:—Held: the value of the policy must be ascertained at the time it was effected, when it was not worth £200, & the policy moneys were not caught by the covenant.—*Re HARCOURT, WHITE v. 643. Share of personal estate including chattels—Chattels included in aggregate.]—In a post-nuptial settlement A. covenanted to bring into settlement any property coming to him under an intestacy, except chattels of the kinds mentioned. A. subsequently became entitled as one of the next of kin of an intestate to a share in the intestate's personal estate, which included chattels of the kinds excepted from the covenant. In the course of administration of the estate these chattels were sold:—Held: the interest of A. in the intestate's estate, so far as the estate consisted of such chattels, was not an interest in each of the chattels specifically, & therefore the interest of A. in such chattels, or in the proceeds of sale thereof, did not fall within the exception of the covenant, but, together with A.'s interest in the rest of the estate, was subject to the covenant.—VANNECK v. BENHAM, [1917] 1 Ch. 60; 86 L. J. Ch. 7; 115 L. T. 588.

(b) Property Otherwise Settled.

644. On what property binding—Property subsequently bequeathed to wife for her separate use.]—

(1) A covenant by the husband alone to settle the after-acquired property of the wife does not bind her separate property, but such a covenant of the husband & wife does. Such a covenant to settle does not bind property over which a wife is deprived of the power of disposition.

(2) Covenant by husband & wife to settle all after-acquired property, "not being already settled for her separate use":—Held: not to bind property subsequently bequeathed to the wife for her separate use.—*COVENTRY v. 646. ————.] — A marriage settlement, in which the wife's property was vested in trustees for her separate use, without power of anticipation, contained a covenant by the husband & wife that if at any time during the joint lives of them any further portion, fortune, or estate should come to or devolve upon either of them by or under any will, or otherwise, they would effectually settle the same, except such future portion, fortune, or estate as should be otherwise settled previously to the same devolving as aforesaid, upon the trusts of the settlement:—Held: a gift of a legacy to the wife for her own sole & separate use, free from the debts, control, & engagements of her husband, was excluded from the operation of the covenant.—KANE v. KANE (1880), 16 Ch. D. 207; 50 L. J. Ch. 72; 43 L. T. 667; 29 W. R. 212.

647. ————.] — A marriage settlement made in Jan. 1877, contained a covenant by the husband & wife that all property not thereinbefore settled to which the wife or the husband in her right then was, or should during the intended coverture become, beneficially entitled, except jewels, trinkets, etc., & except also any property which might be settled by the instrument under which it was derived, should be assured & transferred to or otherwise vested in the trustees upon certain trusts. Under an appointment made by an indenture, dated July 30, 1883, the wife had become entitled to a sum of £10,000 which by such indenture, was declared should be for her sole & separate use, & should not be subject to any trust or agreement for settlement contained in any settlement executed upon or in contemplation of her marriage:—Held: the £10,000 was settled by the instrument under which it was derived, & was not within the covenant.—*Re BERLNS' SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, BERENS v. 653. — — —.]—By a marriage settlement in 1859 real estate was settled for the benefit of S. & her husband W. for their lives & then for the children of S. as she should by deed or will appoint, & in default, to them in equal shares, & if no such child then for such persons as S. should by deed or will appoint, & in default for S., her heirs & assigns. & in the settlement was a covenant by W. that after-acquired property of S. should be conveyed to the trustees to be held by them upon the trusts of the settlement. W. & S. married & had four children, one only of whom was now living. W. died in 1891. By her will made in that year S. "in pursuance of all powers & authorities in anywise enabling me thereto" directed, limited, & appointed her residuary estate as to a moiety for her son M. & his wife & children, & as to the other moiety to persons not objects of the special power. She died in 1898. During her coverture she had become entitled to certain real & personal estate which was never conveyed to the trustees of the settlement:—Held: (1) the after-acquired property was not bound by the covenant in the settlement; (2) there was not sufficient evidence to show an intention on the part of testatrix to exercise her special power of appointment in favour of her son M.—Re RICKMAN, STOKES v. RICKMAN (1899), 80 L. T. 518.

654. — Property subject to directions inconsistent with settlement.]—A. by his marriage settlement, covenanted, that if his intended wife, or he in her right, should, during coverture, become entitled to any property, he would, unless otherwise expressly directed by the deed or will under which she should become entitled, convey the same on the trusts of the settlement:—Held: the covenant did not extend to property left to the wife's separate use.—THORNTON v. BRIGHT (1836), 2 My. & Cr. 230; 6 L. J. Ch. 121; 40 E. R. 628, L. C.

The wife as well as the husband executed this settlement, & during the coverture property was given to the wife for her separate use:—Held: the operative words were sufficiently ambiguous to enable the ct. to look at the recitals, & on the whole instrument the wife's after-acquired separate property was bound by the covenant.—*Re DE ROS' TRUST, HARDWICKE v. Wife a party to & executing deed.]—By an ante-nuptial agreement, signed by the intended husband & wife & the parents of the wife, the parents agreed to appoint a share of certain real estate, which was subject to their life interest & to the appointment of them & the survivor of them, to the wife, & the husband agreed that "he would settle" his wife's reversionary share of the said real estate upon the usual trusts for the husband & wife, & their children. The wife's father having survived her mother, released the power & granted the estate after his death, giving his said daughter a share. The wife predeceased the husband & left two children. The property being still reversionary, an action was brought by the husband & one of the children against the other child, the wife's heir-at-law, for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: the agreement bound the wife as having assented to her father's stipulation, & also her heir-at-law, & specific performance ordered accordingly.—*LEE v. 675. — —.]—(1) A deed of settlement to which the wife, the husband & trustees were parties, executed before marriage, contained the following clause : It is hereby declared & agreed by & between the parties hereto, & the husband, does hereby for himself, his heirs, exors. & administrators, covenant, promise, & agree to & with the trustees, their exors. & administrators that if the wife, or the husband in right of the wife shall, at or upon the marriage, or at any time thereafter, become interested in or entitled to any sum or sums of money, or real or personal estate, etc., which already has or have been, or shall or may at any time or times hereafter be given or bequeathed, or which shall descend to the wife, that then same shall be & remain, etc., upon the same trusts, etc., as are hereinbefore mentioned, etc., of & concerning the trust-moneys, stocks & premiums hereinbefore assigned. The husband died, & after his death certain property in which his wife, during his life, had a reversionary interest, fell into possession :—Held : the covenant was binding on the husband alone.

(2) Clause in a marriage settlement relative to the settlement of the wife's after-acquired property :—Held : upon the construction of the language, not to comprise, as against the wife surviving, either property coming to the wife after her husband's death, or property in which a reversionary interest vested in her during the coverture, but which did not vest in possession until after the husband's death.—*REID v. C. at the date of the marriage was entitled to a vested reversionary interest in certain personal property under her father's marriage settlement, subject to her mother's life interest therein. W. died in 1872. The mother died in 1883:—Held: the covenant to settle property to which C. was entitled at the date of the marriage, or might afterwards become entitled to, was not merely the covenant of the husband, but the words of the covenant applied to both husband & wife, & C.'s vested reversionary interest was bound by the settlement.—Re D'ESTAMPES' SETTLEMENT, *D'ESTAMPES v. SUB-SECT. 7.—OPERATION OF COVENANTS.

682. Whether operating as conversion—No immediate trust—Without request of husband & wife.]—A settlement contained the usual covenant by the husband & wife to assign after acquired property of the wife to trustees, with a proviso that it should be lawful for the trustees at the request of the husband & wife during their joint lives & of the survivor during his or her life, & afterwards at the discretion of the trustees, to sell & dispose of such property & invest the proceeds upon the trusts of the settlement. The wife afterwards became entitled to leaseholds & specific personal chattels:—Held: the trustees were not for the present to convert these things without the request in writing of the husband & wife.—HOPE v. HOPE (1855), 1 Jur. N. S. 770; 3 W. R. 617.

683. ———.]—Application of rule in Howe v. Dartmouth.—(1) The rule in Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth, No. 2090, post, does not apply in the case of a settlement by deed, & apparently only applies where there is a disposition by will of residuary personal estate given as one fund to be enjoyed by several persons in succession.

(2) The covenant to settle after-acquired property is a contract which has to be performed in strict accordance with its terms (COZENS-HARDY, J.).—Re VAN STRAUBENZEE, BOUSTEAD v. COOPER, [1901] 2 Ch. 779; 70 L. J. Ch. 825; 85 L. T. 541; 17 T. L. R. 755; 45 Sol. Jo. 738.

684. Whether operating as trust—Post-nuptial settlement.]—A covenant by a settlor to transfer, convey, & assure property, if any, which he might thereafter acquire, if of a certain value, does not amount either to an imperfect declaration of trust, or to an incomplete assignment of the property, if any, which afterwards came to be acquired, upon which this ct. will operate.

W., by a post-nuptial settlement, in consideration of natural love & affection, & for divers other good causes & considerations, covenanted to transfer, & convey, & assure all property to which he might thereafter become entitled “at any time or times, by gift, descent, succession, or otherwise, from or through his mother,” if of a certain amount in value at any one time, to trustees upon the trusts of that settlement. At the date of the settlement he was entitled to certain interests in remainder, subject to his mother's life interest. Afterwards he became entitled in reversion to another fund, subject to a life interest given to his mother; & lastly, his mother died, leaving him property by will:—Held: none of all these funds were in equity affected by the trusts of the settlement by virtue of the covenant.

Qu.: whether any & which of such funds are comprised in the covenant at all?—WILKINSON v. WILKINSON (1857), 4 Jur. N. S. 47.

685. ———.]—A covenant to settle after-acquired property upon certain trusts binds such property in equity immediately it becomes receivable into the settlement funds, & even though it is not in fact added to such settlement funds it is nevertheless trust property, & if it can be traced into the possession of a mere volunteer the trustees of the settlement can claim it from such volunteer or his legal personal representatives.—*PULLAN v. became bkpt., & after his order of discharge brought other chattels upon the premises. The creditor did not prove for his debt in the bkpty.:—Held: the assignment of the after-acquired chattels, although absolute in form, amounted merely to a contract to assign for the breach of which the assignor incurred a liability provable in his bkpty., & from which he was released by the order of discharge; consequently the goods brought on the premises after the order of discharge could not be seized by the creditor under his bill of sale. Qu.: whether the same rule applies to a

He paid off one sum of £5,000, & died intestate:—Held: the husband was not a purchaser under the settlement, & the covenant in the settlement could not be taken to have been for indemnity only; but, so far as the wife & younger children were concerned, the husband had adopted the portions as his own debt, & he had also made them his debt as between his real & personal representatives.—BARHAM v. D. Next of Kin.

715. Whether within the consideration — Ultimate trust for next of kin—Right to enforce.]—Among the trusts of a settlement, the subject of the settlement being property limited to the separate use of the wife, it was provided that the trustees should effect a policy of assurance to the amount of £3,000 on the life of the wife, & annually pay the premium out of the trust money during the life of the wife, & stand possessed of the assurance in trust after the decease of the wife to invest the £3,000 when received, & pay the interest to the husband for his life, if he should survive the wife, & after the decease of the husband to pay the £3,000 to such person or persons as the wife should by will, notwithstanding her coverture, appoint; & in default of such appointment, to the persons entitled under Statute of Distributions.

There were no children of the marriage, & the wife, having survived her husband, & being unwilling to continue the payment of the annual premium, joined with the surviving trustee of the settlement in making a voluntary assignment of the policy to her cousin, who paid the annual premium during his life, & by his will appointed G. his exor. & residuary legatee. G. continued to pay the premium, & on the death of the assured, received the value of the policy. On a bill filed by the next of kin of the wife against G. & against the exor. & residuary legatee of the wife:—Held: the assignment was valid, & G. was entitled to the value of the property.—*GODSAL v. 716. — — — —.]—In a marriage settlement, the intended wife being an infant, the husband covenanted that one-half of the wife's personal & of the proceeds of her real property when sold, should be settled upon trust for himself for life, then for her for her life, & then, in default of issue, upon trust for her next of kin. The property was duly vested in the trustees. The husband died, & there was no issue of the marriage:—Held: the trust for the next of kin was not binding against the wife, & she had absolute power to deal with the trust funds.—GRIBBS v. GRADY (1871), 41 L. J. Ch. 163; 20 W. R. 257.

717. — — — —.]—By a marriage settlement made in the name of a lady, then an infant, it was agreed that the intended husband & infant, & all other necessary parties would, as soon as the case would admit, assign unto the trustees of the settlement certain personal estate to which the infant became, under her father's will, entitled upon her marriage, upon trust for investment, with the consent of the husband & wife, & to pay the income to the wife for her separate use, & on her death to her husband for life, or until bkpey. or alienation, & in trust for the issue of the marriage, & in default of issue becoming absolutely entitled in trust for such person or persons as the wife should by deed, with or without power of revocation & new appointment, or by will appoint, & in default of such appointment, if the wife should survive the husband, for the wife absolutely, but if he should survive her, in trust for the persons who, under Statute of Distributions, should be her next of kin. The infant by a deed poll exercised the power of appointment by appointing the property, subject to the trusts in the settlement in favour of herself, husband & issue, to the husband absolutely, reserving to herself a power of revocation & new appointment. The wife died an infant without issue. Her interest in the fund agreed to be settled was at the date of the settlement, & at her death still remained reversionary, & no further settlement was made by the husband. The husband went into liquidation, & pltf. was appointed his trustee, & brought an action claiming the settled property against the next of kin, who also claimed it:—Held: the next of kin were volunteers, & could not, as against pltf., obtain specific performance of the covenant to settle the fund.—*Re D'ANGIBAU, ANDREWS v. 718. — — — —.]—Re PLUMPTRE'S MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT, UNDERHILL v. PLUMPTRE, No. 470, ante.

719. — — — —.]—A marriage settlement made in 1887 contained a covenant to settle the wife's after-acquired property upon the trusts of the wife's funds, which were in the usual form, & an agreement by the husband to settle any sums to which he became entitled under the will of his father. By a deed of gift in 1904 certain interests in reversion belonging to the husband were assured by him absolutely to his wife. The husband was also entitled to a one-third share in two sums of £9,000 & £4,700 appointed to him by the will of his father in exercise of a special power of appointment contained in a deed of family arrangement come to in 1889. The share of the £9,000 fell into possession in 1891 on the death of his father, & was paid to him, unknown to the trustees of his marriage settlement, & spent. The interests given by the husband to the wife & his share of the £1,700 came into possession in 1916 on the death of the husband's mother, & were now outstanding in the trustees of his parents' settlement & of the deed of family arrangement respectively. The husband died in 1907, & there was no issue of the marriage. Subject to his widow's life interest in both funds, the ultimate residue of the wife's fund was held in trust for her statutory next of kin, & the husband's fund was held in trust for him absolutely. The widow was also tenant for life under her husband's will.

Upon a summons by the trustees of the marriage settlement to have it determined whether these interests & funds were caught by the provisions of the settlement, & if so, whether they should take proceedings to enforce them:—Held: (1) they were caught by the covenant of the wife & the agreement by the husband respectively; but (2) the trustees ought not to take steps to recover any of them. In the case of the wife's fund her next of kin were volunteers, who could neither maintain an action to enforce the covenant, nor

725. ——— Trust in default of issue—Party to settlement claiming specific performance—Settlement executed in toto.] — In a marriage settlement, which comprised only the property of the wife, it was agreed between the intended husband & wife, & each of them covenanted with the trustees, that any property to which the wife might become entitled during the coverture, should be conveyed to such uses as she should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment, to the use of herself for life, remainder to the use of the husband for his life, remainder to the use of the wife's children, & in default of such children, to the use of A. B., her niece, & her heirs. After the death of the wife without children, & without having exercised her power of appointment, the husband filed a bill against her heir-at-law, praying that a real estate, to which she had become entitled during her lifetime, might be conveyed to the uses of the settlement. On the question whether the decree for specific performance should be confined to the life estate of the husband, or should extend to the limitation to the niece, who was also dead:—Held: it should extend to the latter, on the ground that the right of the husband to a specific performance of part of the covenant drew with it the right to a specific performance of the whole, at least as against the heir of the settlor, whatever it might have done as against a purchaser for value.

This covenant was entered into for a valuable consideration, namely, the marriage between the parties (LORD COTTENHAM, C.).—DAVENPORT v. BISHOPP (1846), 1 Ph. 698; 9 L. T. O. S. 33; 41 E. R. 798.

I. Brother.] — A father's voluntary settlement upon his children, otherwise unprovided for by him, may, when neither creditor, purchaser, nor any other having claim on the father's estate is concerned, be carried into execution by a ct. of equity, as answering the father's natural obligation to provide for his children. But this to the wife for any estate or interest whatsoever or over which she should have an absolute power of appointment. By a voluntary settlement in 1873 certain real estate was settled on the wife for life for her separate use without power of anticipation, & after her death to such uses as she should appoint. There was no issue of the marriage, & the wife survived her husband, having made her will in his lifetime, which she did not confirm after his death. The real estate was never settled upon the trusts of the marriage settlement. Upon the wife's death a claim was made by her heir-at-law to the real estate on the ground that it had become subject to the covenant to settle after-acquired property, & so subject to the trusts of the settlement, & that her will was inoperative to dispose of it as she had not confirmed it since her husband's death, & that, therefore, she died intestate:—Held: though the property was within the terms of the covenant, it had not actually become & could not be treated as subject to the trusts of the settlement in favour of the heir who was not within the consideration of the settlement, & so not entitled to enforce the covenant; therefore, the property passed under the will made in pursuance of the power of appointment in the settlement of 1873.—*Re ANSTIS, CHETWYND v. A. What Amounts to Failure.

732. Incapacity to contract valid marriage.]

—Where a widower married the sister of his deceased wife:—Held: the relation thus constituted imposed upon the widower, claiming the benefit of a settlement made on him by his wife's sister, the onus of showing that at the time of entering into the transaction she was fully, fairly & truly informed of its character & of her legal status. Such a marriage & consequent cohabitation held not a sufficient consideration to support a conveyance by the wife's sister of her property to the widower absolutely.—COULSON v. ALLISON (1860), 2 De G. F. & J. 521; 3 L. T. 763; 6 Jur. N. S. 1140; 45 E. R. 723, L. C.

After the marriage, & in consideration thereof, C. settled property upon certain trusts, reserving to herself, however, a power of appointment. Subsequently by her will C. confirmed the trusts of the settlement. On the death of C. both the will & settlement were admitted to probate:—Held: the settlement was valid.

The settlement can in no sense be considered as void & the utmost that can be said of it is that it is an instrument which might have been set aside by the lady herself or by a purchaser for valuable consideration. It is impossible to say that it is not a voluntary settlement (STUART, V.-C.).—SEALE v. LOWNDES (1868), 17 L. T. 555.

734. —[On Apr. 30, 1873, a widower executed a deed, by which, in contemplation of a marriage which “had been agreed upon & was intended shortly to be solemnised” between himself & C., he conveyed real estate to trustees in fee, to the use of himself & his assigns during his life, with remainder to the use of C. during her life, “provided she shall remain a widow & unmarried; & from & immediately after her decease or marriage, whichever event shall first happen,” to such uses as the settlor should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment, to the use of such person or persons as would be entitled thereto if the deed had not been executed. C. was in fact a sister of the settlor's deceased wife, though this was not stated in the deed. On Mar. 5, 1877, he went through the ceremony of marriage with her, & she afterwards lived with him as his wife. He died in Nov. 1891, intestate. He had not exercised the power of appointment by deed reserved to him by the settlement. During the life of his son & heir-at-law C. received the rents of the property without objection on his part. Upon a summons taken out after the son's death by the trustees of the settlement against C. & the son's heir-at-law & administratrix to determine who was entitled to the property:—Held: the trust for C. was illegal & invalid & the property was held on trust for the son's administratrix, she being, under Land Transfer Act, 1897 (c. 65), his real representative.—*PHILLIPS v. P., to pay the interest to the intended wife for life, & then for the benefit of his two children by his former wife & such children as he should have by his intended marriage; but if there should be no such child or children, then for J. P., his exors., administrators, & assigns:—Held: as no valid marriage could take place between J. P. & his deceased wife's sister, the trust in favour of himself until the solemnisation of such marriage continued, & the subsequent trusts never having arisen, the property remained in J. P., & formed part of his general estate.—PAWSON v. BROWN (1879), 13 Ch. D. 202; 49 L. J. Ch. 193; 41 L. T. 339; 44 J. P. 233; 28 W. R. 652.

The marriage ceremony was performed in Switzerland according to Swiss law, & testator having died insolvent this suit was instituted by a creditor to administer his estate, & to have the settlement declared void. The master of the Rolls so decreed, on the ground that the two considerations could not be separated, & that the intended marriage was a wholly illegal consideration. Under an order made in an action for the administration of the estate of the father his exors. were directed to pay & did pay over the £25,000, being unaware of the fact that on the previous day a decree absolute had been made in the Divorce Ct. declaring the marriage to have been & to be absolutely null & void on the ground of the impotence of the husband:—Held: inasmuch as the marriage had been declared null ab initio, it had never been "solemnised"; consequently the covenant to pay the £25,000 never became operative, & the money in question must be repaid to the exors. of testator.—*Re GARNETT, RICHARDSON v. She shortly afterwards went through the form of marriage with her deceased husband's brother, & subsequently died intestate:—Held: the words "solemnisation of marriage" could be construed only as meaning a valid marriage, & extrinsic evidence was not admissible to show that this was not the intention of the parties; & the heir-at-law was entitled to the property.—*NEALE v. of settlor.]—A ct. of equity will not, at the instance of settlor or his legal personal representative, adversely set aside a settlement by which the settlor confers on a stranger the absolute beneficial interest in property legally vested in trustees, although such settlement may have been made for an illegal consideration not appearing on the fact of the instrument.

A widower, two days before going through the ceremony of marriage with his deceased wife's sister, which ceremony was known to both parties to be invalid, executed a deed by which it was recited that he was desirous of making a settlement & provision for the lady, & had transferred certain shares into the names of trustees upon the trusts thereafter declared, being for the separate & inalienable use of the lady during her life, & after her death as she should by deed or will appoint; & they afterwards lived together as man & wife until the widower's death. SECT. 3.—SETTLEMENTS ON SEPARATION.

749. Settlement in consideration of separation—Validity as against assignee in bankruptcy of settlor.]—By a separation deed in 1864, after reciting that differences had arisen between the husband & wife, & that they had agreed to live apart, the husband assigned to trustees leaseholds upon trust to pay the rents to the wife for life for her separate use, & after her death upon trust for sale, & in the events which happened the proceeds were to be in trust for the husband, & the husband covenanted if the rents should not amount to £300 a year to make up the income to £300. There was a proviso for determination if the wife should return to cohabitation, & a covenant by the husband that the wife should live apart from him, but there was no covenant by the wife or trustees either for payment of debts or otherwise. The husband became bkpt. in 1868, & obtained his discharge in the same year, but, as the law then stood, the discharge did not release him from his obligations under the covenant. On the death of the wife in 1899, a large sum was due from the husband's estate under the covenant to make up the income to £300:—Held: the deed, having regard to the recital, was not voluntary, & the trustees were entitled, as against the assignee in bkpcy. of the husband, to retain the trust property until the arrears due under the covenant were satisfied.

750. Distinguished from settlement for valuable consideration.]—There are no doubt various circumstances which may be connected with a voluntary deed which will induce this ct. either to set the deed aside, or to refuse to execute the trusts contained in it. There are also statutory enactments which may defeat a voluntary deed which would be otherwise valid; but assuming a voluntary deed to be complete, bonâ fide, valid, & to be unaffected by any statutory disability I know of no distinction between such a deed & one executed for valuable consideration. The estates & limitations created in such a deed have the same operation & effect as in a deed executed for value, & must be construed in the same manner, & it carries with it all the same incidents & rights attached to the property conveyed as are carried by a deed executed for value, & the grantee, in this respect, stands exactly in the same situation as if he had paid value for the property conveyed (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*DICKINSON v. 764. — Settlement in consideration of mortgage—Deeds not referring to one another.—A. being indebted to pltf. but not insolvent, applied to his mother for a loan of £190. She consented to advance the money on condition that A. would settle a certain freehold estate on his children. Two deeds were accordingly executed; by one of which A. mortgaged certain other estates to his mother to secure the repayment of £400; & by the other he settled the first-mentioned estate on himself for life, & after his death on his children & their issue. Neither deed contained any reference to the other. A. afterwards became insolvent:—Held: the settlement was made for valuable consideration, & was within the proviso contained in 13 Eliz. c. 5, s. 6; & it was not material whether the whole of the £400 secured by the mtg. was actually due from A.—THOMPSON v. WEBSTER (1859), 4 De G. & J. 600; 28 L. J. Ch. 700; 33 L. T. O. S. 340; 5 Jur. N. S. 921; 7 W. R. 648; 45 E. R. 233, L. JJ.; affd. (1861), 4 L. T. 750, H. L.

765. — Settlement securing separate provision for wife during coverture—Effect of subsequent bankruptcy of husband.—A post-nuptial settlement, in so far as it secured a separate provision for the wife during coverture:—Held: to have been voluntary & gratuitous, & to have been revoked & superseded by the husband's subsequent bkcy.—DUNLOP v. JOHNSTON (1867), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 109, H. L.

766. — Part of money settled provided by wife's brother—Part by husband.—A settlor's brother-in-law provided a sum of £4,000, upon the understanding that the settlor would settle it, & also a sum of £990 Madras stock, the property of the settlor, upon the wife of the settlor for life, for her separate use, & after her death upon the settlor for life, or until bkcy. or alienation, & then upon the children of the marriage. A settlement to the above effect was executed in July, 1862, & in the following Oct. the wife of the settlor died.

In 1866 the settlor executed a bond which operated as a determination of his interest under the settlement. In 1867 he became a bkpt., & in 1868 he died:—Held: notwithstanding that the £990 stock was the property of the settlor, regard being had to the much larger sum which was brought into settlement, the settlement was valid.—HAMMONDS v. BARRETT (1869), 21 L. T. 321; 17 W. R. 1078.

767. What stipulations may be inserted—Provision against attachment for debt.—The legitim of the wife is the property of her husband & subject to his debts. A provision without consideration in a post-nuptial contract that the income of the legitim "should be alimentary & in nowise attachable for debt":—Held: insufficient to exclude the claim of the husband's creditors, he having become bkpt.

A stipulation of this kind in a post-nuptial contract is neither valid nor permissible (LORD CAIRNS, C.)—LEARMOUTH v. MILLER (1875), L. R. 2 Sc. & Div. 438, H. L.

769. — — — — —]—The ct., in order to give effect to voluntary settlements, requires, where the settlor is the legal owner, everything to have been done which is requisite to transfer the legal ownership; & where he is the equitable owner, clear & distinct evidence of a declaration of trust in favour of the donee.—*BENTLEY v. 770. — — — — —]—In order to render a voluntary settlement valid & effectual, the settlor must do everything which, according to the nature of the property comprised in the settlement, is necessary to transfer the property, & render the settlement binding upon him; as by actually transferring the property to the persons for whom he intends to provide, or to trustees for the purposes of the settlement, or by declaring that he himself holds the property in trust for those purposes; & if the property be personal the trust may be declared either by writing or by parol; but there is no equity in this ct. to protect an imperfect gift. If, however, the gift is intended to take effect by transfer, the ct. will not hold the intended transfer to operate as a declaration of trust.

T., by deed poll, dated Mar. 6, 1862, purported to transfer fifty shares in the L. Bank to a trustee for E. At that time the trustee held a general power of attorney from T. for the transfer of the stock of any incorporated co. standing in his name. T. afterwards gave the trustee a special power of attorney to receive the dividends on the shares in the L. Bank, but no actual or other transfer of the fifty shares was ever made. The trustee, however, received the dividends on the shares under the second power, & paid them to E. sometimes directly, & sometimes through the intervention of T.:—Held: the gift of the fifty shares was imperfect, & under the circumstances T. could not himself be considered a trustee of them.—*MILROY v. 774. Settlement of equitable interest.]—A voluntary assignment by deed of the assignor's interest in a sum of stock standing in the names of trustees upon trust for him is a complete transfer of such interest as between the donee & the representatives of the donor although no notice of the deed was given to the trustees in the donor's lifetime because no further act on the part of the donor was requisite to complete the gift. In such a case the donee could compel the trustees to transfer the stock to him without making the donor or his representatives parties to the suit.—DONALDSON v. DONALDSON (1854), Kay, 711; 23 L. 775. ——— Reversionary interest.]—T., who was contingently entitled to a prospective share in certain property, voluntarily assigned it, in 1880, to trustees upon trust, among other trusts, to pay a sum of £500 to one K., & as to the residue upon other trusts. T. became entitled to her share in the property in 1894, & by a letter, in 1895, directed that a portion of it should be transferred to the trustees of the voluntary assignment of 1880. K. died in 1888, intestate, & the question now arose as to his £500, which was claimed by his personal representative, by those entitled to residue, & by the settlor as upon a resulting trust:—Held: (1) a person dead at the date of the execution of a deed could take no benefit under it, & the confirmation of the deed by the letter in 1895, only set up such trusts as were then subsisting, & had no retrospective effect; (2) the failure of the gift to K. did not make it fall into residue, & the donees of the residue could only take an aliquot portion; & (3) the £500 belonged to T., the settlor, by way of resulting trust.—*Re TILT, LAMPET v. By a settlement made in contemplation of the daughter's marriage, the daughter assigned her interest under the will to trustees, upon trust for the issue of the intended marriage, & for a niece of the daughter & the issue of the niece. The daughter's husband died soon after the marriage, of which there was no issue. The mother was not a party to the settlement, but had notice of it before the husband's death:—Held: even if the settlement was voluntary as regarded the trusts in favour of the niece, it was a complete alienation, so as to be capable of enforcement at the instance of the trustees of the settlement against the daughter, & the trustees of another settlement which she made upon a second marriage inconsistent with the former settlement; qu.: whether the first settlement was voluntary as regarded the trust for the niece.—*KEKEWICH v. 780. — Legal estate subsequently acquired.—But not transferred to trustees.]—A. by a voluntary settlement assigned land, held by him under an agreement for a building lease to trustees upon trust for himself for life with remainder for his children & grandchildren. Shortly afterwards A. obtained a lease of the land but he did not assign the legal estate to the trustees. There was no evidence that A. could have obtained the lease at the time when he executed the settlement:—Held: the settlement was complete, & the cestuis que trustent were entitled to have it enforced against a person in possession of the legal estate, who derived his title through A.'s will.—*GILBERT v. The mtgee. afterwards sold the estates under the power of sale in the mtgee., & after retainer of his debt & costs paid the balance of the sale moneys into ct. under Trustees Relief Act. Upon a petition for payment out A. contended that the sale had destroyed the voluntary settlement, & that the persons claiming thereunder had no equity against the sale moneys, which must be treated as if the sale had been made by A. himself:—Held: the voluntary settlement was a complete disposition by the settlor of the proceeds of the sale of the estate in case the prior mtgee. should exercise his power, & the volunteers under the settlement were entitled as against the settlor to the fund in ct.—Re WALHAMPTON ESTATE (1884), 28 Ch. 784. —]—Under the provisions of Cos. Act, 1845 (c. 16), a deed of transfer of shares or stock does not pass the legal interests to the transferee until it has been delivered to the secretary of the coy. If he returns it because it does not comply with the requisitions of the Act it is to be considered as not delivered to him. Trustees who held railway stock in trust for H. absolutely, executed a deed of transfer to him, & delivered it to the secretary of the co. who returned it because it was not properly stamped & dated. After this H. made a voluntary settlement purporting to include this stock. Several years afterwards the defects in the deed of transfer were supplied & it was delivered to the secretary, who received it & registered the stock in H.'s name:—Held: at the time of the execution of the voluntary settlement the stock was not legally vested in H., but that he was only equitable owner; the voluntary settlement of it therefore was effectual & H.'s representative was bound to transfer the stock to the trustees of the voluntary settlement.—*NANNEY v. wife M., for such uses & upon such trusts as M. should by will appoint. By her will, executed the same day, M. appointed the £20,000 to the same trustees, upon trust, after paying thereout certain legacies, to pay the residue to such persons & for such purposes as she should by deed poll direct; & by a deed poll, also executed the same day, M. directed the same trustees to pay the trust fund to certain other trustees to be applied to certain charitable purposes. A. did not pay the £20,000 during his lifetime, & died in 1877, his wife having predeceased him. In an action to administer A.'s estate, which hardly amounted to £20,000 in all, & the greater part of which was invested in an equitable mtge. of leaseholds:—Held: as the £20,000 was a debt due by A. to the trustees, the payment of which could have been enforced during his lifetime, it was enforceable against his estate, whether consisting of pure or impure personality.—*Re ROBSON, EMLEY v. 789. Conveyance of freehold to trustees.]—A father having, by a voluntary settlement, conveyed certain freehold & covenanted to surrender certain copyhold estates to trustees in trust for the benefit of his daughters, afterwards devised part of the same estates to his widow, who, after his death, was admitted to some of the copyholds. A suit having been instituted by the daughters to have the trusts of the settlement carried into effect, & to compel the widow to surrender the copyholds to which she had been admitted, a decree was made for carrying into effect the trusts as far as they related to the freeholds, pltf.'s title to them being complete; but as to the copyholds, the bill was dismissed, with costs.—*JEFFERYS v. 792. Assignment of stock & money—Property not transferred.]—A settlor, by a voluntary settlement, assigned a sum of Consols standing in his name, & also his money at his banker's, to trustees, upon trust for himself for life, & upon trust after his decease to settle the same, so that his three reputed daughters should receive the income for their lives without anticipation, with trusts over.

The stock remained untransferred, & the £8,000 continued at his banker's, in the settlor's name, until his decease twelve days afterwards:—Held: the trusts of the voluntary settlement were effectually fastened upon both the Consols & money.—AIREY v. HALL (1856), 3 Sm. & G. 315; 27 L. T. O. S. 196; 2 Jur. N. S. 658; 4 W. R. 587; 65 E. R. 675.

793. Approval of draft declaration of trust—Where property transferred.]—Upon evidence that a married woman desiring to execute a voluntary settlement transferred stock, to which she was entitled for her separate use, into the names of trustees, & approved of a draft declaration of trust:

—Held: there was a locus penitentiae, & the trusts did not attach, unless the draft had been finally authorised before the transfer to the trustees; & an inquiry to that effect being answered in the negative, the fund ordered, on the petition of the married woman, to be retransferred for her separate use.—Re SYKES'S TRUSTS (1862), 2 John. & H. 415; 6 L. 794. Deposit of promissory notes & deeds.]—Testator deposited certain promissory notes in the hands of a trustee as a provision for his illegitimate children, & at the same time deposited certain deeds as security to meet the notes:—Held: the deposit of the deeds amounted to a trust to provide for the payment of the notes, & the settlement was good.—*ARTHUR v. 795. Assurance not communicated to trustee—Until after death of settlor.]—A settlement whereby lands are assured to a trustee to the use of the settlor for life, & afterwards in trust for volunteers, & which is not communicated to the trustee until after the settlor's death is valid, notwithstanding the disclaimer of the trustee.—*JONES v. 796. Assignment of property by letters—Policies of life insurance—No notice given to insurance offices.]—K., who in 1850 made a settlement for the benefit of himself, wife, & children of the marriage being a widower in 1863 with four children about to contract a second marriage, wrote to one of the two trustees of the settlement, a letter in which he said he was desirous of making a settlement upon his four children of six policies of assurance on his own life, the particulars of which he gave. Three of the policies were handed to the trustee but the other three were deposited with the office as a collateral security & were to be subject thereto; but he undertook to pay off the amount claimed so as to leave the policies free for the children. The trusts & provisions of the settlement were to be similar to those of the settlement of 1850 & he undertook to execute to the trustee written to & another trustee to be named an assignment of the six policies to contain covenants to keep up the policies & to pay the mtge. debt, & until the settlement should be executed he was to be bound by the agreement in the same manner as if the settlement were actually executed. In a letter written to the same trustee two days later inclosing the former letter K. said, "The inclosed is the formal letter of assignment previous to a deed, & as binding." No notice of the letters was ever given to the offices no formal settlement of the policies was ever executed & no notice was ever given to the other trustee of the settlement. The trustee written to died in 1871; & the settlement of 1850, the two letters, & the three policies were returned to K. who by his will in 1875 gave the residue of his property to trustees for the benefit of all his eleven children:—Held: what was done by K. was sufficient to make a complete assignment of the six policies for the benefit of his four children.—*Re KING, SEWELL v. 797. Settlements of debts—Payments in lifetime of settlor.]—P. executed a voluntary settlement, by which he assigned certain personal property, including four debts which were due to him on the security of bills of sale, to trustees, with power to sue for the debts, upon trust to sell & convert into money the trust premises & execute & do such assurances & things as should be expedient & to apply the proceeds for the benefit of his wife & other relatives. But he made no express assignment of the securities for the debts, nor did he give them up to the trustees. The settlor afterwards received payment of these four debts & died intestate. In an action for the administration of the estate & of the trusts of the settlement:—Held: the debts were completely assigned by the voluntary settlement & the trustees were entitled to prove as creditors against the estate of intestate in respect of the debts received by him.—Qu.: whether the trustees might have sued the intestate at law for the amount received by him.—Re PATRICK, *BILLS v. 798. Effect of disclaimer by trustee.]—By an indenture of voluntary settlement of 1866 M. declared that W. should stand possessed of certain hereditaments & effects of the settlor's upon certain trusts therein declared. There was the usual covenant for further assurance but no power of revocation. On Mar. 9, 1867, W. disclaimed the trusts of this settlement by deed poll, & on Apr. 5, 1867, M. executed a deed poll purporting to put an end to the settlement. In 1888, M. mortgaged part of the hereditaments comprised in the settlement, & in 1899 a transfer of this mtge. was executed in favour of the trustees & exors. of M.

This was a claim by pltf., to whom the only son of the settlor, who became absolutely entitled under the settlement of 1866, had bequeathed all his real & personal property absolutely, to be entitled to so much of the proceeds of the settlor's estate as represented the property comprised in the settlement of 1866; & also to have the settlor's assets marshalled & the mtge. discharged out of the unsettled property:—Held: the trusts of the settlement still subsisted & had revested in the settlor on the trustee's disclaimer.—MALLOTT v. WILSON, [1903] 2 Ch. 494; 72 L. J. Ch. 664; 89 L. T. 522.

799. Covenant to pay off incumbrances on property settled—On payment of money owing—Settlor not trustee of money received.]—By a voluntary settlement various properties were settled upon trust for such persons as the settlor should by writing direct & subject thereto upon certain trusts, a power being reserved to the settlor to revoke by deed the trusts wholly or partially & to declare new trusts. The settlor covenanted that on certain moneys owing to him being paid he would with such moneys pay off two mtges. to which certain of the property settled was subject. The settlor, having received the moneys owing to him, paid off one of the mtges., & instead of paying off the other mtge., invested the balance of the moneys so received in the purchase of three reversionary interests. The solr. to the trustees of the settlement having called his attention to the fact that he had only partially fulfilled his covenant, the settlor arranged with him, acting on behalf of the trustees, that, in lieu of paying off the other mtge., he should bring into settlement the three reversionary interests, & accordingly on Dec. 1, 1904, the settlor wrote a letter to the trustees directing them to hold the settled property subject to the mtge. he had not paid off in accordance with his covenant, & in lieu of the same being paid off, undertook to assign to them the three reversionary interests to be held by them on the trusts of the settlement. The settlor died in 1905 without having assigned to the trustees the three reversionary interests. After his death the mtge. subject to which one of the reversionary interests was purchased was paid off by the trustees, & in the reassignment to them of this interest by the mtge. it was recited that the equity of redemption was vested in the trustees. The reassignment was executed with the knowledge of the exors. of the will of the settlor, who allowed the trustees at all times to deal with the three reversionary interests as part of the settled property:—Held: the effect of the settlement was not to make the settlor a trustee of the moneys owing to him when received for the trustees of the settlement.—CARTER v. HUNGERFORD, [1917] 1 Ch. 260; 86 L. J. Ch. 162; 115 L. T. 857.

800. Spes successions.]—L., having an expectation of succeeding by will or under intestacy to property belonging absolutely to her brother & sister respectively, executed a voluntary settlement, purporting to assign to trustees all the real & personal estate to which in the event of their respective deaths she might become entitled by will or under intestacy. On the death of the brother intestate & a bachelor, L., as heiress-at-law & sole next of kin obtained letters of administration to the estate:—Held: the trustees of the settlement could not compel her to hand over the property to them.—Re ELLENBOROUGH, TOWRY LAW v. BURNE, [1903] 1 Ch. 697; 72 L. J. Ch. 218; 87 L. T. 714; 51 W. R. 315; 47 Sol. Jo. 255.

The husband never, in fact, paid the £4,000 to the trustees:—Held: nevertheless, they were specialty creditors of the husband.—TANNER v. BYNE (1827), 1 Sim. 160; 5 L. J. O. S. Ch. 125; 57 E. 816. — Omission making instrument unintelligible—Amount left blank.]—In a settlement, made between persons severally entitled to interests under a will, A. B., the settlor, who took a life interest under the settlement, covenanted that if he became entitled to any property exceeding in value the sum of —, he would assign the same to the trustees. A. B. afterwards became entitled to a reversionary interest, & filed a bill to have the settlement rectified, or that it might be declared that the covenant was void. One of the Vice Chancellors dismissed the bill, without costs:—Held: (1) this decision was correct, as the ct. would not make a declaration of right beforehand; (2) the covenant could not be considered insensible, as it must apply to capital, & not income.—*FYFE v. 817. — No written instructions for settlement.]—No written instructions were given for the preparation of a marriage settlement, & it was afterwards sought to rectify an alleged error in it. Upon the evidence of the husband, & the solr. who had prepared it, as to the intention of the parties to it, & the trustees of the settlement not opposing, it was, on a bill filed by the sole child, an infant, of the marriage, & his father, as next friend:—Held: the rectification might be made.—TOMLINSON v. LEIGH (1865), 13 L. T. 516; 11 Jur. N. S. 962; 14 W. R. 121.

818. — Clear intention to pass fee simple—Omission of word “heirs.”]—By a marriage settlement the wife's interest in real estate was granted & assigned to trustees, their exors., administrators, & assigns, upon the usual trusts in a settlement, with the omission of the word “heirs” in every case in which the fee simple was evidently intended to be passed:—Held: the deed must be rectified by the insertion of the word “heirs,” in order to effect the intention of the parties.—Re Bird's Trusts (1876), 3 Ch. Although it be true the ct. will not interfere on either side in voluntary transactions, yet when it makes out that the deed cannot stand as a deed of gift, & that, therefore, the result would be that there would be simply in the hands of deft. a sum of money which pltf. was entitled to, the ct. in order to avoid circuity of action, will, on putting an end to & cancelling a deed, instead of requiring pltf. to bring an action at law for payment of the money direct deft. to pay the money to pltf. Settlor's attention not drawn to omission of usual clause.]—(1) The trusts of a marriage settlement of property of the wife were such that upon the death of the husband in her lifetime, without leaving issue of the marriage, she had a mere life interest in the property, the subsequent trusts being in favour of her nephews & neices, & being irrevocable. She had no power to control the investment of the property or the appointment of trustees:—Held: as it appeared that the position she was in had not been fully explained to her before she executed the settlement, she was entitled to a decree for rectification, & as the marriage consideration had failed & did not support any of the existing trusts, the existing trusts must be declared void as in the case of a purely voluntary deed.

A joint power of revocation appeared in the draft as originally prepared by counsel, but had been struck out. The father & son had each a wife & a large family, & each declared that had he been aware of the effect of the deed he would not have executed it:—Held: under the circumstances the deed must be rectified by adding a power of revocation, & with pltf.'s consent it was directed that a new settlement with all proper powers, should be made under the direction of the ct.—*WELMAN v. 840. ———. Onus of proof on husband.—Rectification of a marriage settlement decreed at the instance of the wife after the death of the husband upon her uncorroborated parol testimony. Upon the marriage of a widow with a retired solr., who had formerly acted as her solr., the whole of her property, amounting to more than £20,000, was vested in trustees upon trust to pay the income, to the wife for her life, & after her death to the husband for his life; & as to the capital, upon trust, after the death of the wife, to pay one moiety thereof to the husband, his exors., administrators, or assigns, & to hold the other moiety upon such trusts as the wife should by deed or will appoint. By another deed, executed contemporaneously, the husband, in exercise of a power given to him by the will of his father, charged some estates of which he was tenant for life, with remainder to his issue in tail male, with the payment of an annuity of £100 to the wife for her life. The settlement was prepared by the husband himself the night before the marriage, & was brought by him to the wife for execution on the morning of the marriage day. She had no independent professional advice. After the husband's death she brought an action for the rectification of the settlement by omitting the trust of a moiety of the capital for the husband. The trustees & one of the next of kin of the husband were made defts. Pltf. deposed that her husband had told her that he wished every farthing of her property to be settled upon her, & that she said she was willing to allow him a life interest; that he said he would employ counsel; that the settlement did not carry out her intentions, & that she did not know what its provisions were until after the husband's death:—Held: (1) it was the duty of the husband to have explained to the wife in the most unmistakable terms, & with due opportunity for deliberation, the provision in his favour, & as the settlement on the face of it was not such as the ct. would have sanctioned in the absence of agreement, the burden of proof was on the representatives of the husband, & pltf. was entitled to the rectification which she claimed; (2) the fact that pltf. claimed to retain the benefit of the settlement made on her by the husband was no bar to the rectification; (3) it was not necessary that the other next of kin should be made parties to the action, but the drawing up of the judgment must be suspended for fourteen days, & notice of the judgment must be served on those of the next of kin who were not parties.—*LOVESY v. SUB-SECT. 5.—OMISSION OF USUAL PROVISIONS.

850. Power of appointment—Omission discovered by wife after husband's death.]—By a settlement made previously to the marriage of a lady, certain hereditaments to which she was entitled in fee were conveyed to trustees, their heirs & assigns, upon trust to sell & to stand possessed of the moneys arising from such sale, upon trust to invest same, & pay the dividends, interest & annual produce to the intended husband for his life, & after his death to the separate use of the intended wife for life, & after the decease of the survivor the trust funds were to be in trust for all, & such one or more exclusively of the others or other of the children of the intended marriage as the intended wife should appoint; & in default of appointment to & in trust for all or any of the children or child of the then intended marriage, who, being a son or sons, should attain twenty-one, or being a daughter or daughters, should attain that age or marry under that age; & if more than one in equal shares. The marriage took place, & the husband died, leaving one child only, an infant son. The widow, contemplating a second marriage, for the first time discovered that, contrary to her intentions as established by the evidence, she had no power under the settlement of appointing among the children of a second or any subsequent marriage. Upon her filing a bill for the rectification of the settlement, the ct. made a declaration & ordered the deed to be altered by inserting words which should include in the power of appointment the children of the lady by her then intended or any subsequent marriage.—NAYLOR v. WRIGHT (1857), 30 L. T. O. S. 126; 3 Jur. N. S. 1090; 5 W. R. 221, 770.

851. ———.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1850, the property of the intended wife was settled in trust, as to £600, as the wife should by deed appoint & subject thereto, as to the whole property, in trust for the wife for life, & after her decease as she should by will appoint, & in default of appointment in trust for her children by any marriage, & if there should be no children of the then intended marriage & the husband should predecease the wife, then in trust as to two-thirds for such persons as, under the Statutes of Distribution, would have become entitled thereto at the death of the wife if she had died possessed thereof intestate & without having been married. There were no children of the marriage, & in 1879, after the death of the husband, the wife, not having married again, brought an action claiming the rectification of the settlement. The only evidence was an affidavit of the wife that it had not been her intention to limit & she had not for some time discovered that she had by the settlement limited her disposing power in the event of her surviving her husband:—Held: the settlement ought to be rectified by inserting a power of appointment by deed as well as by will.—*EDWARDS v. No power of appointment among children was covenanted to be reserved either to the wife, or the husband, or to both jointly. In an action brought by the wife to establish her equity to a settlement, & asking the ct. to declare that a settlement in pursuance of the covenant was a proper settlement for that purpose:—Held: the settlement should be amended by giving an exclusive power of appointment by deed or will among the children to the wife.—*OLIVER v. to the husband, remainder to the issue of the marriage, & in default of issue the trustees were directed to invest the trust money in land, to be held on similar trusts as were subsisting in respect of the family estate of the wife's family under the family settlement. There was no issue of the marriage, & the wife now claimed to have the settlement rectified, on the ground that her attention had not been called to the fact that under the settlement she had no power of disposing of the property in the event of there being no issue of the marriage:—Held: the settlement must be rectified by inserting a general testamentary power of appointment by the wife during coverture, & a general power of appointment by deed or will on discovery, in priority to the ultimate trusts.—CORDEAUX v. FULLERTON (1879), 41 L. T. 651; 28 W. R. 320.

855. —[—]—Rectification was claimed of a settlement, whereby pltf., shortly after he attained twenty-one, settled certain reversionary property belonging to him on trusts for himself for life, then for his wife & issue, & in default of issue for his paternal next of kin. It was proved that pltf. was at the time of the execution of the deed of extravagant habits; that he expressed a desire to preserve his property in the family; & that the settlement was, before execution, read over & its provisions carefully explained to him, & that he fully understood & assented to them. The trustees of the settlement were made defts. to the action for rectification:—Held: (1) there was no fraud or undue influence exercised upon pltf.; but, inasmuch as there was an omission to explain to him that the settlement did not contain a usual power, viz., to appoint as he wished in case of failure of issue, it must be rectified by the insertion of such a power before the limitation to the next of kin; (2) as the trustees of the settlement had in all respects acted properly, & were bound to come before the ct. to uphold the settlement, they were entitled to a charge on the funds settled for their costs.—JAMES v. COUCHMAN (1885), 29 Ch. D. 212; 54 L. J. Ch. 838; 52 L. T. 344; 33 W. R. 452; 1 T. L. R. 305.

856. Absolute interest to wife—On death of husband—No issue of marriage.—Previously to a ward of ct. attaining her majority proposals of marriage were made, & the draft of settlement was submitted to the master for his sanction. The master objected to the terms proposed, & the parties consequently postponed the marriage till the ward attained twenty-one, when a settlement was executed, & the marriage took place. This was in the year 1811. After the marriage a petition was presented to the ct. for its sanction to the settlement, & an order was made accordingly, but it was taken by consent, & the wife was not separately examined. A bill was now filed, praying that the settlement might be reformed, on the ground that an absolute interest in the property ought to have been given to the wife in the events which had happened:—Held: the power of the ct. over the property of the ward did not cease upon her attaining twenty-one; & the settlement, under the circumstances of this case, ought to be altered so as to give an absolute interest to the wife, who had survived her husband without having children.—MONEY v. MONEY (1855), 3 Drew. 256; 3 Eq. Rep. 996; 24 L. J. Ch. 684; 25 L. T. O. S. 294; 3 W. R. 425; 61 E. R. 901.

857. —[—]—A marriage settlement, dated in 1823, reformed in 1857, & after the death of the husband, upon proof of the written instructions, so as to give the property to the wife absolutely in the event of her surviving her husband & there being no issue, which events had happened.—WOLTERBEEK v. BARROW (1857), 23 Beav. 423; 29 L. T. O. S. 119; 3 Jur. N. S. 804; 53 E. R. 167.

858. —[—]—By a marriage settlement executed in pursuance of arts. made under the order of the ct. on the marriage of a lady, an infant & a ward of ct., personality of the wife was limited on death of the husband & in default of children, both of which events happened, to the wife, as she should by will appoint, & in default to her next of kin. Upon her uncontradicted evidence that this was not in accordance with her intention:—Held: she was entitled to have the settlement rectified by limiting the property, in the events which had happened, to herself, her exors., & administrators absolutely; & declaration to that effect ordered to be indorsed on the settlement.—SMITH v. ILIFFE (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 666; 44 L. J. Ch. 755; 33 L. T. 200; 23 W. R. 851.

859. —[—]—By a marriage settlement personality of the wife was settled on trust for herself for life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation, & after her death, as she should by will or codicil notwithstanding coverture appoint, & in default of appointment on trust for the statutory next of kin then living. The husband died in the wife's lifetime. On her uncontradicted evidence that the settlement was not in accordance with the intentions of the parties:—Held: she was entitled to have it rectified, so that in the events which had happened the trust funds might be held in trust for herself absolutely.—COOK v. FEARN (1878), 48 L. J. Ch. 63; 39 L. T. 348; 27 W. R. 212.

860. —[—]—By a post-nuptial settlement, real estate belonging to the wife was conveyed unto A. & his heirs "to the use of" A., his exors. & administrators, during the life of the wife, "upon trust" to pay the rents & profits to her for her separate use: & from & after her decease, in case of the death of her husband in her lifetime, "to the use of the heirs & assigns" of the wife for ever; but in case of the wife predeceasing the husband, then to the use of the husband, his heirs, & assigns for ever. The wife having survived her husband, she brought an action against A.'s legal personal representative to have the settlement rectified, on the ground that by a technical mistake in the form of the settlement her equitable life estate & the legal estate in remainder did not coalesce within the rule in Shelley's Case (1581), 1 Co. Rep. 93, so as to give her, as was intended in the events that had happened, an absolute estate in fee. Pltf.'s case was supported by an affidavit by herself alone:—Held: the settlement be rectified so as to vest the legal estate in fee simple to pltf.—HANLEY v. PEARSON (1879), 13 Ch. D. 545; 41 L. T. 673.

sons successively in tail male, with remainder to trustees for one thousand five hundred years, in trust in the event of failure of male issue of pltf., to raise a sum of £100,000 for additional portions for the pltf.'s daughters.

In contemplation of the marriage of a son of pltf.'s only son, pltf. & his son entered into an agreement for resettlement, whereby it was agreed that pltf.'s son should disentail the reversion & limit the estates after pltf.'s decease, & subject to his life interest & powers, & to the exercise thereof, & all "subsisting" charges to such uses as pltf. & his son should appoint, & that pltf. & his son should then appoint the lands, in remainder & subject as aforesaid, to the use of pltf.'s son for life, with remainder to pltf.'s first & other sons successively in tail male, with remainder to a nephew of pltf. & certain other nephews successively for their lives, with remainders to their first & other sons successively in tail, with remainders over. A deed of resettlement was made in pursuance of this agreement, & thereby the lands were appointed, after pltf.'s death & subject to his life estate, & to the powers thereto annexed, & of the jointure & any other charges upon the estates to which pltf. might be entitled, to the use of pltf.'s son for life, with remainder to his first & other sons successively in tail male, with remainder to pltf.'s nephews successively, & remainder over. Pltf. & his solr. deposed that neither of them intended by the agreement or settlement to displace the term of one thousand five hundred years or the portions of £100,000 thereby secured, except so far as was necessary for the benefit of pltf.'s son & his issue, but it did not appear that any discussion took place on the subject, or that it was mentioned:—Held: not a case for reforming the resettlement.—ELWES v. ELWES (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 667; 4 L. T. 593; 7 Jur. N. S. 747; 9 W. R. 820; 45 E. R. 1036, L. J.J.

864. Life interest to husband—No instruction given by husband for insertion of provision.]—A husband, who was about to enter into partnership as a stockbroker, by a voluntary settlement settled certain property upon his wife for life, with remainder to his children. No life interest was reserved to the settlor. On the death of his wife many years afterwards the husband alleged that he first discovered the omission to give a life interest to himself, & he brought an action to have the settlement rectified to this extent, as being contrary to his intention. He did not allege that he had given express instructions to the solr. who drew the settlement to have such a provision inserted:—Held: the husband had not made out a case for rectification.—*RAKE v. perty on the female descendants then in existence of C. D., by deed reciting this desire & that certain persons therein named were the only descendants then in life of C. D., settled a part of the property on the persons so named, & reserved to himself a power of appointing the remaining part of the property amongst such several persons before named, which, in default of appointment, was given to those several persons named; he afterwards discovered that there were other descendants in existence of C. D., who had been omitted, & to remedy the omission, he appointed a part of the fund to an object of the power, upon his executing bonds for the payment to the persons newly discovered, of the amount when received:—Held: the appointment was void, & the ct. would not, in a suit to have the rights of the parties to the appointed fund declared, determine whether the case was such as to entitle the parties to have the settlement reformed according to the intention of the settlor.—LEE v. FERNIE (1839), 1 Beav. 483; 48 E. R. 1027.

873. Variation by subsequent settlement—Extent of revocation of former settlement.]—Leaseholds were settled by A. on his son B. absolutely, & a rentcharge & stock for his life, with remainder to his children, A. having reserved to himself power to make a deed poll, made one, revoking the trusts, etc., of the settlement, so far as they affected B., & declared, that all the estates, etc., & benefit given by the settlement to B. should remain to the use of trustees, their heirs, etc., in trust during the joint lives of B. & his wife C., to pay the income to C. for her sole & separate use, & the support of her children by B.; & if B. should die in the lifetime of C., in trust to pay the same to her during her widowhood, for the support of herself & children, with a limitation over in favour of such children, in case of her death or second marriage. C. & several children of the marriage survived B.:—Held: the trusts of the second deed were a substitution of those in the first in favour of B., & C. took an estate for life, or during widowhood, in the leaseholds, rentcharge, & stock, the deed poll not being considered merely as a revocation of the life estate of A.—ANGELL v. DAWSON (1839), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 308; 8 L. J. Ex. Eq. 50.

874. Jurisdiction to vary—Dissolution of marriage—No issue of marriage—Effect of enactment of Matrimonial Causes Act, 1878 (c. 19).]—An ante-nuptial settlement having been executed a decree nisi was afterwards obtained for dissolution of the marriage of the parties, & before the decree was made absolute the above Act was passed, allowing the ct., notwithstanding that there are no children of the marriage, to exercise the powers vested in it by Matrimonial Causes Act, 1859 (c. 61), s. 5:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to vary the settlement though there was no issue of the marriage.—ANSDELL v. ANSDELL (1880), 5 P. D. 138; 49 L. J. P. 57; 28 W. R. 832.

Therefore, where a decree of nullity had been pronounced by a colonial ct., & the parties afterwards returned to this country & applied for leave to file a petition here for the variation of their marriage settlement:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction to entertain such application.—*MOORE v. SUB-SECT. 1.—VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENTS.

884. Whether revocable.]—A single woman, not immediately contemplating marriage, transfers a sum of stock, to which she was absolutely entitled, to trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends to her until she should marry; & after her marriage, upon trust to pay the dividends to her separate use for her life; & after her decease to pay the same to her husband for his life, or until his bkpcy., & after his decease or bkpcy., in trust for the children of the settlor; & if no child, for such person or persons as she should by deed or will appoint: & in default of appointment, upon trust for her next of kin. The settlement is irrevocable. In a bill filed by the settlor for the purpose of setting aside the settlement, the mtgee. of her interest under the settlement joined as a co-pltf. 890. — — — — —.]—S. B., a solr., made three settlements. Two of them contained a power of revocation, & the third was a declaration of trust by S. B. of certain leaseholds belonging to him in right of his wife, & of which he had renewed the lease in his own name. S. B. destroyed each of the settlements containing a power of revocation, & although there was no evidence to show that the declaration of trust had been destroyed, it could not be found at the death of S. B. It was kept in a box with other papers at S. B.'s bankers; but search for it was made by the exors. of S. B. & others without finding it. Among the papers belonging to S. B. was found his private ledger, which contained entries referring to the declaration of trust. The entries stated in effect that S. B. had settled the leaseholds in question on his wife & himself during their joint lives, with remainder to the survivor for life, & after the death of the survivor, as the wife should appoint, among the children, & in default of appointment among the children, & also that the wife had died without appointing, & consequently all the children would take the property in equal shares. There were five children, two sons & three daughters.

By his will S. B. gave legacies of £8,000 to each of his daughters, payable five years after his death, & interest in the meantime to be paid on each legacy at the rate of 3 per cent. half-yearly; & after giving & devising all his real & leasehold estates to his elder son, & bequeathing the residue of his personal estate between his two sons as therein mentioned, testator revoked, set aside, & avoided all other wills, settlements, & agreements for settlements which he had at any time theretofore made & executed.

The questions were, whether the declaration of trust contained a power of revocation, & if so, whether testator had by his will exercised that power so as to revoke the declaration of trust; & if the ct. should be of opinion that the declaration of trust did not contain a power of revocation, then whether the will did not show an intention on testator's part to revoke the declaration of trust, & thereby cause a case of election to be raised against the younger children; & also, what rate of interest was payable on the daughters' legacies:—Held: the declaration of trust as to the leaseholds was not destroyed by testator, but it had been lost & did not contain a power of revocation.—Re BOOKER, BOOKER v. BOOKER (1886), 54 L. T. 239; 34 W. R. 346.

891. — — — — — Intention to reserve power of revocation.]—A. made an irrevocable voluntary settlement of his estate in favour, amongst others, of a relative who acted as his solr. The ct. considered that A. intended to reserve a power of revocation, but that the deed was in other respects unobjectionable. A. made his will, prepared by the same solr., making a general devise, but not revoking the settlement. The ct. then held that it was the duty of the solr., when he prepared the will, specifically to have asked testator whether he intended to revoke the deed, & not having done so, & it appearing to have been the intention of testator that the estate should pass to his devisees, the ct. decided, that although the deed would have been operative if A. had died intestate, yet that in the events which had happened, & as against all persons claiming under the settlement, the estate was subject to the trusts of the general

Settlement by wife in anticipation of marriage—Ante-nuptial revocation deed by husband & wife.—Upon a marriage contemplated between A. & B., the lady's fortune vested in C. her former guardian, was, on Mar. 14, after treaty & agreement with C., vested in trustees for the lady, "her exors. & administrators & assigns" until the marriage, & afterwards for her, her husband & children. On Mar. 27, & before the marriage, the husband & wife, without the intervention of C., revoked the settlement, & married the next day. A bill by the husband, claiming the fund unaffected by the trusts of the settlement, was dismissed with costs, the ct. holding that a revocation, under such circumstances, could not be maintained.—*PAGE v. 900. — Marriage not celebrated.—A feme sole, in contemplation of a marriage with T., vested personal property in trustees, upon trust for the sole benefit of herself, her exors., etc., until her marriage, if any, with subsequent trusts for her issue. She never married T., but before her marriage with M. the trustees handed over to her a part of the fund:—Held: the settlement was irrevocable; she had no power of absolute disposition until marriage; the trusts were to arise on any marriage; & the trustees had committed a breach of trust for which they were answerable.—M'DONNELL v. HESILRIGE (1852), 16 Beav. 346; 22 L. J. Ch. 342; 20 L. T. O. S. 164; 16 Jur. 1148; 1 W. R. 71; 51 E. R. 812.

Power was reserved to the spouses, with mutual advice & consent to revoke or alter the mutual disposition & settlement:—Held: upon a consideration of the terms of the deed, & especially having regard to the clause above quoted, the settlement was revocable by the survivor of the spouses so far as his own estate was concerned.—*MAIN v. 906. — Power to revoke by settlement of lands of equal or greater value—Settlement of lands of less value.]—In 1714, B. conveys lands at C. to himself for life, remainder to S. for life, remainder to his first & other sons, subject to a power of revocation by B. if he settled lands in Yorkshire of as great or greater value to the same uses: by his will he devises the lands at C. to pltf. for her life; & by subsequent deeds, for the purpose of revoking the uses as to the lands at C., conveys lands in Yorkshire, but which are of less value than the lands at C., to the uses of the deed of 1714. R., who was the eldest son of S., having refused to take the estate in Yorkshire, being of less value than the estate at C.:—Held: the power of revocation was not well executed by B. & S. was entitled to the estate at C., but he was a trustee of the estate in Yorkshire not for pltf., the devisee of the C. estate, who was a volunteer, but for the heir-at-law of B.—BURGOYNE v. 908. Power to revoke by deed or will with consent of trustees—Whether consent necessary to will.]—Under a voluntary settlement made in 1881, a fund was settled upon trust for testatrix for life with remainder in the events which happened, in trust for other persons therein named. The settlement reserved a power for testatrix with the consent of the trustees of the settlement by deed or will expressly referring to the power to revoke the trusts of the settlement, & to declare other trusts thereof for her own benefit. By deeds in 1906 & 1909 testatrix, with the consent of the trustees exercised her power of revoking the trusts as to two sums, parts of the settled fund, & appointed those sums in her own favour. She died in 1918, having made a will in 1914 without the consent of the trustees by which she gave, devised, bequeathed, & appointed all her residuary estate, both real & personal, to trustees upon trust for sale & conversion & declared trusts of the proceeds thereof. She had no other power of appointment:—Held: on the true construction of the settlement the consent of the trustees was not required for the exercise of an appointment by will; the words of the will were sufficient to effectuate the double process of revocation & new appointment; they contained a sufficient express reference to the power within the language of the settlement & the remaining balance of the settled fund therefore passed under the appointment contained in the will.—*Re BARKER'S SETTLEMENT, KNOCKER v. This shall not amount to a revocation in equity, but if it had been proved that a guinea had been deliberately tendered, & the party had at the same time declared, that she did it with an intent to revoke the settlement, although the deed had never been sealed; or if the deed had been sealed to revoke it, & no guinea tendered; this ct. would have supplied the defect of one particular circumstance, where it appeared that the party did deliberately & advisedly intend the thing; but what was said in a passion the ct. will not regard (per CUR.).—*ARUNDEL v. The second marriage took effect, & the estate, lying in Ireland, the husband made claims, & sued out decrees from the comrs. under the acts of settlement & explanation, for some parts of this estate, to himself & his wife, & her heirs, & for other parts of it, to himself & his wife & his heirs. The lands so limited to his heirs, the second husband, having survived his wife, devised & otherwise disposed of:—Held: R. & C., the two sons of the first marriage, were entitled under their mother's settlement to all the lands; & the parties claiming under the second husband, were accountable for the rents & profits from his death.—*CALTHORPE v. About a month afterwards, on July 13, *deft. He also, by the same deed, assigned his said share in the trust funds to pltf. by way of mtge., with a proviso for redemption to L. on repayment by him of the sum of £800 & interest:—Held: the post-nuptial settlement could not prevail against the rights of pltf. under the memorandum of June 14.—*CAREW v. C. Grounds for Avoidance.

(a) In General.

952. General rule.—Where it is sought to set aside a voluntary settlement, the absence of a power of revocation is an important circumstance to be taken into account, but there is not, & there ought not to be, any rule that the omission of such a power, or that the settlor was never advised that such a power should be inserted, can alone invalidate such a settlement. The ct. has to determine whether the settlement is the free determined act of the party executing it.

A maiden lady, advanced in life, settled real estate upon herself for life, & after her decease to the use of her nephew in fee. It was shown that the instructions were given by herself to the family solr., who at the time of its execution spent four hours in explaining it to her, though she was not shown to have been previously furnished with any copy or draft; but it was sufficiently understood by her, & was in accord with her intentions at the time. It contained no power of revocation, nor did the solr. appear ever to have consulted her upon that point. Some years afterwards she filed a bill to set it aside, alleging undue influence, intimidation, incapacity & ignorance; but upon the evidence their lordships dismissed the bill.

953. Fraud.—E., by his marriage contract, covenanted that his whole property at the time of his death should belong to the issue of the marriage. His wife died in his lifetime, leaving a daughter, an only child, who, when about twenty-one years of age, married a young man of about the same age, & in a year after a son was born of the marriage. The husband then proposed to go abroad to improve his fortune, & E., who was then a prosperous trader, persuaded him & his wife to execute a deed, in the nature of a post-nuptial contract, by which, in consideration of a sum of £315, they discharged him from all claims whatever on his property. They were at this time ignorant of the daughter’s claims under her father & mother’s marriage contract, & E., attended by his man of business, brought them the deed to sign on the night of the husband’s departure, & it was then executed. It was stated in the deed that E. had paid a moiety of the £315 at the time of the execution of the contract, & that the other moiety was to be paid after his death. But in point of fact he paid down nothing at the time of the execution, but only renounced a debt of £61 due to him from the husband for goods, & gave a promissory note for the other £90. E. lived for a considerable time after; & two days before his death, by a trust deed of settlement, conveyed the bulk of his property, amounting to £14,000, to trustees to build an hospital.

The daughter’s post-nuptial contract reduced on the ground of fraud & circumvention.—EWEN v. BANNERMAN (1830), 2 Dow. & Cl. 74; 6 E. R. 657, 11 L.

954. Absence of independent advice.—An ignorant woman, possessed of money, lent part to a man having her confidence, & afterwards executed a deed, prepared by the borrower’s solr., by which the borrower covenanted to pay interest to her for her life, & to pay part of the capital to two of his daughters, & the remainder to two of her relations. The woman soon afterwards married, & she & her husband filed a bill against the borrower to set aside the deed, on the allegation that she executed it believing it to be a mtge. on the borrower’s estate, & on the ground that the deed was a fraud on the marital right of the husband. The ct. on the ground that the two cases made by the bill were not sustained, gave pltf. leave to try an issue whether the deed was obtained by fraud; & secondly, whether, when she executed the deed, she was contracted to be married; & thirdly, whether pltf., the husband, when he married, knew of the settlement, & as the woman had not the protection of the borrower or his solr., to which she was entitled, not having the advice of her own solr., the bill was dismissed, without costs, if pltf. did not try the issue.—*GRIGGS v. desirous of conferring some benefit on C., who had acted as his confidential solr., but had so far received nothing for his services. Accordingly he executed two deeds, respectively dated May 15, 1900. By the first of these deeds some real estate & other property were settled upon trust for pltf. for life, & after his death as to part in trust for his son & daughter, & as to the remaining part in trust for C.

By the second deed certain furniture & chattels were vested in trustees for sale, & out of the proceeds thereof C. was to receive £500. The deeds were prepared in the office of C., but were at his suggestion submitted by pltf. to A., an independent solr.

Continuing to be pressed by his financial difficulties, pltf., on Mar. 14, 1901, executed a further deed supplemental to the first deed of May 15, 1900, whereby the trusts of the former deed were in effect revoked, & pltf. assigned the whole of his property of every description, present & future, to his son & C. upon trust for his son & daughter & C. in equal shares in consideration of a covenant by them to pay pltf. an annuity of £500 a year to be increased to £800 in certain events. This deed was at C.'s suggestion prepared by T., an independent solr.

At the time the several deeds were executed C. was continuing to act as pltf.'s solr. in all other matters relating to his affairs. Pltf. brought an action against C., the son & daughter, & A. & T. claiming to have the several deeds set aside with consequential relief, on the ground that he was induced to execute the same by the influence of C.:—Held: (1) no competent & independent advice was given to pltf. by the solr. A., who, although he apparently intended to do his duty, had not before him the materials to enable him to do it; therefore the onus thrown upon C. had not been discharged; & as regarded him the deeds of May 15, 1900, could not be allowed to stand, & must be set aside, although as regarded pltf.'s children the gifts thereunder must be treated as if they had been made by an independent deed & were valid; (2) as to the deed of Mar. 14, 1901, the solr., T., had not before him sufficient materials to enable him to advise pltf.; the bargain carried out by that deed was entered into at a time when C. was continuing to act as pltf.'s solr., & he was acting in concert with pltf.'s daughter; it was executed by pltf. under the influence of C. & without fully understanding what was being done, & without competent & independent advice; & consequently that deed must be set aside in toto & as against all parties.—*WRIGHT v. 958. —.]—In order to support a voluntary settlement, it must be shown that all the provisions are proper & usual; or if there are any unusual provisions, that they were brought to the notice of & understood by the settlor. No general rule can be laid down as to the proper & usual provisions in such a settlement, but a power of revocation is not essential.

A young man of improvident habits, being entitled to a sum of money, was induced by the trustee of the money, & by a solr., to execute a settlement by which he assigned a part of the money to trustees on trust to invest & to pay him during his life the income on such part thereof as they should think fit, & after his death on trust to hold the same for his wife & children, if any, & subject thereto on trust for certain cousins of his. He had no power of appointment in default of issue, & no power of revocation, & no power to appoint new trustees. The deed was explained to him, & the particular clauses were brought to his notice:—Held: the deed could not be set aside by the settlor.—PHILLIPS v. MULLINGS (1871), 7 Ch. App. 244; 41 L. J. 959. —.]—An old man of eighty-six years of age executed a conveyance of certain freeholds in consideration of natural love & affection, to his son, to the use of himself for life, with remainder to his son in fee. The deed did not contain any power of revocation, & the propriety of inserting such a power had not been suggested to the grantor. Subsequently the grantor conveyed all his property to his daughter, who by the deed of conveyance covenanted to indemnify him against a mtge. debt to which part of the property was subject.

On a bill by the daughter to set aside the prior voluntary conveyance:—Held: the deed must be set aside, as it contained no power of revocation, & as it was clear that the propriety of reserving such a power had not been suggested to the grantor; but without costs, as there was no evidence that the execution of the deed had been obtained by fraud.—MOUNTFORD v. FEREDAY (1873), 29 L. T. 46; 21 W. R. 570, L. JJ.

961. —.]—The absence of a power of revocation, & the fact that the attention of the settlor was not called to that absence, do not make a voluntary settlement invalid, they are merely circumstances to be considered in deciding on the validity of a voluntary settlement. A widow instructed a solr. to prepare a deed settling certain houses & buildings on herself for her life, & after her death for the benefit of her children. The deed, as prepared, did not exactly correspond with the instructions, but was read over to & executed by her. There was no suggestion made to her that the deed ought to contain a power of revocation. Some years afterwards she burnt it, expressed satisfaction at having got rid of it. She executed a mtge. of part of the settled property, after asking the consent of a son who was both beneficially interested & a trustee of the settlement, & made a will purporting to dispose of the whole property:—Held: under the circumstances, the deed of settlement was valid, & not affected by the want of a power of revocation or by the divergence from the instructions.—HALL v. HALL (1873), 8 Ch. App. 430; 42 L. J. Ch. 444; 28 L. T. 383; 21 W. R. 373, L. C. & L. JJ.

962. — Onus of proof.—The party taking a benefit under a voluntary settlement or gift containing no power of revocation, has thrown upon him the burden of proving that there was a distinct intention on the part of the donor to make the gift irrevocable, & where the circumstances are such that the donor ought to be advised to retain a power of revocation, it is the duty of a solr. to insist upon the insertion of such power, & the want of it will in general be fatal to the deed.—*COUTTS v. 968. Lack of understanding of settlor—Burden of proof.—A deed prepared by an attorney, & executed by his client, a young man who had applied to him to procure a loan of money, settling the property of the client so as to restrict his power of dealing with it, & appointing the attorney the trustee, recited that the trusts of the deed were created at the desire of the client, & for the purpose of placing the property under the management of the attorney. The client, by his bill to set aside the deed, denied the truth of the recitals, & insisted that the settlement was made without his knowledge or authority. The attorney, by his answer, alleged that the recitals were true, & that the deed was made & executed with the knowledge and authority of the client, & in order to prevent him from dissipating his property, but gave no evidence of such knowledge or authority:—Held: the burden of proof was upon the attorney, & the ct. set aside the deed.—MOORE v. PRANCE (1851), 9 Hare, 299; 20 L. J. Ch. 468; 18 L. T. O. S. 51; 15 Jur. 1188; 68 E. R. 517.

969. — Settlement containing unusual clauses.—PHILLIPS v. MULLINGS, No. 958, ante.

970. — Whether propriety of clauses considered.—(1) Where an action is brought by the settlor against the trustees to set aside a voluntary settlement, the ct. will not consider the propriety or impropriety of the clauses, except as evidence that the settlor did not understand what he was doing: the only question being whether the settlor understood what he was doing, & its effect on his position with regard to the property. (2) Where a settlement is set aside the trustee has no claim to his costs as a matter of right, there being no contract in existence; & therefore, if costs are given against him he has no right of appeal.—DUTTON v. THOMPSON (1883), 23 Ch. D. 278; 52 L. J. Ch. 661; 49 L. T. 109; 31 W. R. 596, C. A.

971. — As to details of settlement—Reliance on professional adviser.—Pltf. was entitled to a settled estate as tenant in tail male in remainder, subject to two preceding life interests of his aunt, the protector of the settlement, & his mother. Pltf. attained twenty-one on Dec. 10, 1878, & shortly after that date it was thought by his mother very desirable & important that some resettlement of the estate should be made. Accordingly he executed two deeds, both dated Jan. 2, 1879, to which the protector of the settlement was a party, one being the usual disentailing deed & the other a resettlement. The estate was thereby relimited to the use of pltf. for life, with remainder to uses in favour of the issue of pltf., & in default of issue, then in favour of his cousins, children of the protector of the settlement, as tenants in common, with ultimate remainder to pltf. in fee. An action was brought by pltf. claiming to have the resettlement cancelled & set aside or modified in effect. The question was whether pltf. had been made sufficiently aware of the nature & effect of the deed, & had had the proper amount of independent advice which is necessary, in order that such a resettlement, executed by a person who has just attained his majority, should be upheld. Pltf. admitted in his evidence he understood that by the deed he was giving his property to his cousins in the event of his death without issue; but he stated that he did not understand, & it was not explained to him that the deed was an irrevocable instrument, & he believed that it was something in the nature of a will, which he supposed it was his duty to execute upon attaining twenty-one. He had a short time previously executed a disentailing deed, & made a will in favour of his cousins in reference to another estate belonging to him. On the other hand, the evidence of defts. went to show that pltf. understood generally what he was executing, but that he declined an offer made by his legal adviser to have the deed read over to him, on the ground that he should not understand if it was read. It did not appear that pltf.'s attention had been specifically called in detail to the nature & effect of the several clauses of the deed:—Held: as plaintiff, had an accurate general knowledge of what he was doing, & only refused to receive a detailed explanation of the provisions of the deed because he trusted his solr. to look into those details on his behalf, he was as much bound as if he were himself a lawyer, & had drawn the deed with his own hand.—*LOVELL v. 975. —Settlement by daughter tenant in tail.]—V., having an infant daughter, who was tenant in tail in possession of certain estates, & tenant in fee in remainder in another, in which he had himself a prior life interest & having held possession of such estates as guardian in socage during her minority, procured her, on her coming of age, in 1843, to bar the entail & by the disentailing deed to give to him an immediate estate for life in two-thirds of the land of which she was tenant in tail. V. had not maintained his daughter during her minority out of his own moneys though of capacity to have done so. He never accounted to his daughter for the receipt of rents during her minority. On the other hand he had defrayed about £700 costs of litigation on her behalf. The infant came of age in Feb. 1843;

the disentailing deed giving V. a life estate was engrossed in May, 1843, & executed in June, 1843. It was wholly prepared by the confidential solr. of the father, V. In 1844 the whole circumstances were for the first time known to the daughter. Shortly after, she married pltf., to whom the circumstances were also known & proceedings to set aside the life estate so obtained by V. seem to have been then contemplated as possible. In 1845 pltf. wrote to V. upbraiding him with having so obtained the life estate & insisting that V. should pay a sum of £200 in respect of the marriage outfit of the daughter. In the same year by post-nuptial settlement, the lands in question were conveyed to trustees "subject to the life estate of V." Pltf.'s wife, V.'s daughter, died in 1850. In 1853 pltf. brought this bill to have the life estate of V. set aside:—Held: although the transaction was apparently one which could have been set aside in 1843, or even in 1844 if proceedings had been taken immediately after the marriage, yet pltf. was now precluded from relief, on the ground of laches; & the same reason applied to prevent relief in respect of the rents received by V. during his late daughter's minority.—*WRIGHT v. 984. Power of tenant for life to surrender life interest—& contingency in absolute fund—To son entitled in default of appointment.]—By a settlement made upon the intended marriage of C. G. & J. W. certain stock was transferred into the joint names of the two trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends thereof to J. W. the intended wife, during her life, for her sole & separate use, & after her decease, in trust for the said C. G. during his life, if he should survive her, & after the decease of the survivor of them, in trust to pay the principal sum of money among the child & children of the marriage in such a manner as J. W. should direct or appoint; & in default thereof, then upon trust for all & every the children of the marriage, if more than one, who should be living at the decease of the said C. G. & J. W. & the lawful issue then also living of such of the said children as should be then dead. If there should be but one child of the said intended marriage living at the decease of them, the said C. G. & J. W. & no lawful issue of any other child, then to transfer the whole of the Bank Annuities to such only child; & if there should be no children of the said intended marriage living at the decease of the survivor of them, the said C. G. & J. W. but only lawful issue of some one of the said children, then to transfer the whole to such issue at twenty-one. There was afterwards a proviso that if the said C. G. should survive the said J. W. & without leaving any child or issue of any child or children, that the whole fund should be transferred to the said C. G. absolutely. The marriage took place, & J. W., the wife, died without making any appointment, leaving C. G. & one son, the only issue of the marriage, who attained his age of twenty-one years, her surviving. C. G. being willing to give up his life interest, together with his contingency in the absolute fund, over to his son, at once, for the son's benefit, in order that the son might have the whole absolute fund in himself, application was made to the ct. for that purpose:—Held: the trusts were not exhausted, nor had C. G. & C. J. G. together power to deal with the corpus of the fund, they not having in themselves the whole title thereto, but there was a contingent interest in favour of such issue; & therefore, C. G. the tenant for life, being still living, the trustee must continue to retain the stock in his own name & pay the dividends to C. G. until his decease.—GARDNER v. SMITH (1844), 3 L. T. O. S. 238.

988. —.]—By a settlement made on the second marriage of a widow of her property, a life estate for her separate use was given to the wife, followed by an estate to the husband for his life or until his bkpcy. Provisions were then made for the children of the marriage & a son of the wife's former marriage, & it was declared that, if the son of the former marriage should die under twenty-one, & if there should be no child of the marriage who should attain twenty-one or marry under that age, then, subject & without prejudice to the trusts before declared, & after the death of the husband, & of the son of the former marriage under twenty-one, & the default or failure of children of the marriage, "which shall last happen," the trustees should hold the property, if the wife should survive the husband, in trust for her absolutely, but, if the husband should have survived the wife, in trust for such persons as the wife should by will appoint, & subject thereto, in trust for her next of kin as if she had died intestate & "without having been married." The wife died first, without having exercised the power of appointment. There were no issue of the marriage. The son of the former marriage survived his mother, but died under twenty-one. Before the wife's death the husband had filed a liquidation petition:—Held: (1) the infant son was entitled, as sole next of kin of his mother, to the trust fund; (2) the trust for the next of kin did not arise until after the death of the husband, & consequently he was entitled to the income of the trust fund for his life, & this interest had vested in the trustee under his liquidation.—

989. —.]—By a settlement made in 1893 the settlor assigned property to trustees on trust to pay to him the annual income until he was declared bkpt.; thereafter his rights were to cease, & the trustees were to have power to apply at their discretion the income or any part thereof for his personal maintenance & support, & were to apply the residue for the benefit of his children, if any, or to accumulate it & add it to the corpus, which was ultimately to go to his relatives. In 1900 the settlor was adjudicated bkpt., & the trustee in bkpcy. applied to set aside the settlement, & it was set aside so far as was necessary to pay the bkpt.'s debts provable in the bkpcy. The trustees of the settlement by consent raised a sufficient sum to pay bkpt.'s debts in full & the costs, but the bkpcy. was not annulled. In 1902 the settlor was adjudicated bkpt. for the second time, & the trustee in that bkpcy. applied again to set aside the settlement, but was refused on the ground that at the time of making the settlement bkpt. was in a position to pay his debts without the aid of the settled property. The trustee in bkpcy. then applied for a declaration that bkpt.'s life estate under the settlement vested in the trustee in bkpcy. Throughout these transactions bkpt. was unmarried:—Held: the first bkpcy. had operated under the settlement as a forfeiture of the settlor's life estate, & it did not, therefore, vest in the trustee of the second bkpcy.—*Re JOHNSON JOHNSON, Ex p. 990. Assignment or Incumbrance.]—By a marriage settlement an annuity for the life of the wife's mother was assigned to trustees, for the wife for life, remainder for the husband for life, remainder for the issue of the marriage. Provided that if the husband should, during the life of the wife or of her mother, become bkpt., compound with, or assign his effects for the benefit of his creditors, or should do any act with a view to charge the annuity, his interest should be for the benefit of the issue. The husband, after his wife's death, sold an annuity to one of the trustees of the settlement, & signed an unstamped agreement to deposit the settlement with him, & authorising him to retain the annuity so sold out of the settled annuity:—Held: the husband had forfeited his interest in the settled annuity.—STEPHENS v. JAMES (1831), 4 Sim. 499; 58 E. R. 186.

991. — Charging order.]—Under a settlement the dividends of the trust fund were payable to B. for his life, or until he should assign or incumber the same, or until he should do or suffer any act whereby the dividends should become payable to another person. A judgment creditor of B. obtained a charging order against the trust fund:—Held: under the words "shall suffer any act," a forfeiture had accrued of B.'s life interest.—ROFFEY v. BENT (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 759.

992. — [By a marriage settlement the annual income of the trust fund was given to the husband "& his assigns" for his life or until he should make, or attempt to make, any assignment of the income, or any part thereof, or to charge or incur or attempt to charge or incur, the same, or until he should be found or declared a bkpt., or should take the benefit of any Act of Parliament for the benefit of insolvent debtors, or until he should make any assignment of his effects for the benefit of his creditors. The settlement contained limitations over, & a direction that upon the husband's death, or sooner determination of his estate, payment should be made to those entitled in remainder. The husband mortgaged his life interest & judgments had been signed against him for costs incurred in certain litigation & charging orders made against his life interest in certain consolidated stock comprised in the trusts of the settlement. It was contended that the effect of the addition of the word "assigns" was that the husband's life interest was absolute, & the forfeiture clause void:—Held: the result of giving so wide a meaning to the word "assigns" would be to render nugatory the rest of the proviso, which was aimed against alienation; the charging orders were not within the clause; & it was possible to give effect to the clause against alienation & at the same time to give effect to the word "assigns," therefore the charging orders would be valid against the income up to the date of the mtge., but the mtge. operated so as to work a forfeiture of the life interest.—Re KELLY'S SETTLEMENT, WEST v. TURNER (1888), 59 L. T. 494.

993. — Contingent charge in favour of creditors.—Under a proviso against assigning or charging or attempting to assign or charge a life interest, so as not to be entitled to the personal receipt & enjoyment of the property, an agreement to charge a debt on the estate in the event of the deficiency of another estate, a power of attorney authorising the receipt of the rents & payment in discharge of debts, & an authority to a creditor to receive future rents, for which anticipated receipts were given, were each declared sufficient to determine the life interest.—*WILKINSON v. 994. — Separation deed.—By a settlement, dated in 1859, & made upon the marriage of A. & B. certain property of the husband was vested in trustees upon trust to invest the same, & to pay the interest, dividends, & annual produce thereof unto or permit the same to be received by the husband until he should be outlawed, or be found or declared a bkpt., or become an insolvent debtor within the meaning of some Act of Parliament for the relief or relating to insolvent debtors, or should do or commit any other act, or any other event should occur whereby the income or any part thereof would or might if thereby settled absolutely upon or in trust for him become alienated by law or vested in any other person or persons; & from & after the decease of the husband, or the sooner determination of the trust thereinbefore declared for his benefit, upon trust to pay the whole of such interest, dividends, & annual produce unto, or permit the same to be received by the wife & her appointees or assigns during her life for her separate use; & subject thereto upon trust for the children of the marriage as therein mentioned. A receiving order was made against the husband in 1885, but was rescinded in Feb. 1886. By a separation deed dated in Sept. 1886, & made between the husband & the wife, the husband covenanted that he would, during their joint lives, if they should so long live separate from each other, allow the wife to receive for her own benefit the interest, dividends, & annual income of the property therein mentioned, being the property brought into the marriage settlement by the husband:—Held: the covenant in the separation deed operated as an equitable assignment of the husband's life interest, & consequently a forfeiture had occurred.—Re SPEARMAN, SPEARMAN v. LOWNDES (1900), 82 L. T. 302; 44 Sol. Jo. 377, C. A.

995. — Judgment.—By a marriage settlement property was settled on the wife, for her separate use, for life, & after her decease on the husband for life, & it was provided that if the husband, either during his wife's life or afterwards, should do or permit any act whereby the income of the property might become payable to any person other than himself, then his life interest should be forfeit-d. During the marriage judgment was recovered against the husband by a creditor, & a writ of execution was issued, but no further proceedings were taken until after the wife's death, when the husband having filed a bill against the trustees of the settlement to enforce his life interest, the creditor sued out a writ of elegit, & obtained a garnishee order, which, however, the ct. of law refused to make absolute pending the proceedings in equity:—Held: there had been a forfeiture of the husband's interest, & his bill must be dismissed.—STOCKWELL v. YEATES (1868), 19 L. T. 328; 17 W. R. 22.

996. — [A marriage settlement of the settlor's own property was made on trust to pay the income to himself "during his life or till he shall become bkpt. or shall assign, charge or incur the income or shall do or suffer something whereby the same or some part thereof would through his act, default, or by operation or process of law, if belonging absolutely to him, become vested in or payable to some other person or persons," & from & after the determination of the trust in favour of the settlor upon trust to pay the income to his wife during her life:—Held: the limitation over to the wife was valid in the event of an involuntary alienation by process of law of the income in favour of a judgment creditor of the husband.—*Re DETMOLD, DETMOLD v. 999. — By convict in anticipation of conviction.—B., by a voluntary settlement, limited real & personal property to trustees upon certain trusts therein mentioned, & subject thereto, to pay an annuity of £150 to his wife for her life, & another annuity of £200 to his daughter for life, for her separate use, & subject to these trusts, to apply all or any part of the income towards the maintenance & education of his daughter's six children, & accumulate the surplus income until the death of the survivor of his wife & daughter, & until the youngest child should attain twenty-one, & when the youngest child attained twenty-one, if his wife & daughter should be then dead, or if living, then immediately after the death of the survivor, to convey the property to the six children, or such of them as should be then living, as joint tenants, if more than one, & not as tenants in common. He also declared that if any of the children should alienate his or her share it should be forfeited & belong to the others. Four of the children lived to attain twenty-one, & one of the sons having committed felony, assigned his share of the trust premises to his two brothers & his sister. He was afterwards convicted, & transported for life, but on the expiration of some years received a conditional pardon. B.'s daughter being dead, her children agreed, with the consent of the widow, to divide the annuity of £200, reserving a fourth part for their brother, the convict; they at the same time executed deeds severing the joint tenancy, & settling their respective shares. The widow having died, a suit was instituted to administer the trusts of the voluntary settlement:—Held: the assignment by the convict was a forfeiture to his brothers & sister, & even if this alienation had not taken place the Crown could not have claimed his interest, as it was not vested until after the conditional pardon had been granted him.—*BARNETT v. 1000. — Direction to trustees to pay to third person.—Under a settlement, O. was entitled to a life interest in an annuity, with a clause of forfeiture if he should enter into a composition with his creditors, or charge, assign, or in any manner by way of anticipation dispose of the annuity, or until anything should happen whereby it should vest or become liable to be vested in another person. O., being indebted to his bankers to a large amount, in pursuance of an agreement with them, gave the trustees a written authority to pay the annuity, as it should become due, to his bankers, who were to apply it partly in payment of interest & in reduction of the debt. It was alleged that there was an agreement with the bankers that the authority should be revocable:—Held: this occasioned a forfeiture of the life interest.—OLDHAM v. OLDHAM (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 404; 36 L. J. Ch. 205; 15 W. R. 300.

1001. — Authority to attorney to receive moneys.—S. was entitled for life to the income bequeathed by a will which provided that if he should commit or suffer any act or default or process whatsoever which but for that proviso would have the effect of resting the right to receive the interest in any person whomsoever the life interest of S. should cease & be void & the income be paid as on his death. S. being about to go to South Africa executed a general power of attorney to his solr. W., who was a trustee of testator's will, & on W.'s going abroad & retiring from the trusteeship in 1906 executed a power of attorney appointing his then solr. K. in his name & on his behalf to recover & receive all sums of money in respect of the interest under the will:—Held: the power of attorney being a mere authority to receive the income of S.'s interest under the will & apply it for his benefit & not a colourable transaction giving his creditors an equitable charge it did not constitute a forfeiture within the meaning of the will.—Re SWANNELL, MORICE v. SWANNELL (1909), 101 L. T. 76.

1002. — Divorce Court order.—In 1887, F., on his marriage settled the proceeds of property as to the income upon himself for life determinable on his bkpcy. or until he suffered any act or thing or any event happened whereby, if payable to him absolutely, he would be deprived of the right to receive the income or any part thereof. By an order in 1895 after the dissolution of F.'s marriage, the President of the Probate Div. ordered that the trustees should set apart the whole of the income of the settled funds which was then payable by him, & apply it for the children of the marriage until majority. F. became bkpt. in 1904, & his youngest child attained twenty-one in 1910:—Held: the order of the Probate Div. was an act or event antecedent to his bkpcy. by which F.'s interest in the whole income was determined for a substantial period, & therefore a forfeiture took place at the time the order was made & nothing passed to the trustee in his bkpcy.—Re CAREW'S TRUSTS, GELLIBRAND v. 1003. — Post-nuptial settlement by beneficiary & husband—Settlement inoperative against beneficiary.—Testator by his will gave the residue of his estate to trustees, on trust to pay an annuity of £50 to his widow in case she should marry again, which she did, during her life, & subject thereto to pay the income to his two sisters, in equal shares, during their lives, & to pay the whole to the survivor during the remainder of her life, & after her death to divide the fund equally between testator's nephews & nieces, to be paid to them at twenty-one, the share or shares of any of them dying under that age leaving issue to go to such issue, & the share or shares of any of them dying under that age without leaving issue, or leaving issue in case such issue should all die under twenty-one, to go to testator's surviving nephews & nieces, & to the issue, if any, of such of them as should be then dead, such issue to represent their respective parents, & to take equally amongst them, if more than one, & if but one, such one only, the same share as his, her, or their deceased parent would have taken if he or she had then been living & had been a surviving nephew or niece; & testator declared that if any of his nephews or nieces should, during the lives of his two sisters or the survivor of them, assign his or her expectant share, or any portion thereof, or should attempt so to do, then he or she so assigning his or her expectant share, or any portion thereof, or attempting so to do, should forfeit all benefit under testator's will; & the assignment, so far as it should purport to affect any part of the trust moneys, should be null & void, & the share of the person so assigning, or attempting so to do, should go, as if he or she had never been born, to the other nephews or nieces. The survivor of testator's two sisters died in 1890. In 1876 one of testator's nieces, who had attained twenty-one, married in Australia a domiciled Australian. No settlement was made on her marriage; but in 1879 she & her husband executed a post-nuptial settlement, which purported to assign (inter alia), her reversionary interest under the will of testator to trustees upon certain trusts. By the law of Australia this assignment was inoperative except to the extent of the husband's interest, if any, in the wife's reversionary share:—Held: (1) the forfeiture clause was valid notwithstanding that the reversionary interest were originally vested but liable to be divested; (2) although the settlement was inoperative as regarded the wife, it was, within the meaning of the clause, an attempt to assign her reversionary share, & the forfeiture had taken effect.—*Re PORTER, COULSON v. 1004. — Settlement by beneficiary on marriage.—L. was entitled under a voluntary settlement to a life interest in one-fourth part of certain funds, with remainder to his children who should attain twenty-one, or die under that age leaving issue with remainder over. The settlement contained a proviso for the determination of his life interest, & the acceleration of the subsequent remainders, if he should alien, dispose of, mortgage charge, or in anywise incumber his life interest, or if by reason of his bkpcy., insolvency, or otherwise the income of the funds could be no longer personally enjoyed by him, but would, but for that proviso, become vested in, or payable to any person or persons other than him.

By a subsequent settlement made on his marriage, L., amongst other property, assigned to trustees the share to which he was entitled under the former settlement, upon trust to continue the trust funds in their then present investments, or upon the written request of L., & after his death upon such request, or at such discretion as therein mentioned, to sell the same, & pay the income of the proceeds to L. during his life, & after his death, to his wife during her life, with remainder for the issue of the marriage as L. & his wife jointly, or the survivor should appoint, & in default for all the children of the marriage in equal shares, sons at twenty-one, daughters at twenty-one or marriage, & in default of such issue for L. absolutely.

The question arose whether the marriage settlement produced a forfeiture of L.'s life interest under the voluntary settlement:—Held: no such forfeiture was produced, for the assignment contemplated by the forfeiture clause was one by reason of which the income of L.'s share would become payable to some person other than him, whereas by the marriage settlement the life interest was assigned to trustees for his benefit.—LOCKWOOD v. SIKES (1884), 51 L. T. 562.

1005. ——A person entitled to a life interest, determinable if he should dispose or attempt to dispose of it, assigned it to the trustees of his marriage settlement upon trusts under which he was to receive the income for life. By the settlement he appointed the trustees his attorneys to receive the income, & gave them power to pay the expenses of managing the trusts:—Held: this was not a disposition or attempted disposition of his life interest so as to cause it to be forfeited.—Re TANCRED'S SETTLEMENT, SOMERVILLE v. TANCRED, Re SELBY, CHURCH v. TANCRED, [1903] 1 Ch. 715; 72 L. J. Ch. 324; 88 L. T. 164; 51 W. R. 510; 47 Sol. Jo. 319.

1006. — Existing incumbrance.—A settlement contained a trust for payment of the income of the trust fund to A. for life "or until he shall assign, charge or incumber, or affect to assign, charge or incumber" the same:—Held: under the circumstances this trust had not a retrospective operation so as to include past acts.—WEST v. WILLIAMS, [1899] 1 Ch. 132; 68 L. J. Ch. 127; 79 L. T. 575; 47 W. R. 308, C. A.

1007. — Inoperative assignment.—A life interest was liable to forfeiture if "some event shall have happened or shall happen whereby if the same income belonged absolutely to" the life tenant "she would be deprived of the personal enjoyment thereof or of any part thereof." The life tenant made an equitable assignment of part of her life interest, but this subsequently became inoperative before any money came to her trustees as part of her life interest:—Held: no forfeiture had been incurred of the life interest.—Re MAIR, WILLIAMSON v. FRENCH, [1909] 2 Ch. 280; 78 L. J. Ch. 711; 101 L. T. 70.

1008. — Release of interest to effect advancement.—By a marriage settlement made in 1865 the income of the wife's fortune was settled upon trust, as to part thereof for the wife for life, & as to the other part thereof for the husband for life or until bkpcy. or alienation or his doing some act whereby the same or some part thereof would become vested in or payable to some other person. Subject to the trusts aforesaid the husband's & wife's fortunes were settled upon trust, in the events which happened, for their children in such shares " & with such provisions for their respective maintenance, education, & advancement " as the husband & wife should by deed jointly appoint, & in default of such appointment for the children equally at twenty-one or marriage. Then followed the usual advancement clause.

In 1896 the husband & wife by deed appointed one equal ninth share of the trust funds to a son on his marriage & the appointed share was settled, & in 1897 they by deed appointed another equal ninth share to another son on his marriage, & the appointed share was settled. Neither of these appointments contained an advancement clause. Subsequently the trustees of the 1865 settlement in exercise of their power of advancement raised £4000 out of their trust funds in respect of each appointed share & paid the same to each of the son's marriage settlement trustees, & the husband & wife released their respective life interests in each of the sums so advanced:—Held (1) the appointments must be read into the original settlement & the advancement clause applied to appointed as well as to unappointed shares; (2) the husband by releasing his life interest in the sums advanced did not thereby forfeit his life interest under the settlement.—Re HODGSON, WESTON v. HODGSON, [1913] 1 Ch. 34; 82 L. J. Ch. 31; 107 L. T. 607; 57 Sol. Jo. 112.

By a settlement, the husband & wife had a joint power of appointment over part of the property in favour of the children; the wife had, in one event, a general power to appoint by deed or will, & in another event, by will only, over the other part.

The ultimate remainder, in default of issue, etc., was to the wife's heir & next of kin. The deed contained a proviso of forfeiture of the husband's interest, in case he should do or "attempt" to do any act which would prevent or hinder the wife executing her powers, or prevent the property devolving on her heir, etc. The husband & wife appointed a part of the fund nominally to a child, but really for the husband's benefit, which was set aside:—Held: the husband's interest had not been thereby forfeited, & the proviso pointed to the separate power of the wife & not to the joint power of husband & wife.—WADE v. HOPKINSON (1855), 19 Beav. 613; 52 E. R. 488.

1032. ———.]—By a marriage settlement, a sum of £4,000 was to go, after the decease of the husband & the wife & the husband's father & subject to the father's power of appointment, to the children of the marriage equally; & the real estates of the wife were charged with a sum of £8,000, which was to be divided among the children, in such shares & manner as she should appoint. The wife, by her will, appointed £100 to the eldest son of the marriage, & the remaining £7,900 to the other children of the marriage, directing the shares to vest in sons on their attaining twenty-one, & in daughters on their attaining that age or marriage with their father's consent; she, likewise, created a further charge, in order that each younger child's share of the £8,000 might be augmented to £5,000; & by the same instrument she, in exercise of a power of appointment, which she had under the will of C., appointed C.'s residuary property to the first & other sons of the marriage successively, who should attain twenty-one; & if there were no such sons, to the daughters of the marriage who should attain twenty-one. Afterwards, by a codicil, she directed that the same fortune should be given to any child or children of whom she might be delivered, as was given by her will to each of her daughters, & that if no son of the marriage should live to attain twenty-one or be married, each of her daughters should be entitled to have for her fortune £10,000, to be paid in the manner and at the times mentioned in her marriage settlement or will respecting the fortunes of her daughters. The wife died in the husband's lifetime, leaving a son & three daughters her surviving; & in the events which happened, two daughters, the only surviving children of the marriage, became entitled under the settlement to the £4,000, & under their mother's appointment, to the residuary property of C.:—Held: they were entitled to receive £10,000, exclusive of, & in addition to, their shares of the £4,000, & of the residuary property of C.—WHYTE v. T., by his marriage settlement, directed that £6,000 should be raised for the younger children of that marriage if two or more, & that if he should survive his intended wife & die without being married again, or if so married, should not have any issue of any future marriage who should take an interest in the sum provided by the will for younger children, then the further sum of £2,000 should be raised for the younger children of the first marriage, if there should be two or more. Neither the will nor the settlement contained a hotchpot clause. Afterwards T. appointed to one of his daughters "the sum of £2,000 part of the sum of £8,000 made raisable by the will in the event which has happened, of there being two or more younger children." T. died in the lifetime of his wife:—Held: the appointee of £2,000 was entitled to participate in the unappointed £6,000.—WALMSLEY v. VAUGHAN (1857), 1 De G. & J. 114; 26 L. J. Ch. 503; 29 L. T. M., by a deed poll in 1844, appointed £5,000 to be raised & paid to E. at once, & £1,000 to be paid to her after his death, to the intent that the payment of her portion, under the deed of 1842, might be accelerated. 1041. Valuation—As at time of distribution.]—By the marriage settlement of Mr. & Mrs. K. stocks were assigned to trustees upon trust for Mrs. K. for life, & after her death, in the events which happened of her surviving her husband & no joint appointment by them having been made, then upon trust for such of the issue of the marriage as the survivor of them should by deed or will appoint, & in default of such appointment in trust for the children of the marriage in equal shares. The settlement contained a hotspot clause in common form. Mrs. K. on the occasion of the marriage of one of her daughters appointed that certain sums of stock forming part of the settlement trust fund should immediately after the marriage be held in trust for the daughter for her absolute benefit, & Mrs. K. assigned & surrendered her life interest in the appointed stocks to the daughter. The stocks were accordingly transferred to the trustees of the daughter's settlement immediately after their marriage. Mrs. K. died & the trust funds became divisible:—Held: the daughter must bring into hotspot the share appointed to her at its value at the date of the death of Mrs. K.—*Re KELLY'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, GUSTARD v. SUB-SECT. 2.—APPLICATION OF CLAUSE.

1042. To what funds applicable—Reversionary & life interests—Necessity for valuation.]—The donees of a power, authorising the appointment of personal estate amongst the children of the donees, or the issue of such children born during the lives of the donees or the life of the survivor, appointed it "upon the trusts following; that is to say," trusts for the benefit of some of the children, & to pay the interest to them for life; & after the decease of each child, to dispose of her share amongst her children. The settlement giving the power contained the usual hotspot clause:—Held: the life interest given by the appointment, as above stated, must be valued, & brought into hotspot.—RUCKER v. SCHOLEFIELD (1862), 1 Hem. & M. 36; 32 L. J. Ch. 46; 9 Jur. N. S. 17; 11 W. R. 137; 71 E. R. 16.

1045. ———.]—The donee of a limited power died in 1886 having by her will appointed the entire fund, producing about £270 a year, in trust for T. for life, & after her death on the usual trusts for her issue & children & in default of such issue or children, in trust as to one moiety for G. for life with further trusts that failed. Under the deed creating the power T. & G. each took £1,000 in default of appointment, subject to the usual hotspot clause. G. died in 1915 without issue. T. died in 1920 without issue, & the fund became distributable:—Held: (1) T.'s estate must bring her life interest in the entirety into hotspot; (2) G.'s estate was not liable to bring anything into hotspot for two reasons:

(a) because G. being only given a defeasible reversionary life interest, did not at any time "take" any appointed part or share within the meaning of the hotspot clause.

(b) even if she theoretically did so at the appointor's death in 1886, it would be unfair & inequitable now to assess a retrospective actuarial value thereon without regard to the actual fact that her defeasible reversionary life interest had never fructified.—Re WEST, DENTON v. WEST, [1921] 1 Ch. 533; 90 L. J. Ch. 342; 125 L. T. 117; 37 T. L. R. 433; 65 Sol. Jo. 379.

1046. ———.]—Two funds settled for same purpose by separate instrument.]—On a marriage, two separate sums were provided by two separate deeds, for the portions of younger children, & each deed contained a hotspot clause:—Held: these clauses were separate & distinct, & operated only on the fund contained in each settlement respectively.—*MONTAGUE v. 1047. ———.]—On the marriage of M. & his wife two deeds were executed, one conveying English estates the other Irish; in the former a term was created to raise £40,000 portions; in the latter a term to raise £25,000 in each, after powers of appointment was a hotspot clause, declaring that "in default of any appointment to the contrary," no child should take any unappointed part without bringing his appointed share into hotspot, & the Irish deed referred to the English. Two appointments were made of parts of the £40,000 & there was a direction in the deeds of appointment, that the appointment should not prejudice the appointees' rights in the unappointed part:—Held: he was not obliged to bring anything into hotspot, but was entitled to his share in the £25,000 & in the residue of the £40,000 as if he had taken nothing by appointment.—*WELLESLEY v. 1048. ———.]—By a marriage settlement, certain funds were settled upon certain usual trusts for the benefit of the husband & wife & their children, & it contained a hotchpot clause. By the will of the wife's mother, made subsequently, a portion of her personal estate was bequeathed to the trustees to pay & transfer the same to the trustees of the settlement, to be held by them upon & for the same trusts & purposes as were therein expressed concerning the property thereby settled. On a summons taken out by the trustees of the settlement to ascertain the effect of this bequest, it was contended by parties to whom but small appointments under the settlement had been made that the bequest was to be treated as an accretion to the settlement, so as to make the hotchpot clause applicable by bringing into account the funds already appointed under the settlement:—Held: inasmuch as there was no context in the will importing that the use of the words "same trusts" implied an accretion of the settlement trust fund, the bequest must be deemed to be of an independent fund, to which the hotchpot clause in the settlement was not applicable.—*Re NORTH, MEATES v. 1049. — Two funds settled by same instrument.—Whether considered distinct for purposes of clause.—Testator devised real estate on trust for sale & conversion, & directed a third of the proceeds of the sale to be held on trust for each of his daughters for her life, & after her death in trust for such of her children or their issue born in her lifetime as she should by will or deed appoint, & failing any such appointment, in trust for all her children in equal shares. A general hotchpot clause followed. Testator then directed two other funds to be held by his trustees on the same trusts. One of testator's daughters by will appointed part of the trust moneys to her two sons on condition that they should resign a benefit accruing to them under their father's will, whereby the residuary estate of testatrix, which was given to a stranger, would be enlarged, & failing their compliance with this condition, testatrix appointed the fund to one of her daughters:—Held: testator's intention was not to create three funds, but one fund, & therefore there was one general hotchpot clause applying to the whole share of the issue of testator's daughter in the moneys accruing to them under his will.—Re PERKINS, PERKINS v. BAGOT, [1893] 1 Ch. 283; 62 L. J. Ch. 531; 67 L. T. 743; 41 W. R. 170; 37 Sol. Jo. 26; 3 R. 40.

1050. — — — — —.]—A marriage settlement dealt with two funds: £13,000 Consols belonging to the wife, & a policy for £5,000 on the life of the husband. The capital of the wife's fund was to go to such children of the marriage as the husband & wife by deed, or the survivor by deed or will, should appoint, & in default of appointment to the children equally, subject to a hotchpot clause in the form usually adopted in the case of one fund: the £5,000 policy moneys were to go to such children of the marriage as the wife should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment "upon the same or the like trusts," & subject to "the same or the like" powers & provisoes as were expressed in the said settlement concerning the wife's fund after the death of the husband & wife & in default of appointment. The whole of the £13,000 had been appointed unequally among the three children of the marriage, the £5,000 was unappointed & the question now raised was whether the two sums were to be aggregated for the purposes of hotchpot, or whether the £5,000 was divisible into three equal shares:—Held: the two funds were distinct, & the three children were entitled to the £5,000 in equal shares, without having to account for or bring into hotchpot any sums appointed to them out of the £13,000.—*Re BRISTOL (MARQUIS), GREY (EARL) v. 1051. — — — — —.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1877, after reciting that by virtue of a prior settlement & deed poll the wife was entitled to a reversionary sum of £15,000, but subject to a provision in the deed poll for the reduction thereof, in case the wife should make default in bringing the same into account in the division of certain trust funds in the deed poll mentioned, the sum of £15,000 was settled, subject to the life interests of the husband & wife, in trust for children of the marriage as the husband & wife should jointly appoint, & in default, as the survivor should appoint, & in default, in trust for children of the marriage in equal shares, the sons to take vested interests at twenty-one & the daughters at twenty-one or marriage. Then followed a usual hotchpot clause relating to "the trust premises," & usual powers of maintenance & advancement with the usual ultimate trusts in default of children in favour of the wife. The settlement contained an agreement to settle the wife's other or after-acquired property upon trusts for sale & conversion, the proceeds to be held "upon the trusts & with & subject to the powers, provisoes, agreements & declarations herein declared concerning the sum of £15,000 hereinbefore expressed to be hereby assigned," & further provided that, notwithstanding the agreement, if the wife became entitled to any interest which ought to be settled pursuant to the said agreement but under the provisions of the deed poll would go in satisfaction of the £15,000, it should be lawful for the trustees to release any such interest with the intent of keeping the £15,000 intact & unreduced. The husband & wife appointed the £15,000 in favour of one daughter & died without having made any further appointment:—Held: for the purposes of the hotchpot clause the £15,000 & the other or after-acquired property were distinct funds, & the daughter was entitled to share in the other or after-acquired property without bringing the £15,000 appointed to her into hotchpot.—*Re CAVENDISH'S SETTLEMENT, GROSVENOR v. 1065. Failure to exercise power on marriage with consent—Discretionary power of trustees.]—A settlement was made of a trust fund, in moieties, for the grand-daughters of the settlor for life, subject to a prior interest in their mother, with remainder to their children as they should appoint, or, in default, equally. A power was interposed that in the event of either of the grand-daughters marrying with consent, the trustees might transfer to her part of the trust funds. One of the grand-daughters married with consent, but the power was not executed. The trust fund was paid into ct.:—Held: the execution of the power was discretionary with the trustees, & they not having exercised it, the grand-daughter was not entitled to payment to her of any part of the capital of the trust funds.—Re STRICKLAND'S TRUST (1862), 1 New Rep. 164.

1067. Consent of trustees required—Whether consent of majority sufficient.]—The trust of a term under a settlement was, that if there should be two or more daughters of the marriage, then the trustees were to raise & pay to each the sum of £2,000, if she marry with the consent of her mother, if living, & a widow; if not, then with the consent of the trustees or the survivor of them, his exors., administrators, or assigns; & in case any of the daughters die before the portion was paid, that it should not go to the exor., but the estate should be exonerated thereof, or, if raised, should go to him on whom the reversion of the premises is limited to descend.

The father afterwards by his will gives the further sum of £2,000 to each of his daughters, as an augmentation of their portions, subject to the same conditions, etc., as the original portions; & if any of the daughters die before the original portions become payable, then he wills that this £2,000 should not be paid to her exor., but that his lady & extrix. should have the residuum of this money, & makes her residuary legatee.

Pltf., H., married one of the daughters without consent, & C. another, also without consent. They are not entitled to the portions under the settlement or will.

Where a condition has been performed to a reasonable intent, the ct. will dispense with the want of circumstances, as where the major part of the trustees consent, or where they give an implied, not an express, consent.—*HARVEY v. 1073. — — — — —.]—A married woman, by a testamentary instrument made in execution of a power contained in her marriage settlement, gave £2,000 subject to the life interest of her husband, to trustees upon trust for the benefit of her child or children, to be equally divided between them share & share alike; but in case the £2,000 should become payable before her children, being sons, should have attained twenty-one, or, being daughters, should have attained that age or day of marriage, then in trust to invest & apply the interest to their maintenance & education, & when they should attain twenty-one or day of marriage, to pay to them their respective shares of the principal; & in case any of the children should happen to die before their portions should become payable, then the same should go & belong to the survivors or survivor of them.

Testatrix left a son & two daughters, all of whom had attained twenty-one at her decease. The son, & afterwards a daughter, died in the lifetime of their father:—Held: on the death of the father, the surviving daughter was entitled to the £2,000 by survivorship, except as to that share of it which accrued to the deceased daughter upon the death of the son, which belonged to the representative of deceased daughter.—BRIGHT v. ROWE (1834), 3 My. & K. 316; 40 E. R. 121.

1074. — — — — —.]—By the marriage settlement of A. & B., a sum of £3,300 was assigned to trustees upon trust for the husband & wife for their respective lives; & after the decease of the survivor of them, in case there should be any child or children of their bodies then living, to pay the sum unto such child or children which should be then living, in such shares, etc., as the husband & wife should jointly appoint; & for want of such appointment, the same was to go & be equally divided among such children, if more than one, as should not be inheritable to the real estate of the husband, share & share alike, & to be paid to him, her, or them, at his, her, or their respective age or ages of twenty-one years or days of marriage, which should first happen; & in case there should be no such child or children living at the time of the death of the survivor of A. & B., or, if such, & they should all happen to die before their respective ages of twenty-one years or days of marriage as aforesaid, then the sum was to go to such person or persons as B. by deed or will should appoint. A. & B. died without executing the joint power of appointment, having had several children, some of whom survived them:—Held: a son of the marriage who attained twenty-one, but died, without having been married, in the lifetime of one of his parents, acquired a vested interest in the fund, but two children who died infants & without having been married, in their parent's lifetime, were excluded from the fund.

The ct. must read settlements of this description with an inclination to believe that there was an intention to provide for children at a time when a provision would be required, namely at twenty-one or marriage. If the expressions are doubtful that inclination will prevail, but if there be a clearly expressed intention that intention so clearly expressed must be abided by (KNIGHT BRUCE, V.-C.).—*MOSTYN v. 1075. — — — — —.]—A sum was vested in trustees, upon trust, declared by deed. The deed recited an intention to make some provision for A. & her children, & declared that the trustees should hold the fund for A. for life, & upon her death or doing any act to incur her interest, the trustees were to stand possessed, "if there should be one child of A. then living, the stock to be an interest vested in such child at twenty-one, & to be paid accordingly, if such age should happen after the death of A., & if not, immediately on her death or making any charge"; & if there should be two or more such children, then the stock to be transferred amongst such children, in equal shares, at the age of twenty-one, if A. should be dead; but if not, then immediately after her decease or having made such incumbrance. The deed contained clauses of survivorship in case of any child dying under twenty-one, as to "the share intended to be thereby provided for such child dying," & also clauses for maintenance, advancement, & accruer. There were several children; one attained twenty-one, & died in the life of A.:—Held: her representatives did not participate in the fund.—SKIPPER v. KING (1848), 12 Beav. 29; 12 Jur. 570; 50 E. in trust for all her children then born or thereafter to be born who should be living at her decease, equally, & to be assigned & paid to them at their respective ages of twenty-one, & in the meantime, the income to be applied for their maintenance; & if any of them should die before their shares should become payable or assignable, their shares to go to the survivors; & in case all the children should die under twenty-one, the property to be in trust for the settlor. The husband & wife had three children. The wife survived the husband. Two of the children died in her lifetime; one of them having attained twenty-one. The third attained twenty-one & survived the wife:—Held: that child was entitled to the whole of the property comprised in the deeds.—JEFFERY v. JEFFERY (1849), 17 Sim. 26; 13 Jur. 482; 60 E. R. 1036.

1077. ————.]—An appointment, under a power in a settlement, was made, directing the trustees after the death of the tenant for life to stand possessed of £6,000, to pay the dividends to S. for life, & after his decease to permit T. to receive the dividends for his life, & after the decease of the survivor for all & every the child & children of T. & S. equally to be divided between them, share & share alike, the shares of sons to be paid, assigned or transferred at the age of twenty-one, & the shares of daughters at twenty-one or marriage, which should respectively first happen, with benefit of survivorship among the children surviving, in case any of them should die before he, she, or they should, by virtue of the trusts, become entitled to payment, assignment or transfer of his, her or their respective parts. At the time of executing the deed T. & S. had seven children, the eldest of whom was forty-three, & the youngest twenty-six years of age. One of the children died in the lifetime of the tenants for life:—Held: the personal representative of deceased child was entitled to her share, & not the surviving brothers & sisters.—Re WILLIAMS (1849), 12 Beav. 317; 19 L. 1078. ————.]—In determining the rights of children under a marriage settlement, the ct., unless prevented by clear & distinct words, will hold that children who attained twenty-one, & died, living their parents, took vested interests under the settlement.

The ct. will lay hold of minute circumstances in favour of such construction.—BAILIE v. JACKSON (1853), 1 Sm. & G. 175; 1 W. R. 196; 65 E. R. 76.

1079. ————.]—By a marriage settlement, after the death of the husband & wife, the trustees were to pay, assign & transfer, the capital to the children of the wife equally, the shares to be paid at twenty-one. There was a subsequent proviso that if there should be no such child living at the decease of the survivor of the parents, then the fund was to go over to C. There was only one child of the marriage:—Held: though she had attained twenty-one, her interest was defeasible by her death before the survivor of her parents.—LLOYD v. COCKER (1854), 19 Beav. 140; 24 L. J. Ch. 84; 24 L. T. O. S. 105; 1 Jur. N. S. 174; 52 E. R. 302.

W., A. & M. died in the lifetime of B. B. died in 1851; J. died in 1837; J. had five children, one of whom married G. & died in 1842. There was issue of that marriage six children, four of whom died before B. G. obtained letters of administration to the estate of one of his children, who survived her mother; the other three deceased children of J. were not represented:—Held: the fund was divisible in equal shares among the surviving children of J. & the representatives of her deceased children.—*HARCOURT v. R. 338.

1083. ————.]—Property was settled upon trust after death of settlor to apply the whole or part of income towards the maintenance & education of the six children of S. by name, & to accumulate the residue of the income until the death of the survivor of O. & S., or until such time as the youngest of the six children, or the youngest of such of them as should be living attained twenty one; & then if O. & S. should then have died, or if not, immediately after the death of the survivor, to convey & assign the same to the children, or such of them as should be then living. There was no other gift to the children. The settlement contained a clause that the share of any of the six children who "alienated" his share should be forfeited, & go over to the other children:—Held: none of the children took a vested interest till after the happening of the last of the three events, namely, the attainment of twenty-one by the youngest, & the death of O. & S.; & therefore none of the children who died before the last of such events happened took a vested interest.—*BARNETT v. Five of the children of E. survived her, & attained twenty-one or married, & one of her sons attained twenty-one & died without issue in her lifetime:—Held: although the trust only took effect in case some one child survived E., the contingency upon which the trust took effect was not to be imported into the constitution of the class who were to take under the trust, & the son who attained twenty-one & died in the lifetime of the tenant for life without issue took, nevertheless, a vested interest in the fund.—Re ORLEBAR'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1875), L. 1094. Limitation to issue on death of husband & wife—Effect of divorce.]—By ante-nuptial contract of marriage the intended wife conveyed a sum of about £19,000 to trustees, directing them to pay the annual income to her during her life & after her death, in the event of her being survived by her husband to pay the same to him during all the days of his life & survivance & on the death of the spouses to pay or deliver the fee or capital of the means & estate to the child or children of the marriage.

The marriage was dissolved by decree of divorce obtained by the wife against the husband on the ground of desertion. Thereafter the wife died survived by her husband & a daughter. The daughter & her marriage contract trustees claimed that in consequence of the wife's death & the husband being divorced she, the daughter & her trustees became entitled to the funds in the hands of her mother's trustees:—Held: (1) the divorce of the father was not equivalent to his death in a question as to the vesting of the daughter's provision; (2) during her father's life nothing fell to the daughter; (3) the income which but for the divorce would have been paid to the father fell into the executory estate of the wife.—*DAWSON v. Annotation:—Apld. Montgomery v. Zarifi (1918), 88 L. J. P. C. 20.

1095. ———.]—By a settlement in English form made upon the marriage of a husband whose domicile was in Scotland with a wife whose domicile was in England the income of certain settled property was to be paid to the wife during her life for her separate use without power of anticipation, & after her death to the husband during his life, & subject to these life interests the property was to be held in trust for the issue of the marriage, with remainders over in default of issue, & the settlement expressly provided "that these presents shall be construed & that the rights of all persons claiming hereunder shall be regulated according to the law of England."

After the marriage the spouses resided in Scotland, & the husband obtained in the Ct. of Session a decree of divorce against the wife on the ground of her adultery:—Held: the effect of the provision in the settlement was to exclude the Scottish law of forfeiture under the statute of 1573 (c. 55), in case of divorce for adultery, & the husband was not entitled to the income of the settled funds for his life as if the wife were dead.—MONTGOMERY v. ZARIFI (1918), 88 L. J. P. C. 20; 119 L. T. 380, H. L.

SECT. 8.—ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN.

1096. When entitled—Gift to children—Prima facie includes only legitimate issue.]—A married woman, having several legitimate children, & one illegitimate child, & being separated from her husband, & enceinte with a second illegitimate child, appointed a fund to her illegitimate child then born, reserving a power of revocation, as to a moiety, in favour of any after-born children she might have born of her body.

After the birth of the second illegitimate child, she revoked the appointment of the moiety, & appointed the entire fund equally between the two illegitimate children:—Held: the after-born children, for whose benefit the revocation might be made, must be taken, in the primary & legal sense, as applying to legitimate children only, therefore the second illegitimate child was not an object of the reserved power, & could not take under the latter appointment.—DOVER v. ALEXANDER (1843), 2 Hare, 275; 12 L. J. Ch. 175; 7 Jur. 124; 67 E. R. 114.

1098. ——— Illegitimate children in esse—Necessity for sufficient description.]—The ultimate limitation in a settlement was to all the children, as well those already born as hereafter to be born of A. & B., his wife. B. was the settlor's sister, who had been married to A. five years before the date of the settlement. They never had any legitimate children; but, before their marriage, B. had several children still living, who were reputed to be her children by A.:—Held: these children were entitled to the property under the limitation.

Semble, the construction of these words in a will would exclude illegitimate children born at the date of the will, because of the possibility that legitimate children might have been born before testator's death.—GABB v. PRENDERGAST (1855), 1 K. & J. 439; 3 Eq. Rep. 648; 24 L. J. Ch. 431; 26 L. T. O. S. 47; 1 Jur. N. S. 900; 3 W. R. 395; 69 E. R. 531.

1099. ———.]—A. & B., his aunt by the half blood, went through the ceremony of marriage; a settlement was afterwards made providing for the children of B. by A.; a month afterwards a child was born of B. by A.:—Held: the child took no benefit under the settlement.—Re SHAW, ROBINSON v. SHAW, [1894] 2 Ch. 573; 63 L. J. Ch. 770; 71 L. T. 79; 43 W. R. 43; 38 Sol. Jo. 513; 8 R. 421.

1100. ———.]—By a post-nuptial settlement a fund belonging to the wife was settled as to one third upon trust to pay the income to her daughter E., therein described as the wife of J. K., for life, for her separate use, independently of J. K. or any future husband, & after her death in trust for the children of E. who being sons should attain twenty-one or being daughters should attain that age or marry in equal shares.

A year before the settlement E. went through the ceremony of marriage with J. K., who had been her deceased sister's husband, & at the date of the settlement she was enceinte with a child, who was born a month afterwards & attained twenty-one, & she died without ever having been lawfully married:—Held: the child was entitled to participate under the settlement.—*EBBERN v. 1103. — — — — — Gift to future children of invalid marriage—Deceased wife's sister.]—A marriage settlement executed in 1809 provided that after the death of the husband & wife the income should be held in trust for the children of the husband by the said wife & by any future wife. The first wife died in 1874, & in 1884 the husband married his deceased wife's sister. Such a marriage was at that time invalid. There were three children of each marriage, & the three children of the second marriage were born before the passing of Deceased Wife's Sister's Marriage Act, 1907 (c. 47):—Held: as the three children of the first marriage had, at the passing of the Act, a vested interest in remainder, the case fell within sect. 2 of the Act & the children of the second marriage were not entitled to any share in the settled fund.—Re SPRINGFIELD, DAVIES v. SPRINGFIELD (1922), 38 T. L. R. 263; 66 Sol. Jo. 268.

SECT. 9.—TRUSTS IN DEFAULT OF ISSUE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1104. No reference to death without issue—Whether implied by court—Intention of parties.]—Arts. construed against the words for the sake of the intent. As where the wife's portion was to be laid out in land, to be settled on husband & wife, & the heirs of their bodies; & if not laid out in land during their joint lives, & the wife should die first, that the money should go to the wife's brother & sister: wife dies first, leaving issue, & the money is not laid out in a purchase, yet the issue, & not the wife's brother & sister, shall have it; equity supplying the words, "if the wife dies without issue."—*KENTISH v. 1106. — — — — —.]—A settlement directed the trustees, immediately after the decease of the survivor of the husband & wife, to transfer a fund unto & amongst all & every the son & sons, daughter & daughters of the husband & wife, & the children of such son & sons, daughter & daughters, in case any of them should be dead leaving issue, share & share alike; but the child or children of such of the said sons & daughters as should be then dead were to be entitled only to a parent's share; & in case there should be no child or children of the husband & wife living at the death of the survivor of them, then in trust to transfer the fund to the survivor, his or her exors., etc. There were three children of the marriage, but they all died before either of their parents; two of them left children, some of whom survived both their grandfather & their grandmother:—Held: the surviving grandchildren were entitled to the fund.—GREEN v. BAILEY (1845), 14 Sim. 635; 9 Jur. 636; 60 E. R. 504; sub nom. GREEN v. BARCLAY, 5 L. T. O. S. 473.

1107. When trusts arise—No issue of marriage—Gift over on death of issue under age.]—By a marriage settlement real & personal estate was conveyed in trust, after the death of the parents, for the children at twenty-one or marriage, but if no child attained that age, or, being a daughter, did not marry under that age, then the trustees were directed to convey & assign the property to certain persons. There were never any children of the marriage:—Held: the instrument was executory & the gift over took effect.—OSBORN v. BELLMAN (1860), 2 Giff. 593; 3 L. T. 265; 6 Jur. N. S. 1325; 9 W. (1) A marriage settlement vested funds in trustees, upon trusts for the children of the marriage, & in default as the wife should appoint. The wife was divorced à vinculo, & there being no children, appointed to herself:—Held: a good appointment.

(2) Children of a second marriage of the wife & divorced husband would not be children of "the marriage" contemplated by the settlement.—BOND v. TAYLOR (1861), 2 John. & H. 473; 31 L. J. Ch. 784; 5 L. T. 445; 8 Jur. N. S. 1090; 10 W. R. 169; 70 E. R. 1144.

1110. Time for ascertainment of default—Extinction of possibility of issue.]—Leaseholds were, by deed, conveyed to trustees, in trust for the settlor for life, & after her decease in trust to assign them to T., his exors., etc., "absolutely." But if T. should die without leaving any child living at the time of his decease, then in trust to assign to P., etc.:—Held: on the context, the death referred to was not confined to a death in the life of the tenant for life, & T. did not, upon the death of the settlor, become absolutely entitled to the leaseholds.—MILNER v. MILNER (1865), 34 Beav. 276; 55 E. R. 641.

1111. Presumption of impossibility of issue.]—Property comprised in a marriage settlement was limited on trust for the wife for life for her separate use, without power of anticipation, remainder to her husband for life, remainder to the children of the marriage, with an ultimate remainder to the husband. The wife was now fifty years old & the husband fifty-three, they had been married twenty-eight years, & there was no issue of the marriage, & there was evidence that it was almost, if not entirely, impossible that there could be any. Both husband & wife were in a delicate state of health, & the income of the property was so small that they could not afford the comforts which in consequence of the wife's health it was important she should have. They now applied to the ct., under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 39, to remove the restraint on anticipation, & to make

The husband survived the wife, & died in Jan. 1900. A. had thirteen children, of whom eight survived the husband & five died in his lifetime, four unmarried, & one leaving an only child:—Held: “or” was not to be read “and,” & there being children of A. living at the period of distribution, no grandchild took a share.—*Re COLEY, GIBSON v. R. had only one son J., who attained twenty-one, & died without issue:—Held: upon his death, the ultimate trust in favour of the settlor took effect, the words “any son” in the gift over being read “any such son as is hereinbefore mentioned.”—CARDIGAN v. CURZON-HOWE (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 358; 22 L. T. 640; 18 W. R. 878.

Provision for survivorship & accrual.]—On the marriage of J. & S. a sum of stock was settled by deed, upon trust after the death of J. & S., & failure of issue of the marriage, to transfer the same unto, amongst & between F., R., W. & E. equally; provided that if either of them, the said F., R., W. & E., should depart this life without having acquired a vested interest, leaving issue, the share of such person so dying should go to such issue, but in case either of them should die without having lawful issue, then the share of him, her or them so dying should belong to the survivors or survivor of them. There was no issue of the marriage. F. & R. died in the lifetime of J. & S., leaving issue. W. survived F., & died in the lifetime of R. without issue. E. survived both J. & S.:—Held: she was entitled by survivorship to W.'s share in the fund.—Re ACOTT'S SETTLEMENT (1859), 28 L. J. Ch. 383.

SUB-SECT. 3.—LIMITATIONS OF WIFE'S FUND.

1119. Absolute interest for wife—In event of wife surviving husband—Whether possibility of future marriage & issue thereby considered.]—By a marriage settlement, certain stocks, the property of the lady, are assigned to trustees, upon certain trusts, for the benefit of the intended wife & husband, during their joint lives; & if the wife should survive the husband, having children by him, upon trust for her during her life, & after the death both of her & her husband, upon trust for all her children by her then intended or any future husband, as she should appoint; & in default of appointment, upon trust for the children of the then intended marriage; & it was provided, that, if the lady should survive her intended husband, & there should be no children of that marriage who should acquire a vested interest in the property, the stocks should be upon trust for her, & assigned to her: the lady having outlived her husband, & there being no child of that marriage who had acquired a vested interest:—Held: the lady was entitled to the stocks absolutely, without regard to the possibility of there being children of a future marriage.—HANSON v. COOKE & HANSON (1825), 4 L. J. O. S. Ch. 45.

1120. ———.]—By a settlement made on the marriage of R. D. & L. B. it was provided that if the income given to the wife for life after coverture or to the husband should become vested in any other person, then the trustees should apply it for the benefit of "L. B. or R. D. and her husband or his wife & her or his issue." The husband being dead without issue the widow applied to the trustees to re-assign to her the trust fund on the ground that the settlement had come to an end:—Held: the discretionary trust extended to a future husband & the issue of such future marriage, & therefore the trustees could not re-assign the fund.—Re DAW, BINNEY v. DAW (1918), 87 L. J. Ch. 441; 118 L. T. 151.

1121. ——— Whether limitation coalesces with limitation to executors.—To prevent operation of restraint on anticipation.—By a marriage settlement, certain real & personal property of the intended wife was settled in trust for her during her life, for her separate use exclusive of her then intended husband or any other husband with whom she might intermarry, without power of anticipation, & after her death upon certain trusts for the benefit of the children of that marriage & in the event of there not being any such children, who should acquire a vested interest in the fund, then the fund was to be held in trust for the intended wife, her exors., administrators & assigns, in case she survived her first husband. There was no issue of this marriage, & the wife having survived her first husband contracted a second marriage:—Held: the trust for her separate use thereupon came into operation & this limitation, & the limitation to her exors., administrators & assigns did not coalesce, & consequently, her second husband was not entitled to the trust fund by his marital right.—DIXON v. DIXON (1838), 1 Beav. 40; 8 L. J. Ch. 25; 2 Jur. 960; 48 E. R. 853.

1122. Trust for husband.—Declaration of trust, on the part of the wife, of £2,000, already paid, & other £2,000, to be paid by the exors. of the covenantor, of the interest to husband for life, then to the wife for life, then to their heirs, as they shall direct; proviso, that if the wife dies before the husband, sans issue, or the issue die before covenantor, then his exors. shall pay to the husband, if living, only £1,000. Husband dies, leaving his wife his extrix., & without issue:—Held: the husband, in consideration of his settlement, was a purchaser of the whole portion; the receipt of the first £2,000 was acknowledged by him, & the security of the other; the argument on deff.'s part, that the uses being at an end, the interest results, is confuted by the tenor of the marriage contract: & decreed, that the contingency, on which the proviso was to take effect, not having happened, the second £2,000 belonged to the husband's representatives.

Where there is a marriage, & a contract for a portion for the wife, & the husband, in consideration thereof, makes a settlement on the wife & her issue, notwithstanding the restrictions put upon the wife's fortune, though it be vested in trustees for particular uses, yet, if it is stipulated as the marriage portion, & in consideration of the settlement, the general property, subject to these limitations, is considered here as belonging to the husband, unless the parties have provided otherwise, for he is looked upon as a purchaser (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*WHARTON v. SECT. 10.—TRUST FOR WIFE'S NEXT OF KIN OR EXECUTORS SUBJECT TO HER LIFE INTEREST.

1123. Ultimate trust for wife's next of kin.—Whether revocable.—Settlement by a feme sole, in contemplation of marriage, of part of her fortune in trust to pay the dividends to herself for her separate use for life, & after her death for her intended husband; & after the death of the survivor to transfer the capital according to her appointment by will; & in case she should die without appointment, & he should be then dead, in trust for her next of kin, their exors., etc., according to Statute of Distributions. An interest for life only in the widow, with a power of disposition by will.

There was a case before Lord Alvanley upon a settlement in favour of next of kin, whether they could take a vested interest. It turns upon that, whether they were intended: so that plff. could disappoint them only by a will (GRANT, M.R.).—ANDERSON v. DAWSON (1808), 15 Ves. 532; 33 E. R. 856.

But if the wife survived, then in default of children, in trust for the wife absolutely. The father of the wife joined in the settlement, & covenanted to pay an annuity to his daughter. During the life of the husband & wife debts were contracted by the wife. There were no children, & the impossibility of there being any was not questioned:—Held: upon the application of the wife & with the approbation of the husband the next of kin being mere volunteers, & not within the marriage consideration, the corpus of the trust funds might be applied in payment of debts.—PAUL v.

1125. ———. ———.]—By a marriage settlement the wife's property was settled, after life estates in the husband & wife & in default of children, in the event of the wife surviving, on her, & in the event of the husband surviving, as the wife should by will appoint, & in default, on her next of kin, excluding the husband:—Held: the trust in favour of the next of kin could not be revoked, & although there was no possibility of issue, the husband & wife together were not entitled to the corpus of the settled fund.—PAUL v. PAUL (1882), 20 Ch. D. 742; 51 L. J. Ch. 839; 47 L. T. 210; 30 W. R. 801, C. A.

1126. ———. On bankruptcy of husband.]—A trader, on his marriage, received a fortune of £5,000 with his wife; & settled a sum of stock in trust for himself for life, with limitations over for the benefit of his wife & children, in the event of his becoming bankrupt or insolvent. It was provided that, if he should survive his wife, & the issue of the marriage should fail, & he should then be or should have been bkpt., fifteen sixty-sixths of the stock should belong to the wife's next of kin in blood. No part of the £5,000 was settled; but the whole of the settled fund was the husband's property, & it did not appear, from any of the expressions in the settlement, what was the consideration for the provision as to fifteen sixty-sixths of the stock:—Held: the limitations over in the event of the bkpcy. of the husband, were good as to fifteen sixty-sixths of the trust fund, that being the proportion of the trust fund which the wife's fortune would have purchased, but were void as to the remainder.—LESTER v. GARLAND (1832), 5 Sim. 205; Mont. 471; 1 L. J. Ch. 185; 58 E. R. 314.

1127. ———. Claim against husband's estate.]—Upon a marriage in 1818, a sum of £400 was handed over by the wife to the husband, & the husband executed a bond for repayment with interest at the expiration of six months, if required by the trustees of the marriage settlement. The trusts of the settlement were to pay the interest to the husband for life, then to the wife for life, & then for the benefit of the children, but if no children to transfer the trust funds to the next of kin of the wife. The husband died in 1853, leaving his wife his sole legatee & extrix, & his wife died in 1864. There were no children, & there had been no repayment & no demand:—Held: the trustees were entitled to claim the £400 on behalf of the wife's next of kin against the husband's estate.—MILLS v. BORTHWICK (1865), 35 L. J. Ch. 31; 12 L. T. 600; 11 Jur. N. S. 558; 13 W. R. 707.

subsequent appointment avoids ultimate trust.]—By a marriage settlement, a sum of £1,000 was charged upon real estates of the husband, for such persons as the wife should, by deed or will, during his coverture, appoint; & in default of appointment, for the exors., administrators & assigns of the wife's mother, who was then living:—Held: the power of appointment could only be exercised during the continuance of the coverture, & an appointment of £1,000 after the death of the husband was void, & the £1,000 formed part of the personal estate of the wife's mother, by virtue of the limitation to her exors., administrators & assigns.—MORRIS v. 1131. ———. ———.]—By a marriage settlement a sum of money, the property of the wife, was vested in trustees in trust for the separate use of the wife during her life, & after her decease in trust for the husband during his life, & after the death of the survivor, upon certain trusts for the children, & in default of children, who, being sons, should attain twenty-one, or being daughters, should attain that age or marry, in trust for such person or persons as the wife should, notwithstanding her coverture, by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment, in trust to pay & transfer same to the exors. or administrators of the wife:—Held: under the ultimate limitation to the exors. or administrators of the wife the fund did not belong to the next of kin of the wife, in exclusion of the husband, but passed to the administratrix of the wife as part of her general personal estate.—DANIEL v. 1132. ———. ———.]—The ultimate trust in a marriage settlement of a fund belonging to the wife, was to her exors. or administrators:—Held: (1) the surviving husband, who was her administrator, & not her next of kin, was entitled; (2) if by those words her next of kin were intended, then that the next of kin at the death of the wife, & not of the husband, who was tenant for life, were entitled.

(3) By a marriage settlement, a fund belonging to the wife was settled on the husband & wife for their respective lives, with remainder to the children of the marriage, to be vested at twenty-one or marriage; & in case no children should attain vested interests, which happened, then as the wife should appoint; & in default unto the exors. or administrators of the wife. The wife predeceased the husband, & made no appointment. There was one child only of the marriage, who survived her mother, but died without attaining a vested interest:—Held: the ultimate limitation was in favour of the wife's administrator, & not of her next of kin.—*ALLEN v. The wife died without issue, & without having exercised the power; the husband took out administration to his wife, & required the trustees to sell the reversion:—Held: he was entitled to have it sold, & to have the proceeds as administrator of his wife.—*WARBURTON v. SUB-SECT. 1.—APART FROM STATUTE.

A. In General.

1142. Who are next of kin—Nearest blood relations.—(1) A. assigned a fund to trustees, upon trust to pay the interest to B. for his life, & after his decease to pay, transfer, & assign the same among B.'s children, & if no child of B., from & immediately after the decease of B. upon trust to pay, transfer, & assign the same as A. should appoint, & in default of appointment, to pay, transfer, & assign the same to such person or persons as should at the time of the decease of A. be A.'s next of kin. A. died in the lifetime of B. without having made any appointment; & B. died without issue. B. is not excluded from the benefit of the limitation to A.'s next of kin.

(2) B. was the only surviving brother of A., & there were children of a deceased brother of A.:—Held: the words "next of kin," used simpliciter, are to be taken to mean "nearest of kin," & consequently B.'s personal representatives were entitled to the whole fund.—ELMSLEY v. YOUNG (1835), 2 My. & K. 780; 4 L. J. Ch. 200; 39 E. R. 1142; affg. (1833), 2 My. & K. 82.

E. died, leaving her husband & a child of the marriage, & her own father & mother, surviving:—Held: the father, mother, & child of E. were equally her next of kin, & were entitled, under the limitation, to the £10,000 in joint tenancy.

(2) By a marriage settlement, the wife's portion was limited to her for life, remainder to her husband for life, remainder to the children of the marriage to be vested at twenty-one or marriage, & in case none should attain that age or marry, then in trust for the brothers & sisters of the wife or their issue, as she should appoint; & in default of appointment, in trust for her next of kin:—Held: the child of the marriage was not excluded from taking under the ultimate limitation.

(3) Under the ultimate limitation of a trust fund in a marriage settlement "for such person or persons as, at the time of the death of E. should be her next of kin":—Held: those who at the death of E. were nearest to her in proximity of blood, & not those who would be entitled to E.'s personal estate in case of intestacy, under Statute of Distributions were intended.—*WITHEY v. The trustees were to pay the income of the Consols to L. for life, & after his death to pay it to G. for life, & after the death of the survivor, in trust for the children of the marriage, & if none, in trust for the survivor of L. & G., his or her exors. & administrators. The trustees were to pay the income of the bonds to L. during his & G.'s joint lives, & in case he should survive, then, after G.'s decease, to transfer the bonds to whom she might appoint by will, & in default of appointment, to her next of kin; but if she should survive L., then in trust to transfer the bonds to her, her exors. or administrators. After the marriage, the Consols were transferred to the trustees. L., by will, gave to his wife the whole of his property absolutely, & G. bequeathed the whole of her property to her husband for life, & after his death, to her sisters. Both husband & wife, who left Liverpool, in Apr. 1874, in the Liberia, were, with all hands on board, drowned at sea:—Held: the funds settled belonged to the legal personal representatives of each settlor.—*WOLLASTON v. SUB-SECT. 2.—STATUTORY NEXT OF KIN.

A. What Constitutes Reference to Statute.

See, now, Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23), s. 50.

1157. Implied reference—Reference to death unmarried.]—On a limitation by settlement "to the next of kin of A. of her own blood & family, as if she had died sole & unmarried," the next of kin take as under Statute of Distributions.—COTTON v. SCARANCKE (1815), 1 Madd. 45; 56 E. R. 18.

Annotations:—Refd. Halton v. Foster (1868), 3 Ch. App. 505. Mentd. Grieves v. Rawley (1852), 10 Hare, 63.

1158. ———. ———.]—(1) The ultimate limitation in a marriage settlement was "for the next of kin of the wife as if she had not been married, not including the husbands of both or either of her sisters":—Held: the sisters, who were her next of kin took as joint tenants.

It is no doubt settled, that if, in a case of this description there is a direct or implied reference to Statute of Distributions, the next of kin take as tenants in common; if therefore this settlement had stated that the next of kin were to take according to the statute in the same manner as if B. had died intestate I should have held that the daughters took as tenants in common. . . . It would be too strong an alteration of the deed to draw from the words "as if she had not been married" a reference to Statute of Distributions. . . . Finding then in this deed, no words of reference to Statute of Distributions or to an intestacy & finding no words of severance, I think the sisters as next of kin take as joint tenants (ROMILLY, M.R.).

(2) By a marriage settlement, real estates were conveyed to trustees & "their heirs" upon trusts for the parents for life & afterwards for the children, & in default as the wife should appoint & in default for her next of kin. The gift to the next of kin contained no words of inheritance:—Held: they took for life only.—LUCAS v. BRANDRETH (No. 2) (1860), 28 Beav. 274; 2 L. T. 785; 6 Jur. N. S. 945; 54 E. R. 371.

1159. ———.]—Testator gave a legacy to his daughter for life, & in default of issue, in trust, "for her next of kin in blood as if she had died unmarried." The daughter died without issue:—Held: the only surviving sister of the daughter was entitled to the legacy in exclusion of children of deceased brothers & sisters, for that the words "as if she had died unmarried" did not point to the mode of distribution in cases of intestacy, & "next of kin," therefore, must be taken as meaning nearest relations, & not persons entitled as next of kin according to the statute.—*HALTON v. By a settlement made on the marriage of a spinster a fund belonging to her was vested in trustees, upon trust to pay the income to her during the joint lives of herself & her husband, & after the death of either of them to pay the income to the survivor during his or her life, & after the death of the survivor to hold the fund in trust for the child or children of the marriage as the husband & wife should by deed jointly appoint, & in default of appointment as the survivor should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment in trust for the children, of the marriage equally who being sons should attain twenty-one, or being daughters should attain twenty-one or marry. If there should be no child, who being a son should attain twenty-one "or being a daughter should attain that age or marry, then, without prejudice to the prior trusts, if the wife should die before the husband, the trustees were, after his death & such default or failure of children, to hold the fund upon such trusts as the wife should by will appoint, & in default of appointment upon trust for the persons who would have been entitled thereto as her statutory next of kin at her death "if she had died possessed thereof intestate & without having been married." 1207. Where hypothesis is that wife has survived husband & died intestate.—At death of husband.—

By a marriage settlement personal estate of the wife was settled in trust for the husband & wife for their respective lives, & afterwards for the children of the marriage, & in default for the wife if she survived her husband, but if she predeceased him, then, subject to his life interest, for such person as, at the decease of the wife, would, under Statute of Distributions, have been entitled to her personal estate, as her next of kin, in case she had survived her husband & had afterwards died intestate. The husband survived the wife:—Held: her next of kin ascertained at the husband's death were entitled.—CHALMERS v. NORTH (1860), 28 Beav. 175; 3 L. T. 140; 6 Jur. N. S. 490; 8 W. R. 426; 54 E. 1208. —.]—In the event of there being no issue of a marriage, the settled fund was given to the wife, if she should survive her husband, for her absolute use; but if she should die in his lifetime, then to such persons as she should appoint, & in default of appointment to the persons who would then be entitled to the personal estate of the wife, in case she had survived her husband & had died possessed of same intestate:—Held: the next of kin of the wife at the death of the husband were entitled to the fund.

1209. —.]—By a marriage settlement, dated in 1814, trust funds to which the wife was entitled were settled upon trusts for the benefit of the wife & husband during their respective lives & for the benefit of the child or children of the marriage. The settlement then provided that, if there should be no child, the trust funds should remain upon the trusts following: if the husband should die in the lifetime of the wife, then, after his decease & such failure of issue as aforesaid, in trust for the wife absolutely; but if the husband should survive the wife, then after, the decease of the husband so surviving the wife, & such failure of issue as aforesaid, "in trust for the person or persons, who, under the statutes made for the distribution of the estates of intestates, would then be entitled to the personal estate of" the wife in case the wife, "having survived" the husband, "had died possessed of same intestate, & to be divided between or amongst the same persons respectively, if more than one, in the shares & proportions in which same respectively would, under or by virtue of the statutes, be divisible among the persons respectively." The question was, when the class of next of kin of the wife entitled to the trust funds was ascertainable—whether at the death of the wife or of the husband:—Held: the wife's next of kin entitled to take were to be ascertained, not at the time of her own death, but at the time of the death of her husband.—Re KING'S SETTLEMENT, GIBSON v. 1212. ———.]—In a marriage settlement, which gave successive life interests to the wife & husband, the ultimate limitation of personal property, in the event of the husband surviving the wife, was in trust for the person or persons who, under the statutes for the distribution of the estates of intestates would, on the decease of the wife, have been entitled thereto in case she had survived the husband, & had then died possessed thereof & intestate. The wife predeceased the husband:—Held: the class of persons to take under the limitation ought to be ascertained as at the date of the death of the wife, & not as at the date of the death of the husband.—Re BRADLEY, BROWN v. 1213. ———. Immediately after death of husband.]—By a marriage settlement, dated in 1839, certain property of the wife was vested in trustees upon trust for the appointees of the wife, &, in default, for her for life for her separate use, & after her death for the husband for life, &, after the decease of the husband & wife, in trust for the person or persons who, under the statutes made for the distribution of the estates of intestates, would then be entitled thereto in case the wife having survived the husband were to die possessed thereof respectively & intestate, & to be divided between or among such persons, if more than one, in the shares & proportions in which the same would be divisible under the same statutes. The wife died in the lifetime of the husband. Her next of kin under the statute at her death & those persons who would have been her next of kin if she had survived her husband & died immediately after his death were not altogether the same, & the question was which of those two classes was to take:—Held: the persons to take were those who would have been entitled to the wife's personal estate if she had survived her husband & died intestate immediately after him.—CLARKE v. The marriage was dissolved by decree; both husband & wife married again, & the wife died:—Held: (1) the next of kin of the wife at her death were entitled to the fund, the words “his death or marriage” being read as meaning the determination of the prior interests; (2) the husband's interest was destroyed by his second marriage in the lifetime of the wife.—Re MATHEW'S TRUSTS (1876), 24 W. J. became bkpt. & died, leaving his wife, but no children surviving. On the question whether the words "personal representatives," referred to the exors. & administrators of J. in their representative character:—Held: the next of kin of J. at the death of the wife were entitled.—*RHODES v. A. was B.'s brother. At B.'s death her statutory next of kin included three daughters of A.:—Held: the term representatives meant those who represented A. as statutory next of kin of B.; & A.'s daughters were therefore excluded from taking under the settlement.—LANDSAY v. ELLICOTT (1876), 46 L. J. Ch. 878.

1222. ———.]—Construed as "executors & administrators."—By a marriage settlement, the wife's real & personal estate was assigned to trustees on trust to pay the annual income to husband for life, remainder to wife for life, remainder as she should by deed or will appoint; & in default for her personal representatives. The wife survived & took out administration to her husband:—Held: she was not entitled to hold the former estate for her own exclusive benefit but for the benefit of herself & her husband's next of kin.—WELLMAN v. BOWRING (1830), 3 Sim. 328; 57 E. R. 1021.

1224. ———.]—By a marriage settlement, stock, the property of the husband, was settled on trust for the separate use of the wife during her life, & after her death, for the husband, if he survived her; but if he died in her lifetime, then for such persons as he should by deed or will appoint; & in default of appointment, for his exors. & administrators; the husband died in the wife's lifetime, having appointed an extrix., but without exercising his power:—Held: the extrix. was not entitled to the stock beneficially, but it was to be administered by her as part of his general personal estate.—*COLLIER v. The wife survived the husband & took out administration of his effects, & claimed an absolute interest in the whole corpus of the stock:—Held: she was not entitled.

Semble: a limitation in a settlement "to the exors. & administrators of A., for their own use & benefit," unconnected with any other limitation showing more specifically who are to take, is void for uncertainty.—MARSHALL v. COLLETT (1835), 1 Y. & C. Ex. 232; 160 E. R. 94.

1244. — Devise of part of property to wife.—Settlement confirmed by will.—Jointure payable out of part not devised.—By indenture of marriage settlement, lands were conveyed in trust after the death of G. the husband to the use & intent that A. the wife should receive an annuity of £1,000 clear of all taxes & deductions for her jointure, & in bar of dower, etc., with powers of distress & entry, & a term to secure the payment. By his will G. directed his debts to be paid & devised to his wife during her life, his mansion house, park, etc., at D., & directed that timber should be cut on his estates at H., etc., & sold to pay the expense of repairs, painting & glazing, which in the opinion of A. should at any time be required for any of the hereditaments devised to her for life, & for insurance of the premises, & he thereby confirmed the settlement made on his marriage. He gave to his nephew P. & his heirs all his real estates in England, including the lands devised to his wife, subject to her life interest & all his lands in Pennsylvania, without any incumbrance or restriction. He directed that the paintings in his house at D. should be enjoyed with the same by his wife for her life, & after her death to go with the house & subject to the payment of his debts. The manor, park, etc., at D. formed part of the premises settled & devised.

Upon a bill filed by A. :—Held : she was entitled to enjoy the manor & park, etc., free from all charges, & the annuity of £1,000 ought to be raised & paid to her out of the remainder of the lands demised without contribution from the manor, park, etc.

The settlor substituted other lands by a deed, to which himself & all the trustees were parties, but which was executed only by himself, the trustees of the term for securing the jointure, & one of the trustees of the term for the children's portion :—Held : the substituted land was only charged with, & the original land only discharged of, the term for securing jointure.—GREENHAM v. At the time of testator's death the family estates stood limited to H. for life, remainder to C. for life, remainder to his first & other sons successively in tail.

Both H. & C. had powers of charging the estates with jointures for their widows & portions for their younger children. H. had charged a jointure for his widow which never took effect. C. had charged a jointure of £1,000 a year for his widow, & £10,000 for the portion of each of his younger children. H. died in 1891, & in 1892 C. & his eldest son executed a disentailing deed of (inter alia) the personal estate directed to be laid out in the purchase of lands to be settled, whereby the disentailed property was conveyed to such uses as they should appoint. This was a summons by C. & his eldest son, asking that the personal estate might be paid to them:—Held: the lands to be purchased with testator's personal estate would be subject only to the powers of charging existing & exercisable at the date of his death, not to the charges which had then been created in exercise of those powers, & therefore, upon C. & his eldest son releasing their powers of charging, which still subsisted, the personal estate might be transferred & paid to them for their own use.—*Re BERNERS, BERNERS v. Execution of the power by conveyance to trustees & their heirs on trust by the rents & profits to raise & pay a jointure during the wife's natural life only; & charging portions; with covenant for title, & for quiet enjoyment by the trustees during the natural life only of the wife. The proper mode of executing such a power is limiting a rentcharge to the wife by way of jointure, secured, if not by the ordinary power of entry & distress, by a trust term for ninety-nine years, with a proviso for cesser on payment of the jointure during her life, & all arrears at her death.—*WYKHAM v. the later Act referred to "the powers of jointuring contained in the earlier Act, & Sect. 9 enacted that the "powers in the recited Act contained or implied of giving the lands for the jointure of a wife" should be exercisable either previously to or after a marriage.

In 1901 M. became tenant in tail in possession of the estates & in 1902, having by a codicil to his will purported, "in the exercise of all powers contained in" the two private Acts, "or either of them," to appoint & give the estates to his wife, who survived him, for life "by way of jointure." The question being raised whether M. had power to appoint the income of the estates for the jointure of a surviving wife:—Held: although a power to jointure by "will" was not actually mentioned in the earlier Act, & in fact could not have then been contemplated, inasmuch as, apart from custom, a will had no operation before Statute of Devises, 1540 (c. 1), yet upon the principle stated in Vernon's Case, No. 1238, ante, that "an Act of late time shall be taken within the equity of an Act made long time before," a jointure under the power conferred upon a tenant in tail by the earlier Act could, under the present law, be well created by a testamentary instrument.—*Re BOLTON ESTATES, RUSSELL v. 1259. Restriction on total charge by way of jointure.—Exercise of power in settlement & resettlement.]—A settlement, after limiting two estates to A. for life, remainder to his first & other sons in strict settlement, remainder to M. for life, with remainder over, required each person when in possession to assume the name & arms of the settlor; gave to the tenants for life powers of leasing & of charging the estates with a jointure of £400 a year, & a sum of £2,000 for younger children; & reserved to the settlor a power of revocation & new appointment as to one of the estates. The settlor subsequently exercised that power by revoking, as to one of the estates, the remainder to M. for life, & the limitations over; & by appointing that estate to S. for life, with remainders over; & by the deed of revocation & new appointment, he imposed upon each of them, A. & S., when entitled as tenants for life in possession, "under the limitations aforesaid," the condition of assuming his name & arms, & gave them the power of charging the estate with a jointure of £400 & with £3,000 for younger children, but directed that there never should be more than the yearly sum of £400 a year payable out of any part of the premises as a jointure at one time:—Held: the second deed did not give A., when tenant for life in possession, the power of appointing a second sum of £400 as a jointure to his wife.—WIGSELL v. SMITH (1828), 5 Russ. 299; 38 E. R. 1039, L. C.

1260. — Exercise as often as donee shall marry.—Divorce & re-marriage of donee.]—By a deed of resettlement of family estates power was given to the second tenant for life "to appoint to any woman whom he may marry" for her life a jointure rentcharge not exceeding the yearly sum of £2,500 to be charged on the estates. It was declared that the power might be exercised as often as the donee should marry. There was a proviso that the charge on the estates by way of jointure should not at any one time exceed in the whole the annual sum of £4,000. In 1869 the donee married & by a settlement made on his marriage he, in exercise of the power, appointed to his wife during her life, in case she should survive him, a jointure rentcharge of £2,500. In 1883 the marriage was dissolved on the wife's petition. In 1888 the donee married again, & by a post-nuptial settlement he, in exercise of the power, appointed to his second wife, during her life, in case she should survive him, a jointure rentcharge of £2,500. In 1892 the donee died. Both the wives survived him:—Held: (1) the appointment of a jointure to the second wife was authorised by the power, though she could not receive more than £1,500 a year during the life of the first wife; (2) though the power operated to make provision for the event of a divorce of the donee from his first wife, it was not thereby rendered illegal or contrary to public policy.—*MARLBOROUGH (LILY, DUCHESS) v. 1263. — — — Approval of draft deed.]—T. by his will made in 1882 devised real estate & declared that it should be lawful for every tenant for life thereof to charge it by deed or will with a jointure not exceeding £400 a year in favour of his wife. In 1885 N., testator's son, executed a marriage settlement whereby he covenanted to charge all real & personal estate which might come to him from his father with the payment of a jointure of £400 a year to his wife. At the date of the settlement testator was still alive, & the power to charge had not come into existence.

date of the will about £2,000 out of the rents of said lands:—Held: the charge by his will of a jointure of £200 a year was valid if £2,000 was received, & if said sum was not received the jointure should abate proportionally.—BREKE

He died in 1886, & N. became tenant for life of his real estate & donee of the power. In June, 1892, a draft deed was settled & approved on behalf of N., whereby he charged the real estate with £400 a year for his wife; but he died a few days afterwards without having executed the deed. His widow claimed a jointure of £400 a year:—Held: the covenant in the settlement was a defective execution of the power to which the ct. would give effect; the approval of the draft deed operated as a selection of the property to be charged; & the widow was entitled to a jointure of £400 a year charged on the real estate devised by testator.—CHARLTON v. Equity will supply the defective execution of powers in favour of purchasers, creditors, wives & younger children.

1274. ———.]—The donee of a power to jointure may exercise it in favour of his wife in accordance with a bargain by which he himself is benefited, provided this is done, not by diverting from her any part of the jointure itself, but by applying it to its proper use in consideration of his getting something which he is at liberty to take for his own benefit.

A wife may hold a jointure, the whole of which is intended to be enjoyed by herself though she has obtained it by a post-nuptial bargain with her husband & given him or his creditors as a consideration some interest in her own property. The ct. will not inquire into the quantum of the consideration.

Testator devised real estate to certain uses, & declared that it should be lawful for each tenant for life under the will, either in contemplation of marriage or after marriage, to charge the hereditaments with the payment of any annual sum not exceeding £300 to any woman whom he should marry for her life. In 1868 the tenant for life married pltf.; & in 1882, whilst they were living apart, he, in consideration of £50 paid to him by her, executed a deed whereby he charged the property with the payment to her, if she should survive him, of the yearly sum of £300 for her life. There was evidence that the jointure was not at that time worth £50. The tenant for life died in 1902:—Held: the transaction was not a corrupt bargain nor a fraud on the power, but the widow was entitled to receive the jointure.

While an appointment by way of jointure, as the result of a bargain between husband & wife or between intended husband & wife, that part of the jointure shall go or be for the benefit of the husband's creditors or a stranger is bad to the extent of that part, yet the rest of the bargain may stand so far as the jointure is to be enjoyed by the wife herself (ROMER, L.J.).—SAUNDERS v. 1275. ——— Benefit to husband.]—If a power of jointuring be exercised on a corrupt bargain for some benefit to be given to the husband, the fraud being only upon the donor of the power, the ct. will sever the appointment, & hold it to be good so far as it is for the benefit of the jointress & bad as to the rest.—ROWLEY v. ROWLEY (1854), Kay, 242; 2 Eq. Rep. 241; 23 L. J. Ch. 275; 23 L. T. O. S. 55; 18 Jur. 306; 69 E. R. 103.

appointment, it clearly appearing that the donee had no intention whatever of benefiting her & used the power merely as machinery to benefit the stranger; if, however, it had appeared that the donee did intend to benefit the jointress to some extent the appointment might have been upheld pro tanto.—WHELAN v. PALMER (1888), 39 Ch. D. 648; 57 L. J. Ch. 784; 58 L. T. 937; 36 W. R. 587; 4 T. L. R. 486.

1330. — Estate in land.—The word portion, with respect to younger children, includes an estate in land as well as in money, & this land, in the computation of the estate to be distributed, is to be added to, & computed with other parts of it; but with respect to the eldest son, whatever land came to him from his father by descent, or otherwise, he is to have his share, without any consideration of the value of such land (LORD COWPER, C.).—*LLOYD v. 1333. — Sum secured to children—Out of property settled upon parents.—(1) Where a gift to children is not made or secured to them out of property springing from or settled upon their parents, & there is nothing in the nature or context of the instrument to impress upon the gift the character of a portion, it is not a portion within Accumulations Act, 1800 (c. 98), s. 2, & the circumstance, that the gift is a part of the estate of which the parent is the residuary legatee, has not the effect of giving to the gift the character of a portion.

(2) There is no reason, & it is contrary to the policy of Accumulations Act, 1800 (c. 98), to put a strained or forced construction on the term "portions for children" contained in Accumulations Act, 1800 (c. 98), s. 2.—*JONES v. 1335. Portion charged on two estates—Contribution from both.—By a settlement, two estates, one in Norfolk, & the other in Suffolk, are subjected to the raising of a portion of £2,000 to a daughter, by a term of five hundred years, commencing after the respective decease of two several lives; one life upon the Suffolk estate, & the other upon the Norfolk estate. The life on the Suffolk estate fell, & the daughter bringing her bill for the £2,000, J. to whom that estate was come, paid the £2,000. Afterwards the life on the Norfolk estate fell, & the fee simple thereof descended to the daughter. J. that paid the £2,000 shall have contribution out of the Norfolk estate, in proportion to its value, only the Suffolk estate shall be valued as an estate in possession, & the Norfolk estate as an estate in reversion.—*HEVENINGHAM v. 1339. Charge in nature of portion.—A. on the marriage of his son, settles his estate in the usual manner, but subject to a proviso, that if A. did not, in his lifetime, dispose of his daughters in marriage, or raise portions for them out of the profits of his estate, he might at any time, during his life, by will, deed, or other writing, charge the estate so settled, with £1,500, as portions for his daughters. At the time of making this settlement, A. had two daughters, both of whom afterwards, & in his lifetime, married; but instead of giving them any portions in hand, he executed a deed, charging the estate with £750 a piece, payable to their respective husbands.—Held: the husbands were entitled to recover these portions, with interest.—*ODELL v. 1344. Ultimate trust for sum raised as portion—Sum devolves as personality.]—T. by a settlement covenanted with the trustees that, in the event of his dying in the lifetime of his daughter C. before she should have attained twenty-one or married, his heirs, exors., or administrators should within six months after his decease pay to the trustees £10,000 with interest thereon from the day of his decease; & it was declared that, in the event of C. having no child who should attain twenty-one or marry, then the fund, after her decease, should form part of T.'s personal estate. By the same deed T. charged all his real estate with this sum. T. afterwards, in consequence of a requisition made by persons who were advancing him money on mtge., paid the £10,000 to the trustees, who released the estate from it. The trustees subsequently lent part of this sum to T. himself, on mtge. of part of the estates originally subject to the charge, & the rest of it, to other persons. T. died leaving a will, by which he bequeathed his personal estate to plff. & his real estate to the deft. By the same settlement he covenanted with the trustees that the annual value of his settled estate should never fall below a certain sum. One of the sums vested in one of the sons on his attaining twenty-one years, but he subsequently died intestate during the lifetime of his father, leaving his father his sole next-of-kin. The father did not take out administration to his son. The father subsequently died, having by his will devised the property out of which the charges were raisable, but without having made any mention of the existence of the charges:—Held: under the circumstances, there was no indication of any intention on the part of the father to treat the portion coming to him as sole next of kin of his son as still subsisting; it was for the benefit of the father that the portion should sink back into the fee simple; & it had so sunk back accordingly.—*Re FRENCH-BREWSTER'S SETTLEMENTS, WALTERS v. 1355. ———. —Semble: where a tenant for life, having a power to charge the estate after his death for the benefit of his children, levies a fine, the power will be extinguished.

By a marriage settlement, lands were limited to the use of the husband for life, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to trustees for a term of four hundred years, to commence from the decease of the survivor of the husband & wife, remainder to the heirs of the body of the wife begotten by the husband, remainder to the heirs of the husband. The trust of the term was, in case there should be issue of the marriage a son & one or more younger child or children, who should live to attain his, her, or their age or ages of twenty-one years, to raise such sum, not exceeding £200 in the whole, as the husband & wife should by any deed or writing appoint, or in default thereof, as the survivor should by deed or writing, or his or her last will or testament, appoint; & in default of such appointment, or subject thereto, after the moneys so appointed should have been raised, & the costs of the trustees paid, the term was to cease or be assigned in trust to attend the inheritance. There were younger children of the marriage who attained twenty-one. The wife died without having joined in any appointment, & afterwards the husband levied a fine of the premises:—Held: the power was extinguished by the fine.—BICKLEY v. GUEST (1831), 1 Russ. & M. 440; 39 E. R. 170.

1357. ———. ——A power given to a tenant for life to charge the inheritance with portions for younger children may be released not only by an instrument expressly releasing it, but by dealings manifestly inconsistent with its exercise. The donee of the power cannot be allowed to derogate from his own grant. Ordinary covenants for title do not suffice to release the power, if the property is in terms assured or appointed subject to the power, the presumption being strong that such covenants are only ancillary to the assurance & are not intended to enlarge its operations.

By a marriage settlement in 1822 certain real estates were settled to the use of the husband for life, with remainder, subject to a long term of years for securing portions for younger children, to the use of his first & other sons successively in tail male, & he was thereby empowered by deed or will to charge a further sum for portions for younger children. By a disentailing deed in 1854 his eldest son, with his consent as protector of the settlement, assured the settled estates in fee simple, subject to the uses, estates, & terms limited in the settlement anterior to the limitations in tail male & all powers to such precedent estates belonging or annexed, to such uses as the father & son should by deed jointly appoint. They thereupon in exercise of the joint power created three mtges. upon the estates. Each mtge. deed contained (inter alia) a joint & several covenant by them for quiet enjoyment "free & clear & freely & clearly . . . released . . . & indemnified of from & against all & all manner of . . . portions, & especially" certain specified charges, but the power to appoint further portions was not specially mentioned. The father survived his son & died in 1896, having by his will charged the estates with the further sum for portions for younger children:—Held: upon the construction of the mtges. the power to appoint further portions had not been released, & therefore, the portions charge had priority over the mtges.—*NOTTIDGE v. B. Construction.

1360. Whether general power cut down—Particular proviso.—A general power to raise portions for daughters, may be restrained & qualified by a particular proviso.—FANE v. DEVONSHIRE (DUKE) (1718), 6 Bro. Parl. Cas. 137; 2 E. R. 981, H. L.

1361. ———. Question of circumstances of case.—Where the intention of a settlement appears from the recitals, to be to secure a provision for children, it is a question of the actual circumstances in each particular case whether a power in the settlement, which is in terms general, must be cut down to a particular power in favour of children only.—MINTON v. KIRWOOD (1868), 3 Ch. App. 614; 37 L. J. Ch. 606; 18 L. T. 781; 10 W. R. 991, L. JJ. Annotation:—Refd. Heasman v. Pearse (1871), L. R. 11 Eq. 522.

1362. Power given by reference to another power—Free from contingencies applicable to other power.—A., tenant for life in possession, joined with B., the next heir, in the settlement of certain estates. The settlement contained, among other things, a power for B., in case of the death of his first wife & his marrying again, to charge the settled estates with portions for the younger children of his second marriage, the amounts being regulated with reference to the number of children that might be born of the first marriage.

Sect. 5.—Portions: Sub-sect. 2, B. & C.]

The deed contained a proviso that if the brothers of B. should respectively come into possession of the settled estates, "either before or after their marriage with any woman or women," they might charge all or any part of the estates with "the like sum or sums of money for the portion or portions of their child or children, other than an eldest or only son, as B. is entitled to do before or after his marriage with any woman or women after the decease of his first-taken wife by virtue of the provision hereinbefore contained:—Held: this was an absolute power, which, with reference to a younger brother of B. succeeding to the settled estates, was not subject to the restrictions & contingencies which applied to B. himself in making a charge for the children of his second marriage. —HARRINGTON (EARL) v. HARRINGTON (COUNTESS DOWAGER) (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 295; 37 L. J. Ch. 858, H. L.

1363. Power exercisable if there should be "not more than two children"—No children born.]—A marriage settlement contained a provision authorising & directing the trustees, on the request of the survivor of the husband & wife, to raise, "if there should be not more than two children of the marriage, the sum of £5,000 & if there should be more than two children, the sum of £3,000." There were no children born of the marriage, & the husband survived his wife. It was, however, contended that the event on which the exercise of the power depended had not occurred, inasmuch as there was no express power to raise any sum in the event of there being no children:—Held: the power was intended to override previous limitations in the settlement; & the only proper & grammatical construction of the words was, that the expression "not more than two children" extended to the case of there being no children. Therefore, the sum of £5,000 was raisable.—WILKINSON v. THORNHILL (1889), 61 L. T. 362.

C. Validity of Execution of Power.

1364. Power to appoint by deed—Instructions in writing for deed—Death before execution.]—Father by a marriage settlement, had power to charge lands with £500 for portions for his daughters; he prepared notes in writing purporting his will; & declared those notes were the effect of his will, but died before it was drawn up in form, & before it was executed; this was decreed to be a good execution of his power.—*SMITH v. father by marriage settlement has a power to make an appointment of a sum not exceeding a sum certain, for portions & maintenance of younger children, in such manner & under such limitations as he shall appoint. He has several younger children, & by his will, taking notice that the rest were provided for by their grandfather, he appoints the whole sum to one. 1370. —.]—(1) A settlement was made in Ireland of estates, some of which were situate there & the rest in England, by which the estates were limited to trustees for a term of years, for raising at a future time £10,000 for portions; & interest at 5 per cent. was to be raised out of the rents for the children's maintenance in the meantime; but the settlement was silent as to the rate of interest on the portions after they had become payable:—Held: the £10,000 must be raised in Irish currency; but not with Irish interest, 6 per cent., but 4 per cent. according to the usual course of the ct.

(2) Under a marriage settlement the husband & wife, having power to appoint £10,000 amongst all their younger children, but in such shares as they should think fit, appointed the whole, in different sums & at different times, to four of the younger children, to the exclusion of the rest:—Held: the three first appointments were good, & only the last void.

(3) Under a marriage settlement, a term was vested in trustees for raising £10,000 for the younger children of the marriage, & subject thereto, the estates were limited to the first & other sons in tail male. Much more than six years after the £10,000 ought to have been raised & paid, the younger children filed a bill, to have that sum raised:—Held: the relation of trustee & cestui que trust existed between the parties; & therefore, Stat. Limitations, which enacts that money to be raised out of land shall not be recoverable but within twenty years next after a right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person capable of giving a receipt for the same, did not apply.—*YOUNG v. 1367 i. Exclusive or unequal appointment.]—A father, having a power of appointment among all his children, by will, purporting to appoint the whole fund, excluded one child, & appointed a portion of the fund to grandchildren, not objects of the power:—Held: the appointment was valid, so far as it related to the portion of the fund appointed to the children.

1372. — Existing prior appointment in equal shares.—(1) By a marriage settlement of 179 certain estates at B. were charged with a sum of £10,000 for portions for the children of the marriage, in equal shares; & by the same instrument power was given to substitute for those estates other estates of equal value, as a fund for raising those portions. By a deed of 1811 the settlor covenanted that, as soon as estates at H. were disincumbered, he would charge them in substitution for the other estates with the payment of £10,000 for portions under the same limitation as had been expressed in the settlement, & would also further charge the same estates at H. with the sum of £30,000 for the younger children of the marriage, to be paid to them in such shares & proportions as he, the settlor, should by deed or will appoint. By a deed of 1816, which was a general conveyance of all the settlor's estates in trust for payment of his debts, reciting amongst other things that the settlor had not then performed the covenant contained in the deed of 1811, it was declared that the trustee of the deed should hold the estates at H., or otherwise convey the same to the trustees of the settlement for the purpose of securing the portions, according to the deed of 1811; & by a deed of 1816, reciting the former deeds, the trustees of the deed of trust by the direction of the settlor, conveyed the estates at H. to the trustee of the settlement, upon trust, after the death of the settlor, to raise £10,000 in lieu & satisfaction of the £10,000 under the settlement, in trust for all & every the children of the marriage, under the same limitations as were contained in the settlement, & upon trust to raise the further sum of £30,000 for all & every the children of the marriage except the eldest son J., in the same manner in all respects, excluding J., as by the indenture of settlement was declared concerning the sum of £10,000 thereby directed to be raised:—Held: the deed of 1817 was a complete execution of the power of appointing the £30,000 contained in the deed of 1811; & consequently, the younger children of the marriage who were living at the time of the execution of the deed of 1817 were entitled to the £30,000 in equal shares.

(2) A father executed a power of appointment under which his four younger children, B., C. D. & E., became entitled, subject to his life interest to £30,000 in equal shares. The father afterwards by several instruments of appointment, affected to appoint the whole fund, to B., C. & D. in the following shares; viz., to B. £13,000, to C. £5,000 & to D. £12,000. E., who was a son, died in his father's lifetime intestate & without issue; whereupon his share devolved to the father. After E.'s decease the father, with a view to support the subsequent appointments, executed a deed poll, declaring that the original appointment under which the children took equally was made by mistake:—Held: though the subsequent appointments were invalid so far as related to the shares of B., C. & D., yet as regarded the share of E. the father was bound by the statement in the deed poll; & E.'s share, amounting to £7,500, must be apportioned between B. & D. in satisfaction pro tanto of the losses which, through the invalidity of the subsequent appointments, had been sustained by their respective shares.—*ARMYTAGUE v. A power was reserved to the settlor of charging the estate by deed or instrument in writing to the extent of £500, for portions of his younger children, & of creating a term for that purpose. By his will the settlor devised the settled estate to plff., his heirs & assigns, subject to & charged with legacies to three daughters of the settlor, amounting together to £500. He afterwards bequeathed the legacies, & directed them to be paid by plff. his heirs & assigns. 1407. — Sale under paramount title.—]

By marriage settlement an estate was settled on the wife & the husband successively for life, with remainder to trustees for a term of six hundred years, & subject thereto to the first & other sons in tail. Other estates were settled free from the portions term, but subject to prior charges which entirely absorbed them. The trusts of the term were if there should be any child or children of the husband & wife other than or besides an eldest or only son, who by virtue of the limitations should for the time being be entitled to the hereditaments & premises, to raise for the portions of such child or children other than or besides such eldest or only son, £5,000 to be vested in such of them as the husband & wife, or the survivor, should appoint, & in default of appointment equally. There were three children of the marriage, two sons & a daughter. In 1841 the estate was sold, under a paramount title, & produced a sum of about £2,400. In 1841, the eldest son died an infant. In 1882 the surviving tenant for life died & the portions became payable. There had been no appointment. The younger son who had become the elder & had attained twenty-one claimed to take a share with his sister of the £2,400:—Held: the effect of the settlement was to give £5,000 to the sister as a first charge on the estate, & the rest of the estate to the brother, & whether the value of the residue were more or less than the portion, or as in this case, nothing at all, the brother had no right to claim any share in the prior charge.—*REID v. A. appoints the £4,000 amongst his younger children, & particularly £2,600 thereof to B. his second son. The eldest son dies six years afterwards, whereby B. became eldest son, & entitled to the whole estate after his father's death; & thereupon A. makes a new appointment of the £2,600 to one of his daughters. Decreed the last appointment to take place; the first being made to B. upon a tacit or implied condition, that he should not become the eldest son.—CHADWICK v. DOLEMAN (1705), 2 Vern. 528; 1 Eq. 1416. — Younger child not taking under original settlement.—Estate disentailed by father & deceased elder child.]—By a marriage settlement estates were limited in strict settlement, subject to a term for raising £15,000 for the portions of all the children of the marriage, except an eldest or only son; & to be vested & paid at such times as the husband should appoint, & in default of appointment, to vest at twenty-one, but not to be paid till after the husband's death: provided that if any son should become an eldest or only son before the time appointed for payment of his portion, then & in default of any such appointment, his share should go to the other children. There was issue of the marriage two sons & three daughters. The eldest son attained twenty-one, together with his father, suffered a recovery of the estates to the use of the father for life, remainder to himself in fee. After all the younger children had attained twenty-one the eldest son died intestate & without issue, whereupon the reversion in fee of the estates descended to the other son. Afterwards the father appointed the £15,000 amongst the son & the three daughters, & directed that the shares should vest immediately, but should not be paid till after his death. The second son died before the father:—Held: the share of the £15,000 appointed to him did not go over to his sisters, but belonged to his estate.—SPENCER v. SPENCER (1836), 8 Sim. 87; 5 L. J. 1420. —————C., who died in 1857, by deed in 1852, appointed a fund to trustees in trust for his daughter W. for life, & after her death in trust for the child or all the children, "except an eldest or only son" if more than one, of W., who should attain twenty-one or marry; & failing such trusts then over. W. died in 1883, having had four children only, viz. T., her eldest born son, who attained twenty-one in Jan. 1869, & died in Apr. following, F., who attained twenty-one in 1880, H., who attained twenty-one in 1865, & E., who died in infancy, in 1864; so that the fund vested in H., subject to let in other children, in the lifetime of the eldest born son, & before he attained twenty-one. At the date of the deed certain estates stood limited under a settlement, to which C. was a party, to the use of X., the husband of W., for life with remainder to the use of the first & other sons of X. & W. in tail male. In Mar. 1869, X. & his son T., disentailed the estates, & limited them to the appointees of both, or of the survivor. The joint power was not exercised; but after the death of T. X. by will appointed the estates to F. for life, with remainder to his sons in tail male. Upon W.'s death F. claimed half the fund, & H., the whole of it:—Held: (1) if the expression "eldest or only son" was to be read as referring to a son entitled under a settlement to settled estates, the time for ascertaining the excluded son would be the time for distributing the younger children's portions; but if that expression was to be read according to its natural meaning, the time of vesting would be the time for exclusion; (2) the words an "eldest or only son" prima facie mean an individual, & as there was an eldest son in existence when the provision vested in H. the clause of exclusion applied to him, & its operation was exhausted, so that any other son who attained twenty-one was entitled to take; F. was entitled to one-half of the fund.

parentis.—(1) The rule, that a limitation in favour of younger children will not operate in favour of a younger child who becomes an eldest son & succeeds to the estates, is confined to cases where the provision is made by a parent or a person in loco parentis.

Where, in a marriage settlement, the husband covenanted to pay £10,000 for the children of the marriage; & for want of such children, for the children of the wife by a former marriage, other than A., her eldest son, as the husband should appoint; & in default, for all who should attain twenty-one, equally, or, if only one, then for such one younger child:—Held: the wife could not be considered as purchasing the provision in such a sense as to make her the settlor; & the settlement was not by a person in loco parentis.

(2) In cases of provisions made by strangers, the time for ascertaining the class of younger children is in general the period of vesting, not the period of distribution as in settlements by parents.—SANDEMAN v. MACKENZIE (1861), 1 John. & H. 613; 30 L. J. Ch. 838; 5 L. T. 175; 7 Jur. N. S. 1231; 70 E. R. 889.

In 1845 the daughter married, & by her marriage settlement a life estate was given to the husband & a term of years was limited upon trusts, in the events which happened, after the death of the survivor of the husband & wife to raise the portions to vest in & be payable to younger sons at twenty-one & daughters at that age or marriage, but payment to be postponed until the death of the survivor of the husband & wife, unless the husband should signify in writing that the same should be sooner paid. There were three children, two sons & a daughter, all of whom attained twenty-one before 1882, when the mother died. In 1897, W., the younger son, mortgaged his portion, £3,000, the father joining in the mtge. deed to signify that the sum should be raisable immediately. In 1900 W., on the death of his elder brother without issue, became the eldest son, & in 1905, on the death of the father, succeeded to the estates as tenant in tail, & afterwards died without issue. The question then arose whether W.'s estate was entitled to have the £3,000, raised & paid:—Held: upon the construction of the will & settlement & in the events which happened the wife's power of appointment among younger children had not been exercised in favour of W. & his estate was not entitled to the £3,000.—Re STAWELL'S TRUSTS, *POOLE v. The eldest grandson died before the period when the amount could be raised or he became entitled to the other property:—Held: his representative was entitled to share in the fund to be raised for the younger children.

(2) "Eldest son for the time being" denotes not the person who was actually the eldest son at the date of the deed, but that individual who at a particular future period, that is, when the money is directed to be raised, might be the eldest son.—*ELLISON v. 1429. ———.—In a settlement where there is a clause excluding the eldest son from the benefit of a fund provided for children other than an eldest son, the time for ascertaining who fills the character of eldest son is the period fixed by the settlement for the distribution of the fund. In such a case "eldest" is not solely senior in age. A. was, under a will, tenant for life of an estate, remainder to his first & other sons in tail. On A.'s marriage a settlement was executed by which a fund was created & vested in trustees for the husband & wife for life, & after the decease of the survivor for the benefit of the children of the marriage, "other than & except an eldest son entitled under the will to an estate in tail male in possession or remainder immediately expectant on the death of A." There was a power of appointment in this husband & wife, & in the survivor of them. There were three children of the marriage—a son & two daughters. No joint appointment was made. The wife died. The son, on attaining twenty-one, joined with his father in barring the entail & resettling the estate, which was settled on the father for life, on the son for life, & on the sons of the son in tail. The father appointed one moiety of the trust fund to a daughter on her marriage. No appointment was made of the other moiety. On the death of the father the son claimed a share of the trust fund:—Held: though the character of eldest son was to be ascertained at the time of distribution of the fund, the son here was to be treated as the "eldest son entitled under the will," & consequently was not entitled to a share of the trust fund, for that his resettlement of the estate, & his taking under such resettlement an estate different from that given by the will, had in no way affected the character of "eldest son entitled under the will" which belonged to him when he came of age.

Although it should be, in terms, said in the settlement that the elder child is not to have a portion, yet if under such a settlement the one who is really the elder child, the first born, does not take the family estate, it has been held that, the family estate going to a younger son, which I also ought, indeed, to have mentioned as a leading part of that same system of exposition, the Ct. of Ch. does not regard the elder born as the elder son, but regards the younger brother who is in possession of the family estate, as the elder, & the actually elder brother as the younger, in order to introduce him as a younger brother into the benefits of the portions provided for the younger children (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).—*COLLINGWOOD v. 1433. ———.—By a marriage settlement made in 1828 real estate was limited to trustees upon trust to raise portions for the younger children of the marriage, such portions to vest at twenty-one in the case of sons, or, in the case of daughters, at twenty-one or marriage under that age. The settlement further provided that if any of the children for whom portions were intended, being a son or sons, should die under twenty-one "or should, before attaining such age, become an eldest or only son," then the share in the portions fund of the child so dying, or of the son so becoming an eldest or only son, was to go to the survivors or survivor who should live to attain a vested interest therein. G., a younger son of the marriage, in whom a share in the portions fund became vested by his attaining twenty-one in his father's lifetime, subsequently became the eldest son by the death of his elder brother in the lifetime of his father:—Held: according to the true construction of the settlement, G. was a

If the husband should survive the wife, the portion not to be payable until after his decease. Powers were also contained in the arts. for raising any part of the portion or portions for advancement; & during the suspense of vesting, of raising interest on the portions for maintenance & education.

There were three younger children of the marriage, two of whom died in infancy. The husband survived the wife, & the present petitioner, a daughter, now the sole surviving younger child, was a married woman:—Held: as there were three younger children born, the only part of the trust which could come into operation was that which related to the sum of £15,000; & petitioner was entitled to a portion of £15,000.—*HEMMING v. £800 per annum, reserving to himself a power of charging the same with £1,200 for the portions of his younger children. A. charged the estate with only £800, but because the value of the lands was defective, the son refused to pay these portions:—Held: the portions were well charged, as they only amounted to a moiety of what the father had power to charge, & if there was a deficiency in the value of the lands, the son ought to sue upon the covenant for satisfaction, out of his father's assets.—*ORMSBY v. There were three daughters of the marriage, & the eldest claimed to be entitled to a portion of £500, but held, that she was only entitled to a portion of £200.—CHAMBERLAIN v. WHITE (1720), 6 Bro. 1445. Power to appoint sum not exceeding certain amount—Provision for larger aggregate sums in default of appointment—Shares of children dying to go to survivors—Larger sum payable.—A. settles his estate to his sister B. for life, remainder to her second & other sons in tail, etc., & gives her a power with the consent of C. her husband & for C. surviving B., to charge it with a sum not exceeding £12,000 for their children; & if they or the survivor of them do not appoint the provision, then £2,000 each to be raised for younger sons, & £3,000 each for daughters, at their ages of twenty-one, with interest at £5 per cent. for their maintenance to commence from the time of the appointment; & if no appointment, then from the death of the survivor of B. & C., & if any of the younger children die before their shares become payable, the same to go to the survivors. A. dies, C. dies, leaving four younger sons & two daughters: one of which died an infant soon after her father; then B. dies without making any appointment, the whole £14,000 shall be raised, & carry interest only from the death of B.—ROLT v. ROLT (1735), Cas. temp. Talb. 189; 25 E. R. 731, L. C.

1446. Settlement varied by private Act.—By settlement, estates were limited to A. for life, with remainder to trustees for a term of years, for raising £4,000 for the portions of his younger children, remainder to his first & other sons in tail male. There was one son, B., & two daughters, C. & D. By Act of Parliament passed during the children's minority, the estates were vested in trustees in fee, discharged from the uses of the settlement, upon trust to raise by mtge. or sale, the expenses of the Act, & of the trusts, & afterwards certain portions affecting the estate prior to the settlement, & private debts of A. to a large amount & to convey the unsold estates, & the equity of redemption of those which should be mortgaged, to the uses of the settlement. Under this Act the estates were mortgaged in fee for £41,386 to E., who having died largely indebted to the Crown, & it appearing that the former Act was obtained by false representations, it was provided by another Act, that if on payment of £25,000 into the Exchequer, the real & personal representatives of E. should convey the estates to some person to be approved by B., who had then succeeded to the estate, the estates should be vested in such person, discharged of all claims of E. & of the Crown, to the intent to secure the repayment of the money so paid into the Exchequer, to the person advancing the same, & subject thereto, in trust for securing such proportionable provision for C. & D. as they should be entitled to in respect of the portions originally secured upon the settled estates, & subject thereto in trust for B. The money was paid into the Exchequer, & the estates conveyed accordingly:—Held: C. was entitled to a full half of the £4,000 with interest from A.'s death, & was not bound to contribute towards payment either of the £25,000 or the expenses incurred in obtaining or executing the Acts of Parliament.—*HANSARD v. By his will M. gave to his third daughter E., then unmarried, an annuity for life, & in case she should marry he gave a portion of £5,000 for her children attaining twenty-one, & he charged all the three sums of £5,000 on his real estate. The real estate was settled by the will. In 1880 the tenant for life, who was also legal personal representative of M., commenced an action to get the real estate cleared of the charges. Defts. to that action were the remaindermen. The two portions given to D. & E. were then raisable, & an order was made that those portions should be raised by a mtge. of the estate to be settled by the judge, together with a sum paid for the enfranchisement of certain copyholds, part of the estate. The annuitant R. & the portioners were served with notice of the judgment. The mtge. was executed, & the money paid into ct. & distributed amongst the persons entitled. The mtge. was made by the tenant for life, who was appointed to execute the mtge. for the purpose of conveying the interests of the remaindermen. It contained a recital of the proceedings in the action, & was expressed to be without prejudice to any charge subsisting in the mtged. property under the will. The mtgee. brought an action for a declaration that his mtge. took priority over the third portion:—Held: the course of the proceedings & the orders made showed that the ct. in authorising the mtge. had not intended to interfere with the annuity of R., or the portion raisable for her children, & the mtgee. did not as regards the money advanced other than the enfranchisement money, take priority over that annuity & portion.—NIGHTINGALE v. Testator, in exercise of a power contained in a settlement to appoint portions to the amount of £25,000, appointed the estate to trustees for a term of one thousand years on trust upon the death of a tenant for life, who died in 1915, to raise the portions by mtge. or sale of the hereditaments, or by receipt of the income thereof, or by sale of timber or minerals, or by any other reasonable means, with power in their discretion to postpone the raising of the same. The trustees of the term found that the only practicable way of raising the portions immediately was by mtge. at the rate of 6 per cent. The total value of the estate & capital moneys was estimated at some £171,000. The present tenant for life objected to the immediate raising of the portions & offered to increase the rate of interest on the portions from 4 to 5 per cent. as a condition of postponing the raising of the portions. On a summons for directions taken out by the trustees of the term:—Held: the trustees of the term ought to have regard to the interests of the persons entitled to the estate as well as to the interests of the portioners, & under the circumstances the ct. gave liberty to the trustees to postpone the raising of the portions for the period of one year if & so long as the tenant for life paid the increased rate of interest, with liberty to apply at the end of the year.—*Re SANDYS, UNION OF LONDON & SMITHS BANK v. 1474. ———.]—Under a marriage settlement lands were limited to the use of the intended husband for life, with remainder to trustees to preserve the contingent remainders, with remainder to the intended wife for life, with remainder to trustees for the term of five hundred years, with remainder to the first & other sons of the marriage successively in tail, with remainder to the daughters in tail, & the trusts of the term were declared to be for raising portions for the younger children at twenty-one, by sale or mtge. of the term.

The marriage took effect, & the wife died, leaving her husband & several children of the marriage, both sons & daughters, surviving her, who all attained the age of twenty-one:—Held: the younger children were entitled to have their portions raised by sale or mtge. of the term in the lifetime of their father, the tenant for life.

In the construction of marriage settlement, etc. of equity will decline to act upon any views of the expediency or in expediency of the provisions in such settlements.

I take the rule . . . to be this, that where a term is limited in remainder to commence in possession after the death of the father, yet if the trust is to raise a portion payable at a fixed period, the child shall not wait for the death of the father before the portion is raised, but at the fixed period may compel a sale of the term; & secondly, where the period is not fixed by the original settlement, but depends on a contingency, the rule applies as soon as the contingency happens: & thirdly, where not only the period, but the class of children in favour of whom the portions are to be raised, depends on a contingency, as when it is limited to take effect, in case the father dies without issue male by his wife, there, also, on the contingency happening by the death of the wife without issue male, the portions are raisable immediately, & the term is saleable in the lifetime of the father. . . .

LORD ELDON . . . has, I think, laid down the rule on its true & sound foundation—that the ct. holding an equal mind ought to look at all the circumstances, & to see what, on a sound construction of the instrument, was the actual intention of the party. I entirely adopt this principle (ALDERSON, B.).—SMYTH v. FOLEY (1838), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 142; 7 L. J. Ex. Eq. 34; 160 E. R. 684.

A marriage having taken place with the consent of the mother & the privity of the trustee, but without any settlement by the neglect of the trustee, the husband having before & after the marriage offered all, that was required of him, & been ready to execute a settlement within the condition, relief was given upon those circumstances by raising the portion upon executing the settlement.—*O'CALLAGHAN v. 1532. — — — — —.—Inclusion of costs of effecting security.—Power to raise a sum of money by mtge. includes power to raise also by mtge. the costs of effecting the security.

Trustees of a marriage settlement made in 1802 were empowered to raise & levy the sum of £6,000 for portions on the security of a term of three hundred years in certain freeholds. Part of the £6,000 was raised. In 1872 it became necessary to raise the residue, which then amounted to the sum of £3,290 8s. 4d. By an order then made in this suit which was instituted for the execution of the trusts of certain indentures of settlement, certain trustees were authorised to advance this amount out of their trust funds upon the security of the term. Considerable costs had to be incurred in effecting the security, & it was now asked that the lastly named trustees might be at liberty to advance a further sum out of their trust funds upon the same security to cover the costs so incurred:—Held: the term of three hundred years might properly be taken as a security, not only for the whole amount of £6,000, but also for the costs.—ARMSTRONG v. OTWAY (1866), 1 L. R. 2 Eq. 725; sub nom. OTWAY-CAVE v. CAVE, 15 W. R. 6.

1537. Out of capital moneys.—By a settlement dated Oct. 2, 1906, lands & other hereditaments in Yorkshire were settled in the events which happened to the use of trustees for a term of ninety-nine years if G. should so long live upon the trusts therein mentioned, & subject thereto to the use of G. for life, & after his death to the use that his wife should receive during the remainder of her life a yearly rentcharge of £800, & subject & charged as aforesaid to the use of trustees for the term of a thousand years from the death of G. upon the trusts thereafter declared with divers remainders over. The trusts of the thousand years' term were, in the event which happened of G. leaving five younger children, that the trustees "shall," after the death of G. or in his lifetime, at his request in writing raise the sum of £25,000 for portions to go to or amongst all or any the younger children of G. & their issue as G. should by deed or will appoint. In a deed dated Nov. 4, 1920, appointing this sum amongst these younger children & their issue, G. requested the trustees to raise this sum by any means authorised by the settlement or by law or preferably, if the law permitted, out of capital moneys; & on Jan. 13, 1921, G. in writing requested & directed his trustees to raise the sum out of capital moneys. This summons raised the question whether the trustees could & ought to comply with G.'s direction. There was evidence that it was desirable to do so if it was lawfully possible:—Held: although Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 21, did not sanction the application of capital moneys in the manner directed, the ct. would sanction such application subject to the consent being obtained of incumbrancers or persons whose interests had priority to the thousand years' term, because if, as the trustees were bound to do at the direction of G., they raised the sum of £25,000 by mtge. of the reversionary term of a thousand years, such mtge. would be an incumbrance "affecting the inheritance" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 21 (ii), so that it could at once be discharged out of capital moneys. It was not the practice of the ct. to leave trustees to do indirectly what it would involve less expense to do directly.—Re GIBBOROUGH'S (LORD) SETTLED ESTATES, [1921] 2 Ch. 39; 90 L. J. The eldest son brings his bill controverting the validity of the deeds, & insisting that the personal estate was liable to make good the several charges so far as it would extend:—Held: the personal estate should go according to the will, & each particular estate should bear the specific charge made upon it.—*FERRIERS (EARL) v. Estate not in possession.—See No. 1499, ante.

1547. Right to accumulate.—Directing a gross sum to be raised does not imply that it shall be raised at once, for it may be raised out of the rents & profits, & so laid up till it amounts to that sum.

This ct. lays great stress upon a particular time being appointed for the payment of a portion, & has enlarged the power of trustees to raise it within the time.

If the surplus profits will not be sufficient to answer the purpose, then I shall be strongly inclined that the estate shall be sold to make up the deficiency (LORD HARDWICKE, C.)—OKEDEN v. OKEDEN (1738), 1 Atk. 550; 26 E. R. 345; sub nom. OKEDEN v. WALTER, West temp. Hard. 514, L. C.

Rolfe, No. 1646, post; & having regard to the terms of the limitation over, after the trusts for G.'s children, & notwithstanding the different form in which the trusts for the children of M. & E. were expressed, two children of G. who attained twenty-one, & subsequently died in his lifetime, took vested & transmissible interests equally with those of G.'s children who survived him: the rule being that, whereas, in ordinary instruments, an express estate thereby limited cannot be enlarged except by necessary inference, yet, upon instruments of this description, there is an implication of law, arising upon the instrument itself, subject to any expression to the contrary, that it is the intention of any person who places himself in loco parentis to provide portions for children or grandchildren, as the case may be, at the period when such portions will be wanted, namely, upon their attaining the age of twenty-one, or, in the case of daughters, upon their attaining that age or marriage; & such portions shall then vest, whether the children do or do not survive their parents.—SWALLOW v. 1590. ——— Settlement by person in loco parentis.]—SWALLOW v. BINNS, No. 1584, ante.

1591. ——— ]—In construing a will equally with a settlement made by a person in loco parentis, the ct. leans to the presumption that the intention is to vest the portions in the children when they most require it, whether they survive the tenant for life or not; & where there is any reasonable ground for supposing such an intention, the benefit of any doubt is to be given in favour of the vesting.

Testatrix, after giving certain property upon trust for S., her adopted daughter, for life, & after her death for the benefit of all her children, in the same manner as thereafter declared respecting one moiety of the residue, bequeathed the residue upon trust for S. for life, & after her decease, as to one moiety, for all the children of S. who should be living at the time of her decease, to be paid to them at the age of twenty-one or marriage; but if such times should happen in the lifetime of S., the payment to be postponed till after her decease; but testatrix directed that the same should become a vested interest in each of the children of S. at twenty-one or marriage. There was a similar limitation of the other moiety. & a gift over in case of the death of all the children under twenty-one or marriage. One of the children attained twenty-one in the lifetime of testatrix, but predeceased her:—Held: the representative of such child was entitled to his share.—*JACKSON v. 1594. ——— Presumption rebuttable only on strong grounds.]—The presumption, that a prenuptial settlement is intended to provide for children of the marriage at the time when they require a provision, is so strong that the ct. will not, unless absolutely compelled by the language of the instrument, adopt a construction of such a settlement, which would exclude from its benefit a child who comes of age but does not survive both parents.—CURRIE v. LARKINS (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 245; 3 New Rep. 621; 10 L. T. 47; 10 Jur. N. S. 349; 12 W. R. 515; 46 E. R. 913, L. JJ.

On a bill brought by the daughters for their portions, the ct. decreed the portions to be paid; but on security to refund, if the condition should be broken.

(2) Where portions are provided for daughters by a settlement, the father cannot by his will annex any condition to the payment of them, or devise them over, in case of the death of any of the daughters, before their portions become payable.—ASTON v. ASTON (1703), 2 Vern. 452; 23 E. R. 890.

1598. ——— Validity of immediate vesting—Whether fraud on power.]—W. having a power of charging portions for younger children on real estate under a settlement which gave him in the clearest terms power to fix the ages, & times at which the portions should vest, & contained no provision for raising portions in default of appointment, & having three daughters aged nine, seven, & one, appointed by deed in 1828 £10,000, being the full amount he was entitled to charge for the portions of the daughters, to be a vested interest in the three daughters respectively immediately on the execution of the deed, the portions to be paid to them at such times & in such proportions as he should by deed or will appoint, & in default of appointment to be paid to them share & share alike, at twenty-one or marriage, if the same age or time should happen after his decease, but if in his lifetime, then the payment to be postponed till after his death, unless he should signify his consent in writing to their being raised & paid in his lifetime; maintenance at 4 per cent. to be raised from his death, & the deed contained a power of revocation. In 1832 he made by a deed a similar appointment by way of confirmation of the former, the portions to be vested immediately on the execution of the deed. One daughter married & attained twenty-one, & in 1851 W. appointed £5,000, part of the £10,000, to her. The other two died infants & spinsters, one in 1836, the other in 1845. W. assigned to plff. for value in 1875 the £5,000 appointed to the two deceased daughters, & after his death plff. brought this action to have it raised:—Held: (1) where a donee of a power of charging portions on real estate has, under the terms of the power, clear authority to fix the times at which portions shall vest, & appoints a portion to vest immediately, there is no rule of law which prohibits its being raised in the event of the child dying under twenty-one & unmarried, & the decision could not be supported on the ground that the appointment, so far as it made the portions vest immediately, was not within the power; (2) the decision could not be supported on the ground that the appointment, so far as it made the portions vest immediately, was a fraud on the power as being made with a view to secure a benefit to the appointor; for that having regard to the fact that if the father had died without making any appointment, the children would have been unprovided for, it was manifestly for the benefit of the children that the father should make an appointment, & as there was nothing to lead to the conclusion that when the appointments were made the children were likely to die young, & as in the event of the early death of the appointor the children might have derived a benefit from the absolute vesting of their portions, there was no ground for attributing to him an intention to benefit himself by making the portions vest immediately, plff. was entitled to have the £5,000 raised.

(3) Powers to appoint portions charged on land ought if their language is doubtful to be construed so as not to authorise appointments vesting those portions in the appointees before they want them, that is before they attain twenty-one or if daughters, marry (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(4) Where the language of the power is clear &

Sect. 5.—Portions: Sub-sect. 8, A. & B. (a).]

unambiguous effect must be given to it (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(5) Where upon the true construction of the power & the appointment the portion has not vested in the lifetime of the appointee the portion is not raisable but sinks into the inheritance (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(6) Where upon the true construction of both instruments the portion has vested in the appointee the portion is raisable even though the appointee dies under twenty-one or (if a daughter) unmarried (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(7) Appointments vesting portions charged on land in children of tender years who die soon afterwards are looked at with suspicion, & very little additional evidence of improper motive or object will induce the ct. to set aside the appointment or treat it as invalid, but that without some additional evidence the ct. cannot do so (LINDLEY, L.J.).—*HENTY v. —Settlement on marriage to the use of the husband for life; remainder to trustees for five hundred years in trust after the death of the husband, & not before unless with his consent as therein mentioned, to raise portions for younger children, to be paid in such shares, & at such times, as the husband & wife should appoint; in default of appointment to be paid, if but one besides an eldest or only son, £5,000, if two, £6,000, if three, £8,000, & if four or more £10,000 equally; to be paid respectively at twenty-one, or marriage of daughters if after the age of sixteen, if such times of payment happen after the death of the husband; if in his life, then within twelve months after his decease, & not before, unless with such consent: provided, that if any of such younger children should die before his, her or their portions should become payable, so that the number should be reduced to less than four, no more should be raised than what would make the whole sum for the portion of the survivor or survivors of such younger children equal to the sum originally limited for the portion or portions of such child or children, if one, two, or three. Three younger children only survived their father; but more than four had attained twenty-one. The sum to be raised is £10,000.

If but one had remained, attaining the age of twenty-one, but dying in the lifetime of the parent, it is clear that must have been a vested interest; for there are no words to make it sink for the benefit of the inheritance (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.).—WILLIS v. 1655. ————.]—Power of appointment in a marriage settlement held to comprehend, as its objects, all the children of the marriage, & not to be confined to such of the children only as should be living at the death of the survivor of the parents.

If the settlement clearly & unequivocally makes the right of the child to a provision depend upon its surviving both or either of the parents, a ct. of equity has no authority to control that disposition. If the settlement is incorrectly or ambiguously expressed, if it contains conflicting & contradictory clauses, so as to leave in a degree uncertain the period, at which, or the contingency upon which, the shares are to vest, the ct. leans strongly towards the construction, which gives a vested interest to the child, when that child stands in need of a provision (GRANT, M.R.).—

The term was not to commence in possession until after the death of the survivor. Husband & wife, in execution of the power, directed the £200 to be equally divided between the two daughters six months after the decease of the father & mother; & if either of them died before payment, or the money became due, then the share of her so dying to be laid out for the benefit of her exors. One of the daughters died after the appointment, & before the time of payment. This was a good appointment to the daughters themselves, & the appointment to exors. was void; but as one of the appointees died before time of payment, her share sank into the estate. made to the contingency of their surviving the mother; & though there is an express enumeration of the cases in which the money is not to be payable, the death of a child in the mother's life time, after having attained twenty-one, is not specified as one of those cases:—Held: the interest, which a child who has attained twenty-one takes in these sums, remains contingent during the life of the mother; there not being enough in the subsequent clauses to control the plain words of the covenant.

(2) In the same settlement, the father covenants to pay upon the death of the husband £2,000 to the eldest or only son of the marriage:—Held: this covenant is controlled by subsequent clauses, so as not to give a vested interest upon the death of the father to an only son who was then under age.—*FITZGERALD v. 1673. ————.]—A term was created by a marriage settlement, upon trust, in case the intended husband should die, leaving issue by the intended wife an eldest or only son, who should attain twenty-one, or die before that, if leaving issue & one or more younger child or children; then, after the several deaths of the husband wife; & the commencement of the term, but not sooner, unless with the consent of the husband, to raise portions for the younger children, there being an elder or only son, or the heirs of the body of such son, then living, such portions to be paid to daughters at eighteen or days of marriage, which should first happen after the several deaths of husband & wife, otherwise within three months after the death of the survivor of them:—Held: the representatives of a daughter who attained eighteen married, & died in the lifetime of her parents, were not entitled to her portion.—*WHATFORD v. 1674. ————.]—A clause in a will provided for the date at which the interest should vest in the case of sons, namely, twenty-one. It then provided for the date of the vesting in the case of daughters, namely, twenty-one or marriage. These two provisions were in a continuous sentence, & at the end of the words dealing with the case of daughters came the following passage, "if the same respectively shall happen after the death of H., the father, but if the same should happen in his lifetime, then immediately after his death." Resp., as mtgee. of B.'s one-third share of a portion of £6,000, claimed to have a sum of £2,000 raised, notwithstanding that B. had died in the lifetime of his father, H.:—Held: according to the canon of construction it had been the practice to construe a deed providing portions as vesting the portions at twenty-one, or, in the case of daughters' marriage, unless the deed throughout all its provisions clearly treated the vesting as contingent on the portioner surviving the parent, & therefore the one-third share of the portions sum became vested in B. on his attaining the age of twenty-one, & was not contingent on his surviving his father.—WALLER v. STEVENSON (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 660, H. L.

(b) Out of Personalty.

1675. General rule—Portion payable on happening of event—Though portionist dead.]—By a settlement made previous to the marriage of A. & B. certain exchequer annuities were vested in trustees, in trust for the husband for life, then to the wife for life, & after both their deaths, for the children of the marriage equally, if more than one; & if but one, for such only child; to be assigned over to such child or children respectively, at their ages of twenty-one, happening after the death of the survivor of the father & mother; but if either of the children should attain twenty-one during the joint lives of the father & mother, or the life of the survivor, then his or her share was to be paid within three months after the death of such survivor. But if there should be no children of the marriage, or being such, all of them should die before their shares should become transferable as aforesaid, then the annuities were to go to the survivor of the husband & wife. There was issue only one son, who attained twenty-one, but died in the lifetime of his mother, who survived her husband. Upon a question between her & the son's exor., who was entitled to these exchequer annuities it was held, that they became vested in the son on his attaining twenty-one, & were transmissible & devisable by him, notwithstanding he died in his mother's lifetime.—*JEFFREYS v. There were six children of the marriage, who all attained twenty-one, two of them died in the lifetime of their surviving parent:—Held: the word "payable" must be held to mean "vested," & consequently, the representatives of deceased children were entitled to shares of the stock.—*MOCATTA v. husband & wife, in trust for all the children as tenants in common, & the several issue of the body of such children; & failing issue of any such children, their shares to the use of the surviving children, as tenants in common, & the issue of their bodies. There was a gift over, in case there should be no issue of the marriage, or any issue of such issue, or being such, all should die before their shares should become payable:—Held: the children of the marriage took absolute interests, & the representatives of a child who died an infant, without issue, in the life of his parents, were entitled to a share.—*MOUNT v. 1681. Exclusion of rule—Construction of settlement—Vesting conditional on survival of portionist.—By a marriage settlement trustees were directed to hold a sum of stock, & the income, after the death of the survivor of husband & wife, unto & amongst a child, J., of the husband by a former marriage, & all the children of the then intended marriage, in equal shares, & in case any or either of them should happen to be dead, leaving issue, unto the issue of such one or more which should be then dead, equally to be divided amongst them or their issue respectively, to each being a son at twenty-one, & to each being a daughter at twenty-one or marriage; & until their respective shares should become "payable as aforesaid," upon trusts as to income for maintenance & education. In case J. or either or any of such children of the marriage should die without issue before his, her, or their share should become "due & payable," the share was to be paid & divided unto & amongst the survivors & survivor, & the issue of any one or more of them who might happen to be dead leaving issue, in equal shares, in manner aforesaid, & when & as his, her, or their original or proper share or shares should become "due & payable." In case at the time of the decease of the survivor of husband & wife there should be neither J., nor any child or children of the marriage, nor any issue of J., or of such child or children, living, or if there should be any then living, if all of them should die before his, her, or their share or shares were "payable, then" there was a gift over. In case the trustees should see it necessary or requisite for a child or the issue of a child to have his, her, or their share or shares paid, assigned, or transferred to him, her, or them before the expiration of "the respective times hereinbefore limited for the payment & division thereof respectively," they were empowered to pay or assign & transfer the same accordingly. J. died without leaving issue in the lifetime of the tenant for life:—Held: the provision for the issue of a deceased child relieved the ct. from the necessity of applying the rule in Emperor v. Rolfe, No. 1646, ante; & upon the construction of the whole settlement, the share of J. was divested, & went over to the survivors.

The case of Emperor v. Rolfe, No. 1646, ante, originally established the strong & un rebuttable presumption, that in marriage settlements the shares of children are intended to become vested when they are wanted: that is to say, in the case of sons at twenty-one & of daughters at twenty-

There was a gift over if the husband & wife should die without leaving any issue of their two bodies begotten, or being such, they should all die before they should respectively become entitled to receive their portions, & without leaving issue. Two of the four children of the marriage died infants & unmarried in the lifetime of their parents. Another attained twenty-one & died a bachelor in the lifetime of the father, & the fourth attained twenty-one & survived both parents:—Held: the representative of the child who attained twenty-one & died in the lifetime of the father took nothing; but the whole fund went to the survivor.—*JEYES v. 1723. Proviso for reduction of portion.—If money advanced in lifetime of settlor.]—By settlement on the marriage of G. E. & E. M. a term of six hundred years was created to raise portions for daughters; by which it was provided that in case there should be but one daughter, the sum of £5,000 should be raised for such only daughter, to be paid at eighteen or day of marriage, with maintenance in the meanwhile. There was a proviso in the settlement, that in case the daughters should be advanced with portions in money or lands, equal in value to the portions thereby provided, in the lifetime of G. E. or he should give or leave them money or lands not equal in value, the trustees should raise only so much as should make the money, or value of the lands so given, equal to the portions provided. Applt. E., being the only daughter of the marriage, attained her age in her father's lifetime; who many years afterwards, being possessed of £5,000 East India annuities, which he had saved from the income of the estate, transferred them to applt. E. then a widow. A bill was filed, & the cause was heard before Lord Bathurst; in which there was a decree in favour of applt. for her portion of £5,000, with interest from her father's death; the question of satisfaction not being then before the ct. Resps. afterwards exhibited their bill of review, stating, that since the former decree they had discovered that G. E. had transferred to applt. these East India annuities, in part of her portion. On the hearing of that cause it was declared by the Chancellor, that the annuities were to be considered as having been so transferred in part satisfaction of the portion, & he therefore varied the former decree so far.—*PUGHE v. D. appointed the whole of the portions among his children, appointing £4,000 to his daughter, to be raised at certain specified times, with interest in the meantime at 5 per cent. The trustees being unable to raise the portions by mortgage, an action was brought to carry the trusts into effect:—Held: (1) D. having only a power of distributing the portions & not of charging them, had no power to fix the rate of interest; but the land being in Ireland 5 per cent. was the proper rate to be fixed by the ct.; (2) under the terms of the settlement the trustees of the term had right to apply the rents & profits first in payment of the interest, & secondly in reduction of the capital.—BALFOUR v. COOPER (1883), 23 Ch. D. 472; 52 L. J. Ch. 495; 48 L. T. 323; 31 W. R. 569, C. A.

1729. — — —.]—Where any settlement or contract contains a provision that a certain fixed sum of money is to be charged on land & to be paid at a fixed time, then, as between the owner of the land & the person entitled to the money, the money, in the eye of a ct. of equity, bears interest from the date fixed for payment of the money, although nothing is said as to interest in the settlement or contract—unless there are circumstances negating the presumption that interest is payable.

In 1823 an order was made in a lunacy giving the lunatic's committees power to purchase on his behalf a freehold estate, & to pay the purchase-money out of the rents & profits of his real estate; & the order went on to declare that the rents & profits so to be applied “shall form a lien on the purchased estate in trust for the lunatic, his exors. & administrators”; but the order was silent as to interest. The committees accordingly paid the purchase-money out of the rents & profits of the lunatic's real estate, & in 1824, in consideration of the purchase-money, a conveyance was executed to trustees for the lunatic. The conveyance contained a declaration of lien corresponding to the terms of the order, but again without mentioning interest. In 1828 the lunatic died intestate, leaving a married sister his heiress-at-law & sole next of kin, who thereupon took out administration to his estate. In 1853 she died, when her husband, D., became tenant by the curtesy of the purchased property, & continued in enjoyment as such until his death in 1887. After his wife's death he had taken out administration to her estate, & also to the estate of the lunatic. No steps had ever been taken for raising the amount of the lien or charge, & no interest had ever been paid upon it. In an action by D.'s legal personal representatives against the persons who had become entitled to the purchased estate to enforce the lien:—Held: (1) there had been no merger of the lien either at law or in equity, & nothing to justify a presumption of satisfaction through lapse of time; (2) although interest was not mentioned either in the Order in Lunacy or in the conveyance, the ct. would in accordance with its well settled practice in other cases of equitable charges on land where interest is not mentioned, such as loans on deposit of title deeds, portions & legacies charged on land, & having regard to the circumstances of the case, treat the lien as an interest-bearing debt—that is to say, as bearing interest at 4 per cent. as from the death of the lunatic; & inasmuch as, in the events which had happened, such interest must be regarded as having been virtually paid down to D.'s death in 1887, the lien was not statute barred at that date. As by arrangement between the parties the statute was treated as not running from D.'s death, interest was allowed as from that date.—Re DRAX, SAVILE v. DRAX, [1903] 1 Ch. 781; 72 L. J. 1745. ———.]—An equitable limitation, by way of trust executed, now has the same construction as a legal limitation.

The settlement contains a series of formal limitations in favour of the settlor's wife, the settlor, & their children; but when you come to read the actual words of limitation to the children, the words "heirs" or "fee simple" are not used. If the case had to be decided according to the doctrine of legal limitations, it is plain that these children would only take life interests; but the limitations are, as a fact, only of an equitable interest, & on this point some of the older text writers, such as Cruise, Vol. I., p. 313, & Hayes, Hayes' Conveyancing, 5th Ed., Vol. I., p. 91, seem to have been of opinion that equity regarded the intention of the settlor in these cases, & did not follow the law; so that the ct. had some considerable latitude in the construction of equitable limitations like the present; but the more modern text writers seem to have rather come round in their opinions, & in Elphinstone on the Interpretation of Deeds it is stated an equitable limitation by way of trust executed has the same construction as a legal limitation. . . . Without considering it necessary to review all the authorities again in detail, I hold that these children took a life interest only under the settlement (CHITTY, J.).—Re WHISTON'S SETTLEMENT, LOVATT v. WILLIAMSON, [1894] 1 Ch. 661; 63 L. J. Ch. 273; 70 L. T. 681; 42 W. R. 327; 38 Sol. Jo. 253; 8 R. 175.

1746. ———.]—By a settlement made upon his second marriage the husband conveyed freeholds, subject to existing mtges. thereon, to trustees in fee simple to the use of the wife & himself for successive life interests & after his decease "in trust for the child or children" of the husband "now born or hereafter to be born who shall attain the age of twenty-one years & if more than one in equal shares as tenants in common & if there shall be no such child then in trust for the right heirs" of the husband. The husband then assigned leaseholds, chattels & a policy of insurance upon similar trusts which so far as the children were concerned were expressed in identical terms. The settlement also contained a provision enabling the trustees to "mortgage or charge the premises hereinbefore expressed to be hereby conveyed & assigned with any sum or sums not exceeding together one-half of the expectant share of any child" & to "apply same for his or her benefit or advancement." There was also a hotchpot clause to the effect that no child of his first marriage was "to take any part of the trust premises herein comprised without bringing into hotchpot all sums of money & other benefits which he or she may receive" under an earlier settlement.—Held: the limitations in trust having been perfected & declared by the settlor, they must have the same construction as in the case of legal estates executed, & in the absence of words of limitation the children took life estates only in the freeholds.—*Re BOSTOCK'S SETTLEMENT, NORRISH v. 1747. Exception to rule—Clear intention to pass fee simple.—If the intention of a deed be clear to pass an equitable estate in fee simple, it is not necessary that the proper words of inheritance should be used for the purpose.

By deed of settlement, on Mar. 7, 1818, certain leaseholds were settled, as to a third share thereof, in trust, in the events which happened, for A. & B. absolutely in equal shares. In 1819, certain freeholds were settled "upon such & the same trusts, & for such & the same ends, intents, & purposes, & subject to such & the same powers, provisos, & declarations as in the indenture of Mar. 7, 1818, are expressed, declared, & contained of & concerning the premises therein mentioned & described, or as near thereto as the difference of the respective estates of C., M., & J." (the trustees) "& their respective heirs, exors., & administrators, therein respectively would admit, to the intent that the rents, issues, & profits of the hereditaments & premises might be had, received, & taken, & the hereditaments & premises held, sold, conveyed & assigned, & the produce thereof paid & applied unto such person or persons, & in such manner, & at such time & times, in every respect as in the indenture of Mar. 7, 1818, is expressed & declared of & concerning the premises therein particularly mentioned & described":—Held: the want of proper words of inheritance was not fatal, but A. & B. took equitable estates in fee simple, & not for life only, in one-third share of the freeholds.—*PUGH v. inheritance, may confer the equitable fee upon him where the intention to do so is expressed or sufficiently shown upon the face of the instrument.

By surrender & a settlement dated in 1831 copyhold hereditaments were limited in trust for M. for life, & after her death for her husband, & after the death of the survivor in trust for the children of the marriage equally as tenants in common, & in default of issue then to such uses as M. should declare by her will, with remainder to the right heirs of M. There were three children of the marriage:—Held: there being upon the face of the instrument sufficient indication of intention on the part of the settlor that absolute interests should be given, the three children, notwithstanding the absence of any limitation to their "heirs," were entitled as tenants in common in equal shares for equitable estates in customary fee simple.—Re TRINGHAM'S TRUSTS, *TRINGHAM v. 1750. ———.]—A limitation in a deed of a trust of real estate for a class of children without any words of inheritance may confer the equitable fee upon them where the intention to do so is expressed or sufficiently shown on the face of the instrument.

By a marriage settlement dated in 1831 real estate was conveyed to a trustee upon trust for the husband & wife successively for life, after their death upon trust to convey & transfer the trust estate between or among the children of the marriage as the husband & wife should jointly appoint, & in default as the survivor should appoint, & in default to all the children of the marriage who attained twenty-one, or married, in equal shares. The settlement contained a provision that no child taking under any appointment should receive anything more until all the other children had received shares equal in value to the appointed share; a power of advancement up to one-half the value of each child's share; & a gift over if no child attained a vested interest:—Held: there was on the face of the instrument amply sufficient indication of an intention that the children should take equitable interests in fee simple.—Re OLIVER'S SETTLEMENT, *EVERED v. 1751. ———.]—By a voluntary settlement made in 1869, the settlor after reciting that he was seized of or entitled to the hereditaments thereafter described for an estate of inheritance in fee simple in possession & that, in consideration of the natural love & affection which he bore towards his wife & children, was desirous of conveying the same to the uses upon the trusts & with & subject to the powers & provisions thereafter declared granted unto the trustees therein named, their heirs & assigns certain freehold hereditaments & all the estate, right, title, property, claim & demand of the settlor in, to or out of the same hereditaments to hold the same unto the trustees & their heirs to the uses & upon the trusts thereafter declared, that is to say, upon certain trusts in favour of the settlor & his wife during their joint lives & the life of the survivor, & subject thereto upon trust for such or more of their children as they should by deed jointly appoint, & in default of such appointment as the survivor of them should by deed or will appoint & in default of such appointment then in trust for all their children who being sons should attain twenty-one or being daughters should attain that age or marry in equal shares, the shares of daughters to be for their separate use. The settlor empowered the trustees to apply the annual income of the share or fortune, to which any child should for the time being be entitled in expectancy for his or her maintenance & further empowered them to sell the hereditaments & invest the moneys to arise from such sale & stand possessed of the investments & the income thereof upon the trusts thereafter declared of the hereditaments:—Held. under the trust in default of appointment the children were entitled to equitable estates in fee simple notwithstanding the absence of express words of limitation.—Re GILLIES' SETTLEMENT, *ARCHER v. 1753. Whether interest liable to be devested—On birth of second child—After death of father.]—If a conveyance, in consideration of an intended marriage, be made to the husband for life; remainder to the wife for life; with remainder to the use of all the issues female of their two bodies, & the heirs of the bodies of such issues female; & the husband dies leaving issue a daughter; the remainder in tail to the issues female is not so attached in that daughter as not to be devested for a moiety on the birth of another daughter before the particular estate determines.—MATHEW v. TOMPSON (1698), 5 Mod. Rep. 384; 87 F. R. 720.

1754. Effect of covenant to bar entail—Tenant in tail in remainder—Entitled to freehold.]—One upon his marriage covenants to levy a fine of his freehold, & to surrender his copyhold, to the use of himself & his wife for their lives, remainder to the heirs male of their bodies, remainder to the heirs of their bodies, & dies leaving issue a son & a daughter before any fine levied, or surrender made. The son, for securing of money covenants to levy a fine of the freehold lands, & to surrender the copyhold, & surrenders the copyhold, but dies without having levied a fine & without issue:—Held: it being in case of arts. for valuable consideration, the settlement should be to the first, etc., son of the marriage, with the remainder to the daughters; & the daughter was entitled to the freehold.—

1755. Effect of barring entail—Limitation by way of security—Until particular amount raised from rents & profits.—Father & son, on the son's marriage, by lease & release, convey lands to trustees & their heirs, to the use of the father for life; remainder to his wife for life; remainder to the son for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live; remainder to trustees during his life, to support contingent remainders; remainder to the son's intended wife for life, for her jointure; remainder to the first & every other son of that marriage, in tail male; remainder to the daughter or daughters of that marriage, & the heirs of their bodies, till they shall, out of the rents, issues & profits, have received £3,000; remainder to the heirs of the body of the son; remainder to the second son of the father, & to his first & other sons; remainder to the right heirs of the son, for ever. There were issue of the marriage only two daughters, who being in possession after all the particular precedent estates determined, suffer a common recovery:—Held: this was no bar of the subsequent remainders, the limitation to them being only a security till the £3,000 was raised.—STANHOPE v. 1756. — Proceeds of estate paid into court—Right to payment out—Quasi tenant in tail in possession.—Order made for payment out of ct. of a sum of stock, of which the petitioner was quasi tenant in tail in possession under a settlement, on his producing the deed enrolled, or an affidavit of the enrolment of the deed, whereby, in pursuance of the provisions of Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833 (c. 74), s. 71, he had barred the estate tail & remainders over in the stock in question.—Re SMYTHE (1834), 3 My. & K. 249; 40 E. 1757. — — — Tenant for life & tenant in tail.—Testator devised & bequeathed his real & personal estate unto & to the use of trustees, upon trusts for the benefit of his wife for life; from & after her death, the surplus rents were to be accumulated for the purpose of paying off mtges. on the real estates; & upon the expiration or other determination of the period of accumulation, but subject to the life interest of the wife, the trustees were directed to convey the real estates to the use of G. in tail male; but if G. should be then dead, to the use of the person who should then be the first heir male of the body of G., with remainder to the use of the person who for the time being should be entitled to the dignity & title of Earl of Cardigan in tail male, with remainder to the use of testator's right heirs. By a codicil testator revoked the devise of the estate tail to G., & devised the said estates, after the death of his wife, to R., in tail male, "with all the limitations as in my said will mentioned." R., with the consent of the wife, as protector of the settlement, had executed a disentailing deed of £100,000 Consols in ct., representing proceeds of sale of the settled estates, & the trust for accumulations having now come to an end by the payment off of all the mtges., R. claimed to be absolutely entitled to this fund, subject to the wife's life interest. On a petition for payment out of this fund by the wife & her incumbrancers, with the consent of R.:—Held: (1) as the petitioners & R. together were claiming immediate relief, on the ground that between them they were now absolutely entitled to this £100,000 Consols, the question was ripe for decision, & the ct. had jurisdiction to decide it; & all necessarily unascertained persons were sufficiently represented by the trustees of the will; (2) on the question of construction, R. was now entitled to a vested equitable estate in tail male in remainder expectant upon the decease of testator's wife, & the subsequent estates had been barred by the disentailing deed, being estates to take effect in a certain event after, if not in defeasance of, the vested estate in tail male of R., & the £100,000 Consols in ct. could be paid out to the petitioners.—CARDIGAN (LADY) v. 1758. Construction of settlement—Remainder to "first son."—By a marriage settlement, an estate was limited to the use of J. G. for life, remainder to the use of the first son of J. G. upon A. S., his intended wife, & for default of such issue to the use of the second, third, & other sons of J. G. upon A. S. severally & successively, as they shall be in seniority of age, & of the several heirs male of their several bodies; & for default of such issue, then, in case A. S. should be eniente by J. G. at the time of his death, to the use of T. P. until A. S. should be delivered, in trust for after-born child or children; & in case such child or children should be a son or sons, to the use of such after-born son & sons severally & successively, as they should be in priority of birth, & the heirs male of the body & bodies of such after-born son & sons:—Held: the eldest son of J. G., the settlor, took an estate tail under the above limitations.—GALLEY v. BARRINGTON (1825), 2 Bing. 387; 10 Moore, C. P. 21; 130 E. R. 355.

1760. — — — Right of only son.—The only son of a marriage cannot succeed to an estate which had been limited to A., & his heirs in tail male, "except an eldest son," & does not come in under a proviso giving the estate to A. & "all & every other the son of the body of A., save & except an eldest son."—"Eldest" & "first-born" to be treated as synonymous terms.

H. T., who was possessed of an estate called S., married in 1792, C., who was possessed of an estate called B. They had three children, X., Y. & Z. On the marriage of X. in 1820, the estate of S. was settled on H. default, etc., to Y., & his sons in tail male. On the marriage of Y. in 1834 the estate of B. was settled on H. T., the father, for life, then on his wife, then on X. for life, then to his sons in tail male, & in default, etc., to C. for life, then to the use of X. then to the use of the second son of X. & his heirs male, & in default, to the use of the third, fourth, fifth, & of "all & every other the sons of the body of X. save & except an eldest son, severally, successively, & in remainder one after another," etc., "the elder of such son & sons, other than an eldest son as aforesaid, to be preferred," etc., "& in default or failure, etc., to the use of A., his heirs & assigns for ever." In case, under the deed of 1826, any person of the issue of Y. other & except a youngest or only son, or the heir male of his body, should become entitled to S. then the use of the estate of B. should thereupon cease, & the lands of B. should thereupon go over to the person next entitled. X. had only one son. Y. had no issue. C. had been in possession of the estate B., & was dead:—Held: on her death the ultimate remainder in the estate of B. given to A. took effect under the words which excluded an eldest son of X. holding S., from succeeding to the possession of B., & an only son of X. had no title to B., & was not to be treated as other than an eldest son under the clauses which gave B. to the second, third, fourth, fifth, & all & every other son of X., save & except an eldest son.—*TUTE v. 1786. — Appointment among class—Living at death of appointor & wife—Survivorship as to share of appointee dying under twenty-five.]—In exercise of a power created by a marriage settlement of real estate, executed in 1819, the husband & wife by deed, executed in Sept. 1848, jointly appointed that the estate should after the death of the survivor of them, they being tenants for life under the settlement, be to the use of the three children then born of the only son of the marriage, & all other his child & children who should be living at the death of the survivor of the appointors, & to the heirs & assigns of such of them as should attain the age of twenty-five, equally as tenants in common. But in case either of the three named children of the son & any such other child & children as aforesaid should die under twenty-five, then immediately after his or her death to the use of the survivors or other of them, their, his, or her heirs & assigns. Provided that, in case the appointment intended to be thereby made to the after-born children of the son should from any cause fail of effect, the appointors did thereby further declare that the deed should operate as an appointment of the hereditaments to the three then born children of the son, or such of them as should attain twenty-five, their respective heirs & assigns. The husband died in 1867, & his widow died in Nov. 1873. There were seven children of the son, all of whom were then living, but only the three elder ones had attained twenty-five. The other four attained twenty-five subsequently.—Held: the limitations of the deed of appointment took effect as legal contingent remainders on the death of the widow; each of the seven children of the son took one-seventh of the property for life; & the three who had attained twenty-five at the death of the widow took the remainder in fee, subject to the life estates, equally between them as tenants in common.—*SYMES v. (3) Conveyancers now insert negative words, to prevent portions being raised in a father & mother's lifetime.

(4) A power in trustees of raising portions by rents or by mtge., is no reason for postponing the raising, in order that they may make their election.

(5) Where there is a power of charging land with a gross sum, it imports interest of course.—HALL v. CARTER (1742), 2 Atk. 354; 9 Mod. Rep. 347; 26 E. R. 615.

1790. ———.]—A power to charge a sum in gross implies a power to give any rate of legal interest; & the rule of the ct. to give 4 per cent. applies only where no rate is specified by the party having power to fix it.

The reason of the rule in Chancery to give interest at 4 per cent. only is, that money is generally to be had at that rate; but the rule is not invariable.

Where there is a power to raise portions for children charged upon an estate, that power necessarily imports, that from the time the portion is to be raised, is payable or vested, it is also in the discretion of the party as a necessary consequence of it to prescribe what interest shall be given, provided it does not exceed legal interest. This ct. has, according to my view of it, not upon an arbitrary rule laid down by itself, but upon a consideration of plain & evident convenience, at a particular period fixed, that where there is a charge upon land, & afterwards it was extended, & wisely, to personal property, the interest shall not exceed 4 per cent.

If the party entitled to charge, or to give interest from the time the fund is to be productive, fixes the rate, the ct. cannot control it, or diminish it, if he gives more than 4 per cent. or increase it, if he gives less than legal interest. Therefore the course of the ct. obtains only, where no rate is specified by him, who has a right to fix the sum, & any rate of interest he thinks proper, not exceeding legal interest (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.).—LEWIS v. FREKE (1794), 2 Ves. 507; 30 E. R. 748, L. C.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DISCRETION OF COURT.

1792. Legal tenant for life.—Whether or not legal tenants for life, whose legal estate is subject to a term of years in trustees, there being trusts, for management & payment of incumbrances, ought to be let into possession is a question for the ct. to decide in the exercise of its discretion, & having regard to all the circumstances & in particular the best way of dealing with the property. Such tenants for life are not entitled as of right to be let into possession.—Re STAMFORD & WARRINGTON (EARL), PAYNE v. GREY, [1925] Ch. 162; 94 L. J. Ch. 294; 133 L. T. 337; 69 Sol. Jo. 194; on appeal, [1925] Ch. 589, C. A.

1793. Exercise of discretion—Terms imposed—Undertaking for protection of estate.—(1) The ct. has a judicial discretion as to giving possession upon proper terms, to an equitable tenant for life, & the Settled Land Acts afford additional ground for exercising this discretion in favour of the person having such extensive statutory powers.

(2) A married woman, restrained from anticipation under a settlement [of real estate subject to a rentcharge] by way of trust for sale, which conferred wide powers of management upon the trustees until sale, was held entitled, upon proper undertakings for the protection of the estate & the trustees being given, to be let into possession of the settled land, & to exercise all the powers conferred by the Acts on a tenant for life, except the power of sale & exchange; but as no complaint was made against the conduct of the trustees she was directed to pay the costs of the application.

1797. ———.]—Land which was subject to mtgs. was settled, subject to a term for securing incumbrances, to the use, in the events which happened, of A. for life, with remainders over. The trusts of the term provided that so long as the mtgs. remained unpaid the trustees should receive the rents & profits & manage the premises & keep down the interest of the mtgs. debts & certain rentcharges created by the settlement, that they should then pay to the tenant for life for the time being subject to the term an annuity of £600 a year, & should apply the residue of the rents & profits towards the payment of the principal moneys charged by the mtgs. & there was a proviso for the cesser of the term upon the discharge of the mtgs. debts. The settlement conferred on the trustees an immediate power of sale & exchange, but no power of leasing. The ct. having held that A. was a person having the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), ordered him to be let into possession upon his undertaking to perform the trusts of the terms & gave him the custody of the title deeds.—*Re RICHARDSON, RICHARDSON v. 1798. ——— Form of undertaking.]—

Testator gave his annual ground rents, secured on two estates, to trustees upon trust to collect & apply the same in reduction of a mtge. debt thereon, & subject thereto upon trust as to two-fifths of the annual income for J. for life, as to other two-fifths for P. for life, & as to the remaining one-fifth for L. for life; & he directed that on the decease of either J., P. or L. his or her share of the ground rents should go to his or her children, & testator empowered his trustees to sell the ground rents, pay off the mtge. debt, invest the residuary proceeds of sale, & stand possessed thereof upon the trusts declared respecting the annual ground rents should they remain unsold. Testator died in 1891. J. had three, & P. one, infant children entitled to the ground rents in remainder. The trustees considered it advisable in the interest of all the beneficiaries to retain the ground rents & apply the income in reduction of the mtge. debt thereon, which by Jan. 1901, was reduced to less than half. The mtge. debt became vested in the surviving trustee of the will. Upon a summons taken out by the tenants for life against the surviving trustee & infant remaindermen:—Held: the tenants for life were entitled to immediate possession of the ground rents & to sell them to pay off the mtge. debt & also to delivery up of the documents of title held by the surviving trustee, as trustee, relating to the ground rents.

It is in accordance with the settled practice of the cts. & with the decision of Re Richardson, Richardson v. Richardson, No. 1797, ante, that they should be let into immediate possession on giving a proper undertaking that what remains to be done for the benefit of persons other than the tenants for life shall be duly performed. The undertaking must be the same as in the case of Re Money Kyrle's Settlement, Money Kyrle v. Money Kyrle, No. 1801, post, to pay all outgoing in respect of the ground rents & to keep down the interest on all charges & incumbrances thereon or any part thereof & to account to the trustee for all receipts & payments (COZENS-HARDY, J.).—*Re WILKINSON, LLOYD v. The grandson applied to be given possession of the real estate, & for custody of the title deeds:—Held: (1) the Settled Land Acts have raised a presumption in favour of possession by an equitable tenant for life which did not before exist, & the grandson's application should be granted upon his giving a sufficient undertaking for the preservation of the property.

d. Where trust to pay debts—Accumulation of rents to pay debts.]—Re WOODHOUSE, ANNESLEY v. WOODHOUSE, [1898] 1 I. R. 69.—IR.

sonal estate should not pay; & after such payment, or the raising of a fund sufficient for the same, to permit the person entitled to the estates expectant on the term to enter into possession thereof, subject to such annuities as should then remain charged, & the term then to cease. Testator empowered the tenants for life, & the respective devisees in possession, to exchange part of the devised lands for others of greater or equal value, & authorised his exors. to preserve the wood, so as to continue a succession in the falls thereof, & he empowered them during & after the term, until some person was entitled to the estates in tail, or for some greater estate, to enter & cut timber at mature growth for sale, & to apply the proceeds in payment of his funeral expenses, debts & legacies, until the trusts of the term should be satisfied; & then, with the consent of the devisees in possession, to invest the surplus in the purchase of other lands in fee, to be settled to the same uses as the devised estates. Testator died in 1803. The personal estate sufficed to pay his debts & pecuniary legacies, but not to provide for the annuities. B. then the first tenant for life on the death of testator, entered into possession of the estates, & so continued during his life. B. died in 1837 without issue, whereupon E., the next surviving tenant for life, entered into possession. In a suit instituted in 1842, by the first son of E. as tenant in tail expectant on the decease of E., against the representatives of the trustees, & the exors. of B. deceased tenant for life:—Held: (1) pltf., as such tenant in tail expectant, was not entitled to relief in equity, on the ground that the exchange effected by B. of certain of the devised estates for other estates was not a due exercise of the power of exchange; for, if the exchange was not warranted by the power, the legal estate in the devised premises did not pass by the conveyance.

(2) I do not mean to express any doubt but that when all the above charges had been satisfied, & the settled estates were thereby cleared of all charges except annuities, the arrears of which were paid, the person for the time being entitled in possession to the settled estates subject to the term would be entitled during the residue of the term to the beneficial receipt of the rents & profits of the estates, keeping down the annuities (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—*FERRAND v. 1807. Where trust to pay debts.—On discharge of receiver.—HOSKINS v. CAMPBELL, GIBBON v. CAMPBELL, [1869] W. N. 59.

1808. ———.—Testator, who died in 1844, devised to trustees a moiety of his real estates upon trusts for his son for life, with remainder to his grandson for life & his sons in tail, & to pay all his debts & sums of money as he should owe at the time of his decease, whether by way of mtge. bond, or otherwise, including a sum of £8,000 charged upon the estates; & he directed that the rents & profits of the estates should be received by the trustees & be applied in liquidation of the debts until the whole, including the £8,000, should be paid; that no person to whom any estate for life or in tail was limited should be entitled to the rents & profits until the estates were totally disincumbered & clear of debts; & that the trustees should invest the moneys which might come to their hands upon good security at interest until the same should be applied in payments under the trusts. A receiver had been appointed. The whole of the debts had been paid excepting the £8,000, by sales of parts of the estates under orders of the ct., & there was an accumulation fund in ct. sufficient to pay the £8,000:—Held: the receiver must be discharged, & the tenant for life be let into possession of the estates.—TEWART v. LAWSON (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 490; 43 L. J. Ch. 673; 22 W. R. 822.

1809. ——— Accumulation of rents to pay debts.—Accumulation sufficient for payment.—Testator devised his real estates to the use of pltf. for life, with an ultimate remainder to A. in fee, & provided that the trustees should receive the rents, & after paying thereout the interest on the mtges. affecting the estates, should accumulate the residue "until the amount of such accumulation should be sufficient to discharge the principal of the mtges." Testator directed that, as soon as the accumulations should be sufficient to pay off the mtges., the trustees should forthwith pay off the same. Testator declared that pltf., or other the person for the time being entitled for life or in tail to the estates under the limitations of the will, should not be entitled to receive any part of the rents until the mtges. had been paid off. After testator's death the part of the estates which was subject to a mtge. was sold by the mtges. under their power of sale, in effect, at the request of pltf. & with the sanction of the ct. The proceeds of sale were not enough to pay off the whole of the mtge. debt, & the balance was paid out of the accumulation of rents. A part of the accumulated fund remained:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled, to be let into possession of the estates remaining unsold, & to have the surplus of the accumulated fund paid to him.—NORTON v. JOHNSTONE (1885), 30 Ch. D. 649; 55 L. J. Ch. 222; 34 W. R. 13.

1810. Female tenant for life.—A bare trustee, who, under Fines & Recoveries Act, 1833 (c. 74), s. 31, is protector of a settlement, can insist on retaining the legal estate, only so long as the purposes of the trust exist—that is, so long as, according to the rules of this ct., he is required to be a trustee.

Therefore, where there was a devise of lands to trustees upon trust for testator's daughter during her life, for her separate use, without power of anticipation, with remainder to the use of her children as tenants in common in tail, with remainders over:—Held: testator's daughter, having become discoverte & being sui juris, could compel a conveyance by the trustees of their legal estate.—BUTTANSHAW v. MARTIN (1859), John. 89; 33 L. T. O. S. 300; 70 E. R. 351; sub nom. BURTANSHAW v. MARTIN, 5 Jur. N. S. 647.

1811. ———.—(1) The power of the ct. to make an order allowing an equitable tenant for life to take possession of settled property is discretionary & will only be made upon proper undertakings. The order on an application for the purpose must contain terms protecting the trustees especially where the property is subject, as in the case of leaseholds, to onerous covenants. (2) The application may be made by originating summons, which must be served upon the trustees, & upon the mtgees., if any, of the interest of the tenant for life, though not, under ordinary circumstances, upon the reversioner. (3) Where the tenant for life has mortgaged his interest, the order letting him into possession does not carry with it the right to the custody of the title deeds; these the mtgee. can insist on being retained by the trustees.

(4) A female equitable tenant for life is not necessarily disqualified from being let into possession.—Re NEWEN, NEWEN v. BARNES, [1894] 2 Ch. 297; 63 L. J. Ch. 763; 70 L. T. 653; 58 J. P. 767; 43 W. R. 58; 8 R. 309.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1816. Tenant for life—Subsequent life estate with remainder in fee—Rights of remainderman in fee—Death of intermediate tenant for life.]—Tenant for life, remainder for life, remainder in fee, tenant for life commits waste, he in the remainder for life dies. The remainderman in fee may have an action of waste against the tenant for life.

So also if the remainderman for life, after the waste committed, had surrendered to him in the remainder in fee.—PAGER'S CASE (1593), 5 Co. Rep. 76 b; 77 E. R. 170.

Annotation:—Reid, Harper v. Aplin (1886), 54 L. T. 383.

1820. ——— Property settled on married woman—For her separate use.]—Testator devised his real estate to trustees upon trust for one of his granddaughters, & directed that in the event of her marrying under twenty-one, which event happened, then they should assure same by deed to her for her life to her separate use, without power of anticipation, with remainder to her children as tenants in common in tail with remainders over, with power to the trustees to secure a life interest to the husband after the death of the granddaughter either with or without impeachment for waste.—Held: the life estate of the granddaughter must be subject to impeachment for waste.—CLIVE v. CLIVE (1872), 7 Ch. App. 433; 41 L. J. Ch. 386; 26 L. T. 409; 20 W. R. 477, L. JJ.

1821. ——— On widow “with full & absolute control.”]—By his will G., who died in 1884, devised an estate to his wife M. for life with remainder to his brother F. in fee. M. was appointed sole extrix, with full & absolute control over all testator's property during her life. F. died in 1892, having by his will settled the estate subject to the life interest on pltf. in tail male with remainder over. M. having cut & sold timber, including, oak, ash, & elm of twenty years of age & upwards, this action was brought claiming a declaration that this constituted waste & for an injunction.—Held: on the true construction of the will the words “with full & absolute power over all my property” did not render deft. punishable for waste, but merely conferred large powers of management.—PARDOE v. PARDOE (1900), 82 L. T. 547; 16 T. L. R. 373; 44 Sol. Jo. 449.

1822. ——— Liability under separate instruments.]—Testator by his will devised all his estates to trustees & their heirs to the use of pltf. for life without impeachment of waste, with remainder to his sons successively in tail male. By a codicil he revoked in part the disposition made by his will, & devised part of his estates to trustees, their exors., administrators & assigns during the life of deft., a married woman, without impeachment of waste, upon trust to permit her to receive the rents, issues & profits for her life for her separate use with restraint upon anticipation, & divers remainders over. Subsequently testator conveyed the same hereditaments by deed to the use of a trustee during the life of deft. upon trust to permit her to receive the rents & profits for the life for her separate use without anticipation, with remainders over. Neither the trustee nor the lady herself was made by that instrument punishable for waste.—Held: the life estates given by the codicil were revoked by the settlement, & the life tenants were impeachable of waste under the latter instrument.—JOWNDES v. NORTON (1864), 4 New Rep. 452; 33 L. J. Ch. 583; 11 L. T. 290, L. JJ.

1823. Equitable tenant for life—Remedy of remainderman—Against incumbrances of life interest.]—Equitable tenant for life mortgaged his interest, & afterwards committed waste.—Held: as against the incumbrancers upon the life interest, the remaindermen had an equity to have the injury done to the inheritance made good, & had for that purpose a lien upon the rents in the hands of the trustees of the settlement accrued during the life interest.—BRIGGS v. OXFORD (EARL), BEAVAN v. OXFORD (EARL) (1855), 25 L. T. O. S. 265; 1 Jur. N. S. 817; 3 W. R. 588; on appeal, 4 W. R. 38, L. JJ.

1824. Amelloratory waste — Improvements effected exceeding waste committed.]—When it was shown that the tenant for life, being also ultimate remainderman in fee, had laid out sums in permanent improvements on the estate at least equal to the value of the amount realised by the acts of waste, which were themselves of trivial amount, the bill was dismissed; & where the exor. of a deceased tenant for life, who was also ultimate remainderman in fee, admitted having received the proceeds of certain timber cut or ordered to be cut by his testator, he was allowed in the account to be taken against him, to take credit for the sums laid out by his testator in permanent improvements.—BIRCH-WOLFE v. BIRCH (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 683; 39 L. J. Ch. 345; 23 L. T. 216; 18 W. R. 594.

1825. ———.]—Tenant for life permitted her tenants to dig turf from fen lands. The turf, when sold, realised a considerable sum. It being proved in evidence that such digging, though technically an act of waste, had considerably improved the lands for agricultural purposes:—Held: the tenant for life was not bound to account to the persons entitled in remainder for the value of the turf so removed.—HARRIS v. EKINS (1872), 26 L. T. 827; 20 W. R. 999.

1826. Remedy by injunction.—Tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct.]—Tenant [in tail] after possibility restrained from waste.—ABRAHAM v. BUBB (1679), 2 Show. 69; Freem. Ch. 53; 2 Swan. 172; 89 E. R. 798, L. C.

1828. ——— Right of reversioner or remainderman to be joined.]—A. is tenant for years, remainder to B. for life, remainder to C. in fee; A. is doing waste; B. though he cannot bring waste, as not having the inheritance, yet he is entitled to an injunction, but not unless the reversioner or remainderman in fee be made a party, who possibly may approve of the waste.—*MOLINEUX v. 1829. Position of.]—Tenant for life without impeachment of waste, has as great power to do waste, & to convert it, at his own pleasure, as tenant in tail has. The privilege is annexed to the privacy of estate; if one who has a particular estate without impeachment of waste, changes his estate, he loses his advantage.—BOWLES'S CASE (1615), 11 Co. Rep. 79 b; 77 E. R. 1252; sub nom. BOWLES v. BERRIE, 1 Roll. Rep. 177.

1830. Privilege annexed to the estate.]—A feoffment was made unto A. unto the use of him, & his wife, dispositive of waste during their lives; one died, & the survivor committed waste; it was the opinion of the whole ct., that an action of waste should not lie by him in the reversion; for it is a privilege which is annexed to the estate, which shall continue as long as the estate doth continue.—ANON. (1587), Godb. 132; 78 E. TRACY* (1624), Cro. Jac. 688; W. Jo. 51; 79 E. R. 597.

1835. Right of reversioner to sell timber during life of tenant for life.]—A reversioner cannot sell the timber trees during the life of a tenant for life

1827 i. Remedy by injunction.—Tenant in possession.]—Where the house & buildings were in need of repairs, & proper timber & shingles were obtainable from a dealer, whereas the timber on the place was unsuitable for the repairs needed, & the tenant for life proposed to sell a sufficient amount of timber off the place to pay for what was required, & for that purpose only, & an injunction was sought to restrain him:—Held: no case of waste was made out to justify an injunction, nor could damages be awarded if the timber was cut with due regard to the situation of the bush & the cleared land, & no unreasonable amount was taken off to recoup the cost of the timber used or to be used in the repairs.—HIXON v. REAVELY (1904), 25 C. L. T. 14; 9 O. L. R. 6; 4 O. W. R. 437.—CAN.

1827 ii. ———.]—Action by remainderman to restrain deft. from breaking up ancient pasture:—Held: the farm was an ancient pasture & it would be injurious & burdensome to the inheritance for deft. to break up

1872. ———.]—Effect of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 28 (2).—By virtue of above sect. the operation of which is not limited to the period of a minority, trustees for sale have in relation to the land the powers of management conferred by Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 102, including the power to repair mentioned in sub-sect. 2 (b) & by virtue of sub-sect. (3), power to pay the expenses incurred in management or in the exercise of any of the powers conferred by that sect. out of the income of the land.

Since Jan. 1926, it has become the duty of trustees for sale of settled land to execute the statutory powers so conferred upon them, so far as may be necessary for the performance of their trust; & it is no longer necessary for them to apply the equitable principles of apportioning the expenses between income & capital as explained in Re Hotchkys, Freke v. Calmady, No. 1869, ante.

Therefore, where, in the absence of any express powers or provisions in the settlement relating to repairs, a block of freehold flats, settled in favour of a tenant for life with beneficial remainders over & held upon trust for sale, had not been kept in a proper state of repair for a period of several years, with the result that a considerable sum was required to defray the expenses of substantial structural repairs so rendered necessary:—Held: (1) those repairs were repairs authorised by Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 102 (3) (b), & the expenses thereof were properly incurred by the trustee & payable out of the income of the settled land; (2) even if, upon the proper construction of above sect., those statutory powers were only exercisable during a minority, the expenses incurred by the trustee would, by virtue of above sect, sub-sect. (2), nevertheless, still be payable out of the income of the land, as the expression "repairs" in that sub-sect. bears the same wide meaning as the word "repair" in Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 102 (2) (b).—*Re GRAY, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. The remainderman in fee brought an action against the exor. of the tenant for life in respect of the non-repair of the premises within the period of limitation prescribed by C. L. P. Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 2, which gives a right of action against the exor. of a person deceased in respect of wrongs committed by testator to another in respect of his property:—Held: an action of tort in respect of the permissive waste by non-repair of the premises would have lain at common law against the tenant for life in her lifetime, & lay under C. L. P. Act, 1833 (c. 42), against her exor. after her death.—WOODHOUSE v. WALKER (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 404; 49 L. J. Q. B. 609; 42 L. T. 770; 44 J. P. 666; 28 W. R. 765, D. C.

1884. — Destruction of premises by fire.—A, being devisee for life of premises, with a condition against committing any manner of waste & for keeping same in good & tenantable repair, became lunatic, & the premises were subsequently destroyed by accidental fire. A petition was then presented by the committee of the person who was also remainderman, praying a declaration that the premises ought to be rebuilt at the expense of the lunatic's estate, & a reference as to the amount of such expense, & out of what fund it ought to be defrayed. The Lord Chancellor made an order for the reference, holding that the words of the will created an obligation upon the tenant for life to rebuild the premises, & that the question of such liability was rightly brought before the ct. on the petition.—Re SKINGLEY (1851), 3 Mac. & G. 221; 20 L. 1886. ——Lands were devised in 1861 to trustees during the lives of certain tenants for life, in trust to receive the rents & manage the estate with the powers of absolute owners. An annuity was directed to be paid to the tenant for life in possession out of the rents, & the surplus rents were to be laid out in the purchase of real estates or accumulated for a period of twenty-one years from testator's death, & the income of the accumulations paid to the tenant for life. From the expiration of that period the whole of the surplus rents yearly accruing to be paid to the tenant for life in possession, & also the income of the accumulated surplus. The period of twenty-one years from testator's death expired in Jan. 1885. The trustees named in the will disclaimed, & the property had since been managed by a receiver appointed by the ct. The surplus rents accumulated during the twentyone years amounted to £37,000. Repairs & improvements amounting to between £4,000 & £5,000 were required to be made on the settled property:—Held: such of the proposed works as were in the nature of improvements within the description contained in Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 25, should be provided for out of the £37,000, which was capital money within the Act; & those which were merely repairs must be paid for out of the income of the property.—*CLARKE v. 1889. Estate of deceased tenant for life liable.]—WOODHOUSE v. WALKER, No. 1883, ante.

1890. ——[Testator gave his real estate to trustees upon trust for his widow for life, with remainder over, in events which happened, to A. for life, & in events which happened, to B. for life, with remainders to his children, if any, in tail, with remainders over. The will contained a direction that each tenant for life or in tail of any of the hereditaments should, during her or his estate keep the buildings thereon in substantial repair; & if any such person should neglect to effect such repairs within six months after being thereunto requested by the trustees, the trustees should be at liberty to effect such repairs. The widow of testator was in possession of the hereditaments until her death in June, 1883. Her will was proved in Feb. 1884. She had omitted to repair the buildings. More than six months after her death, but within six months after probate of her will, a claim was carried in against her estate, in an administration action, in respect of the omission to repair, claimants being the trustees of the will & the then equitable tenant for life:—Held: the estate of deceased tenant for life was liable for such omission to repair.—*Re WILLIAMS, ANDREW v. 1891. ——[Testator devised to his wife for life two freehold houses with the buildings, land, & appurtenances thereto belonging, "she keeping same in good & tenantable repair." Testator directed the property to be sold by his trustees after the death of his wife, the proceeds to be held upon the trusts mentioned in his will. After the death of testator his widow entered into possession of the property & continued therein until the date ticularly the outbuildings adjoining one of the houses, consisting of greenhouses & conservatories formerly used in the business of a fruit grower, in whose possession such house was before testator purchased it. An originating summons was accordingly taken out by the trustees of the will, asking that what sum the representative of testator's widow was liable to pay by reason of the property not having been kept by her in good & tenantable repair might be determined. Evidence was adduced to show that the greenhouses were wholly neglected & in complete disrepair at the time testator purchased; that he never intended to put same into repair, but had thought of having them pulled down. It was, therefore contended that the estate of testator's widow was not liable in respect of the repairs required to such greenhouses:—Held: the fact that testator did not himself keep the greenhouses in good & tenantable repair could not be regarded as an excuse for his widow not doing so, having regard to the express direction contained in the will; & her estate was liable for the amount of the repairs required.—Re BRADBROOK, LOCK v. WILLIS (1887), 56 L. T. 106.

E. in fee simple, & it was agreed & declared that S. should keep the settled messuages & buildings in good & tenantable repair, & would keep the grounds in a proper state & insure the messuages, buildings, & furniture against loss or damage by fire. Pltf. & trustees of the settlement claimed performance of the covenants. Deft. alleged that the settled houses & buildings were old, & that he had fulfilled his covenants. A reference for inquiry & report on the matters in dispute had been agreed upon:—Held: the reference ought to be framed on the footing that the tenant for life's obligation to keep in good & tenantable repair rendered him liable to put the premises into such repair although they were not in good & tenantable repair when he took them.—*EVANS v. The leaseholds were in a bad state of repair at the death of testator; the widow kept them up in the same state of repair, but declined to do more than this. The remaindermen applied for an order to oblige the tenant for life to maintain the leaseholds in such a state of repair as to satisfy the covenants in the leases so as to avoid a forfeiture, or else to concur in selling the short leaseholds:—Held: there was no obligation on the tenant for life to put the premises in such a state of repair as to comply with the terms of the leases.—*Re COURTIER, COLES v. 1911. Tenant for life also trustee—Limitation of liability—To period of enjoyment.—By deed poll, in 1878, R., in exercise of a power conferred upon her by the will of her father J. P. deceased, appointed that the trustees of his will should, after her death, stand possessed of certain leasehold houses upon trust, after payment of the rents reserved by the leases under which the same were respectively held & costs of insurance & the performance of the covenants, which included covenants to repair, in the said leases, to pay to Y. or otherwise permit her to receive the rents & profits of the leasehold houses during her life, & after her decease, the same were directed to be held upon trust, in the event which happened, for Y.'s daughters in equal shares.

R. died on Aug. 15, 1882, & after the death, in 1909, of the last surviving trustee of the will, whose personal representatives declined to intermeddle in the trusts thereof or to appoint new trustees, Y. entered into the receipt of the rents of the leasehold houses & continued therein down to her death in 1922. In an action by the daughters of Y. against her personal representatives for damages out of her estate by reason of Y.'s failure, while tenant for life in possession of the leasehold houses, to keep the same in repair in accordance with the covenants in the leases:—Held: upon entering into the receipt of the rents of the leasehold houses under the appointment in her favour with knowledge of the primary trust for the 1914. ——Questions respecting the right to what are ordinarily called fixtures, principally arise between three classes of persons. First between different descriptions of representatives of the same owner of the inheritance; viz. between his heir & exor. In this first case, i.e. as the rule obtains with the most rigour in favour of the inheritance, & against the right to disannex therefrom, & to consider as a personal chattel, anything which has been affixed thereto. Secondly, between the exors. of tenant for life or in tail, & the remainderman or reversioner; in which case the right to fixtures is considered more favourably for exors. than in the preceding case between heir & exor. 1917. ———. —[Whether a chattel is so annexed to the freehold as to be intended as an improvement to it, and to pass with it, or is annexed only for the purpose of temporary use or ornament, so as to be removable, is a question to be decided upon the facts of the case.

Valuable tapestries belonging to a tenant for life were fastened to the walls of the drawing room in a mansion house by fixing small strips of wood by means of nails & screws to the wood with which the walls were lined; canvas was then stretched over the strips of wood & nailed to them, & the tapestries were fastened to the canvas by very small tacks. Mouldings were fixed round the strips of wood by thin nails & screws, some of which penetrated the face of the wall. The tapestries were an essential feature of the general scheme of decoration of the room:—Held: the tapestries were fixed for purposes of ornament in the only way in which it was possible to use & enjoy them, & did not pass to the remainderman on the death of the tenant for life, but were removable by her exors.—*LEIGH v. 1918. ———. Intention of person by whom chattels attached.—A tenant for life of settled estates granted a lease for twenty-one years of a steam mill & machinery. The lessee covenanted that he would at the end of the tenancy sell to the lessor all machinery then on the premises other than the demised machinery; & the lessor covenanted that he would pay for it. The tenant brought additional machinery into & affixed it to the mill. On the expiration of the tenancy the tenant for life bought this machinery under the provisions of the lease. He died, & his extrix. claimed the machinery thus bought:—Held: (1) as between tenant for life & remainderman, chattels affixed to the soil by the tenant for life for purposes of trade did not become part of the freehold, & might be removed by him; (2) the question must be determined by the intention of the person by whom the chattels were attached; & in the absence of evidence to show that the tenant for life intended to make a present to the remainderman, his extrix. was entitled to the machinery.—Re HULSE, BEATTIE v. HULSE, [1905] 1 Ch. 406; 74 L. J. Ch. 246; 92 L. T. 232.

1919. Essential part of house—Or architectural design.—Testator, who was tenant for life of settled estates, on which he had erected, fitted up, & furnished a mansion house, an old one having fallen into decay, bequeathed all the tapestry, marbles, statues, pictures with their frames & glasses, which should be in or about the house at the time of his death, & of which he had power to dispose, to be enjoyed as heirlooms by the persons who, under the limitations in his will, would be entitled to his own estates thereby devised in strict settlement, being the same as those entitled to the settled estates, subject to a condition, with a shifting clause in case the condition were not fulfilled. After testator's death, A. became tenant for life of both the settled & devised estates, & on his death the settled estates devolved on B.; but, as the condition was not fulfilled, C. became entitled to the devised estates & to the heirlooms under the shifting clause in testator's will. The question arose, as between B. & C., which of the articles passed under the will:—Held: (1) tapestry, pictures in panels, frames filled with satin & attached to the walls, & also statues, figures, vases & stone garden seats, purchased & placed by the testator, which were essentially part of the house, or of the architectural design of the building or grounds, however fastened, were fixtures, & could not be removed; but glasses & pictures not in panels, not being part of the building, passed under testator's will; (2) articles purchased by testator but fixed by A. after his death, were not fixtures, & passed under the will to C.—*D'EYNCOURT v. On his death the question arose whether, in an account between his exors. & the remainderman, the former should be credited with the value of the machinery, etc., or whether the same passed to the remainderman as things annexed to the soil:—Held: the machinery annexed to the soil for the purpose of rendering the minerals merchantable, if such machinery was capable of being removed therefrom by disturbing the soil without destroying the land, was machinery which could not be said to be so attached to the land as to become part of it & belong to the owner of the land, but was to be deemed to be trade fixtures which passed to the exor. as personality.—*WARD v. By the will of the ninth Earl of C. the H. L. estates, of which he was the absolute owner, were settled to certain uses in strict settlement under which the present earl was tenant for life with remainder to his issue in tail male, with divers remainders over. Testator also bequeathed certain chattels to go as heirlooms, & gave to the present earl absolutely all his plate, except such as he had before given to his wife, books, pictures, & other works of art or curiosity, except the heirlooms, china, glass, furniture, carriages, horses, wines, &c, generally, all goods, effects, & live & dead stock which at his decease might be in or about his mansion house of H. These carvings were affixed to the walls of various rooms therein by means of nails or pegs driven through them into stiles built into the walls. Testator died in 1887. In 1909 the present earl sold portions of the settled estates including the mansion house, expressly reserving the carvings. He subsequently removed the carvings from the mansion house & sold a portion of them, claiming to be absolutely entitled to the proceeds of sale thereof. The term was limited to trustees, upon trust during the lives of testator's uncle & sisters, & the survivor of them, & during the minorities of the persons beneficially entitled to enter upon the mansion, etc., receive the rents, keep up the mansion house, gardens, etc., with power to pull down, rebuild alter, etc., as might suit any tenant of the hall to grant leases of the estates, appoint bailiffs, etc., & to cut timber; & upon further trust to pay an annuity of £1,000 to testator's uncle, & annuities of £500 to his sisters, & testator's direction, that during the minority of any person absolutely or presumptively entitled, the sisters or their husbands were not to reside in the mansion, but the trustees were to pay a competent part of the surplus interest & income of the estates, during the lives of his sisters, for the benefit of the person for the time being entitled thereto, the trustees accumulating the surplus. The sisters of testator had no children within the period of fifteen years from the date of the will, & pltf., the first daughter of A., attained twenty-one before the death of testator:—Held: there was no intestacy during the lives of testator's sisters, & pltf., in whom the first estate of freehold was vested inasmuch as no child had been born since testator's death to either of his sisters, was entitled to the surplus rents & profits.—*SIDNEY v. 1948. — Interest on accumulations paid to life tenant after majority—Right to principal.]—A settlor assigned certain mtges. & "all interest thereon then due & payable, & thereafter to accrue & become due & payable" unto trustees for the equal benefit of his two infant granddaughters. The trusts as to one moiety were that, when one of the granddaughters attained twenty-one, the trustees were to pay the rents, interest, & annual produce of such moiety of the said principal moneys, interest, & securities to her for life; the moiety after her death to be in trust for her children, if any. There was no express provision for either accumulation or maintenance during the granddaughter's minority; but there was a power of maintenance during the minority of her possible children. In default of children, after her decease the moiety of "the said principal sums, securities, & premises" was to go over to petitioner.

The trustees accumulated & invested the produce of her moiety during her minority; & after she had attained her majority they paid her the interest of the invested accumulations, together with that of her moiety of the principal sums until her death. She died without having been married:—Held: the accumulated sum formed part of the principal of her moiety, & went over to petitioner under the trust in his favour declared in the settlement.—Re MANIFOLD'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1866), 14 W. Until conversion & re-investment the income of unsold property was to be applied in paying debts & yearly charges, & the surplus accumulated in augmentation of capital. At the end of the twenty-one years a portion of the estate which had, in accordance with a power in the will, been let on mining lease for forty years was still unconverted:—Held: the rents & royalties accrued since the expiration of the twenty-one years formed part of the capital of the residuary estate, & ought to be distributed accordingly, & until sale or conversion the tenants for life of settled shares were entitled as from such date to receive out of the accrued & accruing rents & royalties such an annual sum as, in the opinion of the ct., would be a fair equivalent for the annual income which would have been received if the property had been sold at the end of the twenty-one years.

In this country in the case of income producing property directed by will to be converted, but retained for a time unconverted, for the benefit of the estate, it has been the practice of the ct. to put a value on the property & to allow the tenant for life out of the income actually produced a sum equal to 4 per cent. on such value (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—*WENTWORTH v. 1957. Fund for legacies or debts.]—Testatrix, after devising her freehold & copyhold estates to trustees for sale, proceeds as follows:

"I will & direct that the moneys to arise from such sale be considered & taken as a part of my personal estate": In a subsequent part of her will, she uses the following words:—"I hereby direct, that, out of the moneys to arise by such sale, & out of all other my personal estate, the several legacies hereinafter mentioned be paid & satisfied": she then gives several legacies, & by the residuary clause in her will, she gives "all the residue of my personal estate, & of the moneys arising from the sale of my real estate," in the manner therein mentioned. The personal estate was not sufficient to pay the legacies, & several of the legacies lapsed. The legacies were not paid till the expiration of a year from testatrix's death, during which time the funds, out of which they were paid, yielded interest & dividends:—Held: such interest & dividends formed part of the corpus of the residue, & did not belong to the tenant for life of the residue.—*Amplett v. 1958. —[.]—Where testator has bequeathed legacies, & given his residue to a tenant for life, with remainder over; exors., though, as between themselves & the persons interested in the residue, they are at liberty to have recourse to any funds they please in order to pay debts & legacies, yet will be treated by the ct., in adjusting the accounts between tenant for life & remainderman, as having paid the debts & legacies not out of capital only, nor out of income only, but with such portion of the capital as, together with the income of that portion for one year, was sufficient for the purpose.

Testator A., having bequeathed legacies, which his estate was amply sufficient to pay, gave the residue of his estate to B. absolutely. B. died within six months after the death of A., having by his will bequeathed legacies, & given the residue of his estate to a tenant for life, with remainder over. B.'s personal estate, other than that bequeathed to him by A., was insignificant in amount:—Held: (1) whatever remained of A.'s one year, was required to pay A.'s debts & legacies, became the property of B.; & the tenant for life was entitled from the death of B. to the income of the residue of B.'s estate, after deducting such portion of the capital as, together with the income of such portion for one year, was required to pay B.'s debts & legacies; (2) he was entitled to the income of such portion of B.'s residue as was in a proper state of investment, in specie; & as to the rest, of so much Consols as would have been produced by conversion at B.'s death.

(3) B. gave some legacies to legatees, contingent on their attaining twenty-one:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the intermediate income of the fund set apart to meet the contingent legacies.—ALLHUSEN v. WHITTELL (1867), L. R. 4 Eq. 295; 36 L. J. Ch. 929; 16 L. T. 695.

1966. ———.—Testator by his will devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate to his trustees upon trust for sale & conversion with power to suspend conversion for such period as they should judge expedient, & pending the conversion of his real estate to pay for repairs either out of capital or income, & he provided that for the purposes of enjoyment & transmission under the trusts therein contained his real & personal estate should be considered as money from the time of his decease & that the "rents, dividends & interests & other produce thereof" respectively to accrue due after his decease & until the actual sale, conversion, & getting in thereof should be deemed the annual income thereof. Testator then directed his trustees to hold the proceeds of his residuary estate, after payment thereof of his debts & funeral & testamentary expenses, upon trust to divide the same into certain shares, some of which he settled.

At his death testator was entitled to a freehold theatre which was subject to a lease granted by him. The lease contained certain repairing covenants by the lessee. The lessee did not perform these covenants, & some years after testator's death the trustees brought an action against him for breach of covenant & recovered a certain sum of money by way of damages:—Held: the money recovered by the trustees as damages must be treated as corpus of testator's residuary estate.—*Re PYKE, BIRNSTINGL v. 1967. ———. Lease granted under statutory powers.—Premises were devised to trustees upon trust to pay the rents & profits thereof to a person for life with remainder over. The tenant for life granted a lease of the premises by which the lessee covenanted to keep the premises in repair. The lessee having committed a breach of the covenant to repair:—Held: the tenant for life, in granting the lease, was by reason of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 53, in the position of a trustee for all parties entitled under the settlement; the damages were recoverable by the tenant for life as trustee for the trust estate.—*MITCHELL v. The lessor died during the currency of the lease, & on its expiry the succeeding tenant for life, who also was not impeachable for waste, claimed & was paid a sum of money as damages for breach of the covenant:—Held: Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 53, had no application as the tenant for life was not exercising any power under Settled Land Acts, but was only asserting his legal right under a covenant which ran with the land, & the money must be taken to represent the damages which he had suffered, & was therefore not payable to the trustees of the settlement as capital money, but could be retained by him for his own benefit.—*Re LACON'S SETTLEMENT, LACON v. The lessees covenanted that when part of the quarry was exhausted they would fill it up fit for agricultural purposes "under a penalty to be recovered as rent in arrear or as liquidated damages by the lessor of £150 an acre." The lessees left 2 acres 3 roods 5 poles uncovered in breach of their covenant, & arranged to pay at the rate £150 per acre in respect of this land a sum amounting to £416 6s. 10d., which sum had been paid to deft. 1975 i. Fine on renewal.—By agreement between the tenant for life, & the tenant, & with the sanction of the ct., £800 was paid to the credit of the matter, in full for all renewal fines & interest, in respect of a lease for lives renewable for ever, dated Jan. 2, 1899, & of which no renewal had ever been granted. A condition of sale was inserted on the rental, that the purchaser should execute a renewal to the tenants:—Held: as the renewal was the act of the ct., & as what was lost to the inheritance by the renewal was restored by giving it the £800, which was added to the corpus of the fund, the personal representative of a deceased tenant for life was not entitled to any part of the £800. Semble: the personal representatives of parties who have not executed a renewal have no claim for fines upon a subsequent renewal.—Re TIBBARD'S ESTATE (1863), 14 I Ch. R. 322; 15 Ir. Jur. 339.—IR.

1982 i. Partnership articles to be regarded—Share of profits retained as additional capital.—Partnership articles provided that meetings of the partners should be held, & the profits divided annually. The partners, when reduced to two, testator being one of them, met & resolved that the accounts be made up half-yearly, in Mar. & Sept. The meetings were held very irregularly, 1980. Debt due to testator—Realised security insufficient to pay capital.—Re HUBBUCK, HART v. STONE, No. 2328, post.

1981. Mortgage deferring payment of interest.—Testator by his will devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale & conversion & investment, & directed them to pay the income of the investments to his wife for life. The will empowered the trustees to postpone conversion, & provided that the income of unconverted estate should be applied as if it arose from converted estate, & that no property not actually producing income should be treated as producing income or as entitling any person to the receipt of income. Testator died in 1901. Amongst the securities forming part of his estate at his death was a mtge. which recited that the mtgor. was indebted to testator in a certain sum & that it had been agreed that the payment of his debt should be postponed, & the mtgor. thereby covenanted to pay the amount of the debt with simple interest at his death, & if the aggregate amount of such sum & interest was not then paid, to pay interest on such aggregate sum by equal half-yearly payments, the first of such payments to become due six months after his death. The mtgor. died in 1906, in the lifetime of testator's widow, the tenant for life. The widow died shortly afterwards:—Held: the interest on the mtge. attributable to the period between the death of testator & the death of the mtgor. belonged to the estate of the widow, & not to that of testator.—Re LEWIS, DAVIES v. HARRISON, [1907] 2 Ch. 296; 76 L. J. Ch. 539; 97 L. T. 636; 51 Sol. Jo. 531.

L. Share in Partnership.

1982. Partnership articles to be regarded—Share of profits retained as additional capital.—(1) Testator authorised his exors. to enter into a partnership with his brother, on such terms as they should think fit, & leave his capital therein. The exors. did so, & the arts. of partnership stipulated that interest at 5 per cent. should be paid on testator's capital, & that part of the exors.' profits should be left in the concern "as additional capital":—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the interest, but the share of the profits retained as additional capital must, as between the tenant for life & remainderman, be considered as capital & not income.

I am of opinion that the terms of the partnership deed regulate the question as to what is properly to be considered the income & what the capital of the first partnership. It must be determined according to the terms of the arts. of partnership, & I am of opinion that everything paid for interest is income to which the tenant for life is entitled, & that all the profits, which according to the terms of but when they took place it was the partners practice to examine the accounts & to pass a resolution disposing of the profits, & until the assing of such resolution the profits were not carried to the separate credits. Testator, who died in Aug. 1869, by will declared that from the day of his decease, the annual income arising from his residuary personal estate should belong, in effect, to B. for life, & for that purpose the clear profits arising from his partnership should be considered as annual income & be paid to B. for life. In Dec. 1869, at a meeting of the surviving partner & an exor. of testator, they resolved that the profits for the year ending Mar. 1869, should be divided, & testator's share was carried to the credit the deed were what I may call capitalised, & retained as capital in the business, must be treated as capital, the interest of which the tenant for life is intitled to receive (ROMILLY, M.R.).

(2) Trustees, without authority, lent trust moneys at interest at 5 per cent.:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the whole interest, & the remainderman had no right to insist that the excess of the interest beyond the dividends which would have been produced if the money had been invested in Consols formed capital.—STROUD v. GWYER (1860), 28 Beav. 130; 2 L. T. 400; 6 Jur. N. S. 719; 54 E. R. 315.

1983. — Credit balance of profit & loss account.—Testator gave to his wife a life interest in his one-seventh of a colliery in which he was a partner. By the deed of partnership, the majority in value of the partners had power to dispose of the profits by adding them to the capital, or dividing them between the partners, or carrying them to the separate accounts of the partners. For several years profits were made, but retained to the credit of a profit & loss account. Afterwards profits were divided, but at the death of the tenant for life a large sum remained to the credit of the profit & loss account, the greater part of which had been sunk in the works of the colliery:—Held: under the circumstances, the share of testator in the sum standing to the credit of the profit & loss account belonged to the persons entitled in remainder, & not to the exor. of the tenant for life.

This case must depend upon the arts. of partnership (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).—STRAKER v. WILSON (1871), 6 Ch. App. 503; 40 L. J. Ch. 630; 24 L. T. 763; 19 W. R. 761, L. C.

Annotation:—Refd. Re Bouch, Sproule v. Bouch (1885), 29 Ch. D. 635.

1984. Practice of firm considered—Division of whole of profits.—A trader devised & bequeathed to trustees all his real & personal estate, including his share in the business in which he was a partner, on trust as to one moiety thereof to pay the annual proceeds, including the net profits of the business, to his daughter for her life, for her separate use without power of anticipation, & after her death the moiety was to be held in trust for her children or remote issue. He directed his trustees to carry on the business after his death until the expiration of the partnership term, & authorised them to use, not only such capital as he should have in the business at the time of his death, but also such other part of the trust premises as they should think fit. The partnership deed authorised the partners to dispose of their shares by will; it did not provide how any loss in carrying on the business should be borne. The will contained no provision as to the mode in which any such loss should be borne as between the persons interested in testator's estate. It had been the practice of the firm in prosperous years to divide the whole profit among the partners, & in years in which there was a loss to write off each partner's proportion of the loss from his share of the capital with the other partners. Up to the end of 1880 it was carried on at a profit, & half testator's share of that profit was paid by the trustees to the daughter. For the year 1881 there was a loss, & testator's share of the loss was written off from his share of the capital in the books of the firm. For the year 1882 there was a profit:—Held: the daughter was entitled to receive half that share of the profits which testator, according to the practice of the firm, would have received if he had been alive, & consequently she was entitled to receive half his share of the profits for the year 1882, without any deduction for the purpose of making good the corpus of the settled share in the interest of the remainderman.—GOW v. FORSTER (1884), 26 Ch. D. 672; 51 L. T. 394; 32 W. R. 1019.

1985. ——J.—By arts. of partnership it was provided that the partners should carry out certain contracts, & that the partnership should continue until the contracts were completed, but that if either of the partners should die, then that his exors. should be bound by his obligations, & that there should be no division of the profits until the completion of the contracts. One of the partners died, & by his will bequeathed all of his property upon trust, after conversion & investment, for his widow for life, with remainder over. The contracts were not completed until six years after testator's death, when his share of the partnership assets was paid to his trustees:—Held: in the administration of his estate, his widow was entitled to interest at 4 per cent. from his death on the value of his share in the partnership assets.—JACKSON v. JACKSON (1869), 20 L. T. 354; 17 W. R. 547.

M. Stocks and Shares.

(a) In General.

1986. Provisions of settlement prevail—Bonus.—Stock stood in the names of trustees, upon trust, under a marriage settlement, to pay the dividends "of the said stock, together with such bonuses as should from time to time be allowed thereon, when & as the same should become payable," to A. & his wife, & the survivor, for life:—Held: A. was absolutely entitled to a bonus declared pending his life estate.—Re MITTAM'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1858), 4 Jur. N. S. 1077.

1987. — Not within terms of settlement.—On the marriage of H. & D., sixteen shares in the P. & O. co. were vested in trustees in trust to pay the interest, dividends, & yearly proceeds to D., the wife, for her life, or such persons as she should direct, to her separate use; & there was a proviso that if any bonus should be declared in respect of the shares, that should be invested in augmentation of the settlement. The co. being their own insurers, carried over 5 per cent. on their floating stock to the insurance fund, & declared a dividend out of the surplus, if any, year by year among the shareholders, & carried forward small sums left out of such surplus to the following year, & so on de anno in annum:—Held: these additional payments were not bonuses, & the wife of his account under date Sept. 1869, & it was, in Dec. 1869, paid to his exors. At a meeting of the same two persons in Mar. 1870, they ordered the profits of the half-year ending Sept. 1869, to be divided, & testator's share was paid to his exors. In taking the account in Chambers a question arose whether these shares of testator should be distinguished as capital or income, & B. presented a petition under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, asking the ct.'s opinion:

—Held: the profits for the year ending Mar. 1869, were capital, & belonged to testator's estate, & the profits for the half-year ending Sept. 1869, were income, & belonged to B.—BROWNE v. COLLINS (1871), 12 L. R. Eq. 586.—IR.

was entitled to them for her life.—HOLLIS v. ALLAN (1866), 12 Jur. N. S. 638; 14 W. R. 980.

1988. ————.]—Testatrix, who died in 1917, bequeathed to trustees three hundred ordinary shares in a limited co. upon trust to pay the “dividends, bonuses & income” thereof to R. S. & J. S. his wife during their lives & to the survivor of them during the life of such survivor, & after the death of the survivor the trustees were directed to hold the shares upon trust for the II. infirmly absolutely. The co. had accumulated out of profits a large reserve fund & also had in hand certain undistributed profits not carried to reserve. In 1919 the co. proposed to distribute, by way of bonus, amongst its shareholders the sum of £634,980. The method adopted by the co. was to capitalise that sum, and instead of distributing it in the shape of cash, to distribute it in the shape of fully paid shares. The transaction was carried out by appropriate resolutions & recorded in an agreement between the co. & its shareholders which, after reciting the accumulations & the co.’s proposal to distribute the sum as bonus, provided that the co. would pay the sum by the issue & allotment of fully paid shares, & the shareholders agreed to accept those shares in satisfaction of their respective proportions of that sum. On July 31, 1919, during the lives of the tenants for life, the co. allotted to the trustees nine thousand £1 fully paid bonus shares, the proportion to which they were entitled in respect of the three hundred shares bequeathed to them. A summons was taken out to have it decided whether the bonus shares so allotted to the trustees ought to have been transferred to the tenants for life or were rightly retained by the trustees as capital subject to the trusts of the will. R. S. died after the allotment of the bonus shares to the trustees, leaving his wife surviving him:—Held: as a question of fact the issue of the new shares by the company must be regarded as a distribution of capital, & not of income; & in the construction of the will the words “dividends, bonuses & income” did not cover the shares in question so as to pass them to the tenant for life.—Re SPEIR, HOLT v. SPEIR, [1924] 1 Ch. 359; 93 L. J. Ch. 225; 130 L. T. 564; 68 Sol. Jo. 251, C. A.

1989. Dividends declared before death—Death of testator.—By the terms of the deed of settlement of the co., their net profits were to be divided rateably to such an amount as should be declared at their half-yearly meeting, & were to be paid within twenty-one days afterwards; & it was provided, that a shareholder was not to receive any dividend after the period at which he ceased to be a proprietor of shares: but the dividends on such shares were to continue in suspense until some other person should have become proprietor of them. A shareholder died sixty-nine days after the half-yearly meeting at which a dividend was declared, but before notice had been given that such dividend was payable, having by his will bequeathed the interest & annual income arising from all his shares to one for life, & then to others:—Held: the dividend belonged to the legatee for life, & not to the general personal estate of testator.—CLIVE v. CLIVE (1854), Kay, 600; 2 Eq. Rep. 913; 23 L. J. Ch. 981; 24 L. T. O. S. 33; 69 E. R. 255.

testatrix was declared payable on July 15, 1865, & Jan. 15, 1866. Testatrix died on Dec. 31, 1865:—Held: the January dividend formed part of the corpus of her residuary estate & did not pass under a bequest of the annual income of such residuary personal estate.—*DE GENDRE v. 1996. Conversion of preference shares—Compensation to preference shareholders.—The trustees of a will appropriated preference & ordinary shares in a co. to answer a settled legacy. Subsequently the co. converted the preference shares into ordinary shares, & also allotted shares in a Dutch co. to the ordinary shareholders, with the result that the trustees received a payment of £147 in respect of their preference shares & twenty-six shares in the Dutch co. in respect of their ordinary shares:—Held: the £147 constituted capital, being a payment made to preference shareholders in consideration of their giving up their preferential rights, but under the circumstances the twenty-six shares must be treated as a bonus, & belonged to the tenant for life.—Re TEDDIE, HOLT v. CROKER (1922), 91 L. J. Ch. 346; 126 L. T. 644; 66 Sol. Jo. 250.

1997. ————. Issue of new shares.—By her will made in 1920 testatrix bequeathed six hundred 15 per cent. cumulative preferred ordinary shares of £1 each in a co. to trustees upon trust to pay the income to a tenant for life during his life & with a direction that after his death the shares should fall into residue. Subsequently during the lifetime of testatrix the co. reorganised its capital by (inter alia) changing its 15 per cent. cumulative preferred ordinary shares into a like number of 8 per cent. cumulative A. preference shares of £1 each & at the same time issuing to a former holder of 15 per cent. cumulative preferred ordinary shares the same number of new 8 per cent. cumulative A. preference shares of £1 each paid for in full out of reserves:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled only to the income of the six hundred

2000. — Testator gave his residuary real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for certain persons for life, with remainders over. His estate comprised fully paid shares in the S. co. In each year from 1894 to 1906, the co. returned to its shareholders out of profits available for dividends a part of the capital paid up on their shares, increasing the unpaid capital by the same amount. These returns purported to be made under the Cos. Act, 1880 (c. 19), but no special resolution was passed until 1905. In that year a special resolution was passed that 7s. 6d. per share should be so returned in that year, that all similar returns in past years should be confirmed, & that the directors should be authorised to make similar returns in the future:—Held: the special resolution was invalid so far as it purported to have a retrospective or prospective effect, & valid only so far as concerned the return made in 1905; & a tenant for life is entitled to all payments made out of profits in respect of shares in a co. except such as have been validly capitalised by the co. All the returns except the 7s. 6d. per share in 1905 were therefore payable as income to the tenants for life. — Re PIERCY, WHITWHAM v. PIERCY, [1907] 1 Ch. 289; 76 L. J. Ch. 116; 95 L. 2007. — Money received in respect of old debt. — A person who was a shareholder in & manager of a co. bequeathed some of his shares specifically to several persons absolutely, & gave the residue of his property to tenants for life, with remainders over. After his death it was discovered that large sums were due from him as manager to the co., & a compromise was entered into with the sanction of the ct., by which his estate was to pay the co. £220,000, a considerable part of which was attributable to interest accrued during testator's life on the sums due from him. 2008. — Necessity for considering time when bonus declared. — For a long series of years the manager of a public co. had fraudulently retained large sums, whereby the dividends declared, from time to time, were much less than they otherwise would have been. After his death, a considerable sum was recovered by the co. from his estate, in respect of his defalcations, & thereupon the co. declared a large bonus:—Held: as between the tenant for life & remainderman of some shares, the bonus belonged solely to the person entitled to the shares at the time it was declared. — *EDMONDSON v. Dock stock was bequeathed to certain persons for life, with remainders over, & bonuses were from time to time declared out of the profits generally in respect of it:—Held: in the absence of any evidence that such bonuses arose from profits which did not accrue during the lives of the tenants for life, they were not capital, but income & ought to be treated as such.—*DALE v. 2011. — Arrears of preference dividends.]

By her will testatrix bequeathed her residuary estate to her trustee upon trust for sale & conversion, but with power to postpone, & directed him to pay the income or annual produce of the trust fund to D. for life, & to apply the next annual produce from the unconverted part of her estate as if it were the income of the proceeds of conversion. Testatrix owned two thousand four hundred fully paid cumulative preference shares in a co., & under the arts. was entitled to be paid out of available profits a cumulative preference dividend of 10s. per share, in addition to a sum of £7 per share. At the death of testatrix, in 1920, there was due to her, on balance, a sum of £3 15s. per share in respect of the £7. The right to that balance was contingent on the co. making a profit & not carrying it to reserve. On Sept. 5, 1922, the directors passed a resolution "to transfer £80,000 from reserve to profit & loss account, & to declare & pay a dividend of £1 17s. 6d. on the preference shares being the equivalent of three & three-quarter years' dividend on account of arrears." In pursuance of the resolution £3,150 was paid to the exors. of testatrix:—Held: on the contingency happening the shareholder then entitled to the shares was entitled to the money which was the equivalent of the right which was once contingent but then became absolute, & the £3,150 was income, which became payable for the first time in 1922, & passed to the tenant for life under the terms of the will as "annual produce" of the estate.—*Re MARJORIBANKS, MARJORIBANKS v. "Special dividend."]—A holder of shares in both departments of the Sun Fire & Life Office bequeathed his personal estate to trustees on trust to permit his wife to receive the dividends, interest, & income thereof for her life, remainder over. He died in Dec. 1870. In Jan. 1873, an extraordinary dividend was declared on the life shares for five years previously; & in July, 1873, a "special dividend" was declared on the fire shares for the half-year previous:—Held: these dividends were income, & belonged to the tenant for life.—Re

2016. — Shares exchanged for more profitable shares.]—C., a working colliery co., had accumulated out of profits a large reserve fund invested in the shares of a trust co. which also held shares in three other working colliery cos. In 1913 a combine co. was incorporated for the purpose of acquiring the shares in all four working cos., the shareholders in which were offered the opportunity of exchanging their shares for shares in the combine on advantageous terms, & practically the whole of the shareholders availed themselves of the offer & deposited their shares under a provisional agreement by which provision was made for the deposit in a bank of the share certificates in the four working cos. & for the allotment in exchange of shares in the combine. The annexed scheme set out the rate of exchange in the case of each of the four working cos., & under the heading dealing with C. added a note that C.'s assets in the trust co., referring to the reserve fund, would be distributed among C.'s ordinary shareholders. Immediately after the adoption of the provisional agreement the directors of the trust co. exchanged all shares held by that co. in the three other working cos. for shares in the combine, & subsequently went into liquidation. Other steps were taken, & a resolution was passed by C. in the distribution of the assets to be received by C. for the liquidation of the trust co., representing the reserve fund, by way of dividend amongst their ordinary shareholders. As the result of these transactions the shares in the combine thus acquired by C. & some cash were distributed among their ordinary shareholders. On a summons taken out by trustees raising the question whether the shares & cash so distributed to them ought as between tenant for life & remaindermen to be treated as capital or income:—Held: the scheme proceeded on the footing of a distribution of the reserve fund as undivided profits by way of dividend & not by way of reduction of capital; looking at the real transaction, there was no intention to capitalise the reserve fund; & the shares & cash in the hands of the trustees must be treated as income & not as capital.—*Re THOMAS, ANDREW v. 2017. "Special bonus."—The memorandum & arts. of assocn. of a co. provided for increase of capital. The arts. provided that the directors with the sanction of a meeting of shareholders might declare dividends; that, before recommending a dividend, they might set aside, out of profits, a reserve fund for contingencies, equalising dividends & other specified objects & that they might declare & pay interim dividends. Shares in the co. were settled by will. At the death of testator, in 1884, there stood in the accounts of the co., to the credit of a reserve fund £3,000. By the date of the annual meeting of the co. in Oct. 1888, the reserve fund had risen to £9,000. Up to Oct. 1888, the shareholders had received each year, partly as "dividend," partly as "bonus," sums of various amounts; in 1888 equal to £2 10s. a share. In Apr. 1889, the directors resolved to divide £15,000, £25 a share, as "special bonus"; & this amount was paid as "interim dividend" in Apr. 1889. About £5,000 of extraordinary expenses were incurred, & a further dividend of £10 a share was paid in Nov. of that year. The reserve fund was by that time reduced to £2,000:—Held: the tenant for life of the settled shares was entitled to the whole of the amount divided.—Re ALSBURY, SUGDEN v. ALSBURY (1890), 45 Ch. The same thing in effect has been done, when the Bank has increased the dividend; the ground of which has been, that there has been a gradual saving; of which they give the benefit to the proprietor, not by payment of a sum of money, but by additional dividend. It would be a neater way to convert it into bank stock. They could not do that without an Act of Parliament (LORD LOUGHBOROUGH, C.).—BRANDER v. BRANDER (1799), 4 Ves. 800; 31 E. R. 414, L. C.

2035. — Bonus dividend as payment therefor.—Testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate to his exor. T. in trust for testator's wife for her life & after her death to T. Part of the residuary estate consisted of shares in a co. whose directors had power, before recommending a dividend, to set apart out of the profits such sum as they thought proper as a reserved fund, for meeting contingencies, equalising dividends or repairing or maintaining the works. After testator's death the directors of the co. proposed to distribute certain accumulated profits, which had been temporarily capitalised, as a bonus dividend, to allot new shares partly paid up, to each shareholder, & to apply the bonus dividend in part payment of the new shares. This proposal was carried out, & with T.'s consent new shares were allotted to him & registered in his name, the bonus dividend on testator's old shares being applied in part payment of the new shares:—Held: looking at all the circumstances the real nature of the transaction was that the co. did not pay or intend to pay any sum as dividend, but intended to & did appropriate the undivided profits as an increase of the capital stock; the bonus dividend was therefore capital of testator's estate, & the life tenant was not entitled to the bonus or the new shares.

I come now to the question whether the co. did in the present case distribute the accumulated profits as dividend or convert them into capital. . . . The co. was very prosperous & the market value of its shares was £30 each. In Feb. 1912, the reserve fund of the co. exceeded £50,000, & the directors proposed a scheme for distributing part of the reserve fund, representing accumulated undivided profits, amongst the shareholders, so that every shareholder would get a bonus of one new fully paid £10 share for every existing share held by him. Accordingly, resolutions were passed by the co. empowering the directors to declare a bonus dividend out of the reserve fund, & sanctioning the distribution of a bonus dividend of £10 per share out of the reserve fund, authorising the further issue of 3,728 shares of £10 each out of the unissued capital of the co. to be allotted pro rata amongst the existing shareholders, & directing that such new shares be paid up in full forthwith. Trustees of testator's will held 200 shares of the co., & on receipt of the circular letter, accepted their allotment of 200 new shares, indorsed & returned their bonus dividend warrant for £2,000 & afterwards sold the new shares at a profit. The question then arose whether, as between the tenants for life & remainderman under the will, the bonus dividend was capital or income:—Held: on the evidence, the co. intended to capitalise the reserve fund & not to distribute it as a bonus dividend, & therefore the whole of the bonus dividend was capital of testator's estate.

In Feb. 1913, the directors issued a circular to the shareholders stating that they had made a call of 10s. per share & had declared a bonus of 10s. per share, both payable on the same date, & that unless advised by the shareholders to the contrary before that date the bonus would be applied in payment of the call. The circular reached the trustees too late for them to reply to it, & the bonus was applied in payment of the call. On the question whether the bonus was to be treated as capital or income of testator's estate:—Held: the co. intended to capitalise its profits to the extent of 10s. per share, by utilising the bonus to pay the call, & therefore the tenant for life was not entitled to the bonus.—Re HATTON, HOCKIN v. HATTON, [1917] 1 Ch. 357; 86 L. J. Ch. 375; 116 L. T. 281; 61 Sol. Jo. 253.

(e) Option given to Shareholder.

2043. Effect of.]—N. left his residuary estate upon trust after the death of his daughter to pay the income of one moiety to her husband for life, & subject thereto upon trust for her children. Part of the estate consisted of shares in the E. co., whose directors had power to set aside out of the profits of the co. depreciation or redemption funds for various purposes, some such as are usually provided for out of capital, & others such as are usually provided for out of income. After testator's death the directors resolved to distribute among the shareholders the sum of £250,000 out of moneys standing to the depreciation & redemption fund. The capital of the co. then consisted of three classes of shares, all of £10, but with £10, £7 10s. & £5 paid up respectively. The co., after making some necessary alterations in their arts. of assocn., passed resolutions: (a) That the sum of £250,545 cash standing to the credit of the depreciation & redemption account, should be distributed among the shareholders by way of bonus divided, such dividend being at the option of any shareholder applicable to the payment of the amounts due in respect of any new shares or of calls. (b) That a number of new shares of £10 each should be issued & offered to the shareholders on terms of immediate payment at par in the proportion of one new share to every two with £10 paid up, & one to every eight with £7 10s. paid up. At the same time a call was made of £2 10s. per share on the shares of £7 10s. & £5 paid up. The scheme was carried out by sending round to all the shareholders a dividend warrant for a sum equal to 50 per cent. on the amount paid up on their shares, with a form for the shareholders' signature requesting that the amount might be applied in payment for the new shares & calls on the old. At the same time notices of allotment & forms for acceptance of the new shares were sent. The trustees accepted the new shares, & immediately sold them at a profit. This was a summons to determine the question whether the proceeds were income or capital of the trust estate:—Held: the trans-accretion to the capital of testator's estate, & with the 10 per cent. cash dividend as income arising from the estate.—Re CARSON, CARSON v. CARSON [1915] 1 I. R. 321.—IR.

m. Power to divide profits as dividend or convert into capital.—Where moneys of a testator were at the time of his death invested in shares in a co. whose articles contained a clause empowering the co. to distribute action was in fact a distribution of surplus profits by way of dividend, with an option for the shareholders to invest in new capital, not an appropriation by the co. of the accumulated profits as an increase of capital, & the tenant for life was entitled to the bonus dividend, but the profit made by taking up the shares belonged to the capital of the trust estate.—*Re NORTHAGE, ELLIS v. 2045. ———.]—Where, on a distribution of bonus shares by a co. to the shareholders, there is a doubt whether such shares are to be considered as capital or income, as between the tenant for life & remainderman under a will, the principle to be followed is that it is the intention of the co. that is to be regarded. If the co. intend to capitalise it is capital; if there is no such intention, it is not capital.

Therefore in determining such a question reference must be had to substance & not merely to form, & where it is found that the transaction is in form one in which an option is given to the shareholder, that is not necessarily a factor which determines that it is income & not capital.

The option would be immaterial if, from the other documents & facts, it appeared reasonably clear that the co., notwithstanding the form, intended to capitalise.—Re TAYLOR, WATERS v. TAYLOR, [1926] Ch. 923; 96 L. J. Ch. 17; 137 L. T. 17.

At the date of his death testator was possessed of shares in a co. In 1893 the co., by special resolution, resolved to increase its capital by the issue of new shares, & empowered the directors to offer such new shares to the existing shareholders in payment or part payment of any dividend for the time being. A dividend was afterwards declared out of profits, which the co. was in a position to pay in cash. Half of such dividend was paid in cash, & in respect of the balance an allotment of new shares was offered to the shareholders, & such as did not accept the offer received the remainder of the dividend in cash. The trustees of the will accepted the allotment, & allowed the new shares to be allotted to the tenant for life:—Held: (1) upon the evidence, the co. intended to distribute its profits as dividend, & not to capitalise them.

The general principle applicable is . . . stated in Bouch v. Sproule, No. 2035, ante, . . . it was laid down that in considering whether a co. has distributed its accumulated profits as dividends or converted them into capital regard must be paid both to the form & the substance of the transaction. . . . 2056. New stock issued in respect of settled stock.]

—Testator, who died in 1843, by his will dated in 1841 bequeathed (inter alia) thirty-five shares in a gas co. to trustees upon trust for his wife for life, & subject thereto he directed that the same should form part of his residuary estate. After the death of testator the gas co. resolved to increase its capital by the issue of fresh stock, which it offered to its shareholders. J., acting under a power of attorney on behalf of the surviving trustee of the will, who was resident abroad, availed himself of the offer, & took up with his own moneys & in his own name some of the new stock. An action for administration of testator's estate having been instituted an order was made on the extrix. of J. who had died, under which the new stock was sold & the balance of the proceeds of sale, after repayment of the amount paid for the stock & interest, & deducting therefrom the dividends received by J., was paid into ct. to the credit of the action. On the further consideration of the action, a question arose whether testator's widow, as tenant for life of the thirty-five original shares, was entitled to this balance or whether the same formed part of his residuary estate:—Held: the trust relating to the thirty-five shares must be treated as if it stood alone, it being in respect of that particular trust that J. had obtained the power of which he had availed himself; & the benefit arising therefrom must be treated as belonging to that trust alone; the balance in ct. represented capital, & the widow was entitled to the income thereof for life.

It seems impossible to consider the whole amount of money obtained by the sale as profit belonging to the tenant for life (KAY, J.).—Re BROMLEY, SANDERS v. BROMLEY (1886), 55 L. T. 145.

2057. Option to take up new stock.]—By a marriage settlement made in 1902 it was declared that the trustees thereof should hold certain investments, which had been transferred by the husband into their joint names, upon trust either to allow the same "to remain in the present state of investment thereof" or, with specified consents to sell the same, & invest the proceeds in investments therein mentioned & pay the annual income thereof to the husband for life, & after his death to his wife for life, & after the death of both, to hold the investments upon the usual trusts for the children of the marriage, with an ultimate trust, in the event of there being no children, in favour of the husband absolutely. By clause 11 of the settlement the trustees were authorised to exercise any preferential right that might be offered to them to subscribe for new or other shares in any co. in which they held shares or stock, & to dispose of the same, & every premium or profit arising therefrom was to be applied by them as if the same were income. One of the investments so transferred to the trustees consisted of one hundred & nine shares in an American financial co. called the Northern Securities co., which was formed to acquire & hold shares in other corps., & held a large number of shares in, & controlled the policy of, two American ry. cos., the Great Northern Ry. co. & the Northern Pacific Ry. co. In 1904 the capital stock of the Northern Securities co. was cancelled to the extent of 99 per cent., & in lieu of their one hundred & nine shares in that co. the trustees of the settlement received thirty-two fully paid up shares & a fractional share in the capital stock of the Great Northern Ry. co., forty-two fully paid up shares & a fractional share in the capital stock of the Northern Pacific Ry. co., & one fully paid up share & a fractional share in the Northern Securities co. In 1905 & 1906 the trustees received three options to take up new stock in respect of the thirty-two shares in the Great Northern Ry. co. & of the forty-two shares in the Northern Pacific Ry. co., & in exercise of these options they paid certain instalments, & in one instance sold the right of option. The husband having died & there being no children of the marriage, the wife claimed the proceeds of the options as income under clause 11 of the settlement, subject to repaying the trustees what had been paid in respect of the new shares:—Held: the shares in the two railway cos. were not the same shares which were transferred to the trustees at the date of the settlement, & therefore the trustees were not authorised by the terms of the settlement to retain them; the accretions to the shares, by reason of the exercise of the options, belonged to the capital of the trust estate, & could not be treated as income under clause 11 of the settlement.—*Re ANSON'S SETTLEMENT, LOVEFACE (EARL) v. This provision was departed from by the consent of the majority of the shareholders, & a bonus was distributed every three years. The co. then amalgamated with another, & it was agreed that £50 per share should be paid upon all shares, & also a proportionate part of the surplus assets. Pltf., who was tenant for life of ten shares in the co., claimed the share of surplus assets which had been paid over to her trustee as part of her annual income:—Held: these surplus assets, which must be considered as the reserve fund, were capital, & not income.—*NICHOLSON v. Part of the residue consisted of shares in a limited co., the arts. of which provided for the formation of a reserve dividend fund out of the annual profits above 10 per cent. to be applied in supplementing the dividend when the annual profits fell below 5 per cent. After testator's death the co. went into voluntary liquidation & transferred its business to a new co. The amount distributable among the shareholders in the winding up was sufficient to provide a surplus over & above the amount of capital paid up on each share. This surplus arose from a sum of £20,000 representing the reserve dividend fund & a further sum of £17,000 representing undivided profits:—Held: as between tenant for life & remainderman the whole of the surplus ought to be treated as capital.—*Re ARMITAGE, ARMITAGE v. 2070. Discretionary power of sale—Part of estate unproductive—Income until sale.—(1) Testator devised estates in trust for his wife for life, & he gave the trustees a discretionary power of sale. Part of his estate consisted of unproductive building ground, which remained unsold for some years:—Held: the tenant for life was only entitled to the actual rents of the property until sold; but she would have been entitled to interest on the value, if the trust for sale had been absolute.

the estate got in & held in trust. The trustees had not up to the time of filing the bill, a period of more than two years, sold any part of testator's estate, which consisted in large part of leaseholds & other terminable securities:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the actual income produced, & not to the amount which the estate, if converted, would have produced, there being no suggestion of any fraudulent favour shown by the trustees to the tenant for life at the expense of the remainderman.—MORLEY v. MENDHAM (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 998.

Part of testator's estate consisted of shares in a bank of unlimited liability, & of foreign bonds.

Testator carried on the business of a chemist, which business was, shortly after his death, purchased by one of his exors. at a valuation, the judge held that the sale must be set aside, & the exor. account for profits with just allowances, but no salary; & the tenant for life was only entitled to the income of the fund arising from the profits.

On appeal, by a compromise, the sale was confirmed, but the ct. intimated that in such a case if the sale were confirmed the exor. would take the profits; but if it were set aside, the tenant for life would be entitled to them as income.—*Re NORRINGTON, BRINDLEY v. 2075. — No direction as to income—Unauthorised & hazardous investments.—Testator gave the residue of his personal estate to trustees, directing them to convert it into money, & invest the proceeds in govt. or real securities, of which they were to stand possessed, upon trust for A. during her life, & after her death, for B. The trustees permitted a share, which testator had in an Indian loan, bearing interest at 10 per cent., to remain for several years on that security, during which time they paid to A. the interest at 10 per cent., which it yielded annually; & the loan being afterwards paid off, they invested the money in the 3 per cents. at a time when the funds were so low, that the amount of stock purchased was considerably greater, than if the conversion had taken place at the end of a year from testator's death:—Held: the tenant for life was not entitled to the actual interest, which the money yielded, while it remained on the Indian security, but only to the dividends of so much 3 per cent. stock as would have been purchased with it at the end of a year from testator's death.—*DIMES v. By lease dated in the year 1897 he had demised to W. (inter alia) all the strata of chalk lying under certain lands at G. for the term of twenty-one years from Sept. 29, 1895, determinable at the end of the seventh or fourteenth year, with power to W. during the demise to require to have additional chalk land on notice, which further pieces of chalk land were from time to time to be allotted to W. on his paying by way of consideration for the purchase of the chalk & other materials £900 per acre until the whole of the same should be dug out.

At the death of testator part of his personal estate consisted of securities not of a wasting nature & not specifically authorised. In an action for the administration of the estate the chief clerk found that some of these securities were proper to be continued, & that others were proper to be called in:—Held: the tenants for life under the will were entitled to receive in specie the income of those unauthorised securities which were retained, & which were not of a wasting nature.—*Re SHELDON, NIXON v. At testator's death part of his personal estate consisted of American railroad bonds repayable at par at a fixed date, but bearing a high rate of interest, & now commanding a considerable premium in the market. The trustees, in the proper exercise of their discretion, did not sell the reversionary interest, which fell in nineteen years after testator's death, & fourteen years after the majority of the tenant for life:—Held: the rights of the tenant for life were not affected by the fact of no sale having been made; & he was entitled to the income on the value of the stock a year after testator's death, calculated on the actual duration & not on the then probability of the duration of the lives on which the reversion was expectant.—*WILKINSON v. 2091. — Settlement by deed.—Husband & wife covenanted to vest in the trustees of their settlement, upon the trusts thereof, "all property which should come to her absolutely, & not bound by any trust or provision, otherwise than for her absolute use":—Held: (1) property bequeathed to her "for her separate use absolutely" was bound by the covenant; (2) leaseholds & chattels bound by the covenant were to be enjoyed in specie & unconverted.—MILFORD v. PEILE (1854), 17 Beav. 602; 2 W. R. 181; 51 E. R. 1169.

I am not aware of any case in which the principle of Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl), Howe v. Aylesbury (Countess), No. 2090, ante, has been applied to a settlement which is a contract between the parties (KINDERSLEY, V.-C.).—HOPE v. HOPE (1855), 1 Jur. N. S. 770; 3 W. R. 617.

Subsequently he restored the capital in full to the trust estate, & it was assumed that he had paid interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent. to the tenant for life under the settlement, who made no claim against him:—Held: the persons entitled under the settlement to the fund in remainder were not entitled, as against the tenant for life, to attribute to capital the excess of interest over the amount which would have been produced if the fund had been invested in authorised securities.—SLADE v. CHAINE, [1908] 1 Ch. 522; 77 L. J. Ch. 377; 98 L. T. 352; 52 Sol. Jo. 240, C. A.

This sum was allowed to remain in the hands of pltf.'s father, who employed it in trade, he covenanting at his death to pay it to the trustees. Upon the death of the father £10,000, part of the £15,500, was allowed to remain in the business, such investment being unauthorised by the settlement. Large profits accrued to the £10,000, some of which, with pltf.'s consent, had been paid to her husband:—Held: pltf. was entitled in respect of income to 4 per cent. on the original £10,000, & upon all accretions of profits retained & employed in the business, & the rest of the profits must be regarded as capital subject to the trusts of the settlement, & must be made good out of the husband's estate, so far as he had received any part thereof.—Re HILL, *HILL v. 2100. Effect of Administration of Estates Act, 1925 (c. 23)—Power to postpone conversion.—The expression "personal representatives" in above Act, s. 39, does not include trustees in the ordinary sense even when the personal representatives themselves become trustees upon an assent. The introductory words of above Act, s. 39, conferring powers on personal representatives "during a minority of any beneficiary or the subsistence of any life interest, or until the period of distribution arrives" are explained by the fact that under the new law of intestate succession the existence of an infant beneficiary or of a beneficiary, such as a widow, entitled to a life interest only may postpone distribution, & that in these cases above Act, s. 33, places the personal representatives substantially in the position of trustees.

The provision in above Act, s. 39 (1) (2), conferring on personal representatives "all the powers, discretions & duties conferred or imposed by law on trustees holding land upon an effectual trust for sale" does not operate referentially to

He then devised his freehold estates to trustees, upon trust to permit his wife to reside at his house, & to use the household furniture, plate, linen & china therein for her life, & to "pay the rents & profits of his real estate," & "the interest, dividends, & proceeds to arise from his money, & securities for money, money in the funds, & personal estate thereinbefore bequeathed" to her for life, & after her decease, to sell his real estate, & divide & pay the purchase-moneys; "& pay, assign, or transfer his money & securities for money, money in the funds, & personal estate" unto his children. Testator possessed long annuities & leaseholds:—Held: (1) they ought to be converted unto 3 per cents., & the widow was merely entitled to the dividends thereon; (2) a tenant for life of a residue was entitled, during the first year, to the dividends on so much 3 per cents. as would have been produced by the conversion of the property at the end of that year.—*Morgan v. Testator's property had become the subject of an administration suit, in which a decree had been made about two years previously. Some of the shares had not been converted, & the dividends thereon had, since testator's death, been paid to the tenant for life:—Held: the tenant for life was only entitled to the income that would have been derived from so much consols as the moneys arising from the sale of the shares one year after testator's death would have purchased at that date, & she must account for what moneys she had received in excess of that sum.—*Anderson v. The husband died without exercising the joint power of appointment, & the wife made several successive appointments in favour of certain of her children, & appointed the residue in favour of another child. The wife having died, & an action having been brought for the administration of the trusts of the settlement, & it appearing that the appointees had assigned, in some cases to two or three persons, & incumbered their shares:—Held: interest was payable in respect of the several appointments at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum as from the death of the tenant for life.—*Re HILL'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, HILL v. The trustees proceeded to realise his estate as soon as possible after his death, but in the interval certain ships in which he was interested as partner earned freight, & dividends were paid on certain shares held by testator in partnership; on the sale of these ships & shares a considerable profit was also realised:—Held: the tenant for life was not entitled to the freight or dividends or to the profits on the sales as income, but they formed part of the capital, & she was entitled to interest thereon from the death of testator.

In this case strictly 4 per cent. only would have been allowed; but 5 per cent. has been given in chambers & has not been objected to, & will therefore stand (MALINS, V.-C.).—COOPER v. LAROCHE (1869), 38 L. J. Ch. 591.

At the time of his death testator was possessed of preference & ordinary shares in a coal mining co. The ordinary shares, although not of a wasting character, were not authorised by the investment clause in the will. The trustees therefore sold some of them, & proposed to sell more on a favourable opportunity. They declined to pay to the widow in the meantime the full dividends on the ordinary shares thus retained:—Held: in the absence of any express or implied gift of the income pending conversion, the widow was entitled only to interest at 3 per cent. on the value of the ordinary shares at testator's death, & the rest of those dividends must be invested. Money paid under order of court—Repaid on appeal without interest.]—Where money forming part of the residuary estate of testator was paid away under an erroneous order of the ct., & subsequently, on the order being varied on appeal, was recovered, but without interest:—Held: (1) the money so recovered ought not to be treated as consisting of capital only, but a fair proportion of it ought to be paid to the tenant for life of the residue as income, according to the principle of Turner v. Newport, No. 2332, post; (2) in applying that principle interest ought to be calculated at the rate of 3 per cent., instead of 4, as being more agreeable to the facts of present experience.—Re CLEVELAND'S (DUKE) ESTATE, HAY v. WOLMER, [1895] 2 Ch. 542; 65 L. J. Ch. 29; 73 L. T. 313; 13 R. 715.

2127. Mortgage for term—Repayment accelerated—Sum as additional interest.]—A fund settled by will on a person for life, with remainder to others in fee, was invested by the trustees on mtge. with a covenant that it should remain on the security for ten years. Afterwards an agreement was made under which it was repaid with interest in about eighteen months from the date of the agreement, with an additional sum representing in amount interest for a further year at the old rate:—Held: the additional sum was capital, not income, & belonged wholly to those entitled in remainder to the fund.—Re SEARANCE, SIMONDS v. HUNTINGTON (1896), 74 L. T. 339.

2128. Tenant for life becoming lunatic—Annuities paid to remainderman for twenty years—Payments erroneously continued beyond period.]—A tenant for life became lunatic & by orders in the lunacy made in 1867 and 1868 annuities were directed to be paid to a remainderman, upon proper security for repayment, out of the income of the settled estates for twenty years. The payments were through some unexplained cause continued beyond this period, & in the meantime the remainderman mortgaged his interest in the estates, & subsequently became bkpt. On the death of the tenant for life, his personal representative claimed to retain out of the share of personal estate, to which the remainderman then became entitled, the amount of the excessive payments beyond the period of twenty years, in priority to the remainderman & all persons claiming under him, together with interest thereon:—Held: the personal representative was entitled so to retain these amounts together with interest, & the fact of the estate of the remainderman being in mtge. made no difference.—Re LANGHAM, OTWAY v. LANGHAM (1896), 74 L. T. 611.

2129. Sale under special statute—Bonus paid to vendor—Irish Land Purchase Acts.]—Where trustees of lands, held after a life tenancy for charitable purposes, sell the lands under above Acts, 1903 & 1904, the percentage bonus received by them under sect. 48 of the Act of 1903 is to be applied upon the trusts of the settlement but is capital, not income, & is to be paid over as capital to the official trustee with the rest of the purchase-money.—Re THORNGATE'S SETTLEMENT, CHURCHER v. A.-G. (1915), 84 L. J. Ch. 561; 113 L. T. 483.

2130. Loan of securities to Treasury—Bonus paid by Treasury.]—Trustees deposited trust securities with the Treasury by way of loan for a term of years under a scheme of the Treasury, known as Scheme B., which provided that while the securities were on deposit with the Treasury the lenders would receive from the Treasury all interest & dividends paid in respect of them & also, by way of consideration for the loan, a payment at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent. per annum calculated on the face value of the securities; that at the end of the period of loan the Treasury would either return to the lender the securities or, at their option, pay to him the deposit value, as defined by the scheme, of the securities with an addition of 5 per cent. on that value; & that the interest & dividends on all deposited securities, together with the additional payment at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent. per annum, would be paid to the holder for the time being on the Treasury Register, & for convenience of payment, in cases where interest or dividends were payable half-yearly, a full half-year's additional payment, namely, $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., would be added to the first dividend payment, & on the termination of the loan the amount due from the actual date of deposit to the date of return would be calculated, & any overpayment or underpayment would be adjusted. Questions having arisen whether the one-half of 1 per cent. per annum paid as consideration for the loan & the additional 5 per cent. on the deposit value of the securities at the termination of the loan were capital or income of the trust estate, & how the full half-year's additional $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. added to the first dividend payment was to be dealt with on the death of a tenant for life:—Held: (1) the one-half of 1 per cent. per annum was to be treated as income & the 5 per cent. was to be treated as capital of the trust estate; (2) the trustees ought to deduct from the first full half-year's payment, in advance, of the additional interest at the rate of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum & to retain for the purpose of ultimate adjustment, if necessary, so much of such payment as exceeds the amount of such interest at the rate aforesaid for the period between the date of the deposit & the date at which such first payment may be made.—Re OPPENHEIM, OPPENHEIM v. OPPENHEIM, [1917] 1 Ch. 274; 86 L. J. Ch. 193; 116 L. T. 7; 33 T. L. R. 119.

Irish property, charged with portions for younger children raisable at death of tenant for life, £25,000 was set apart by the comrs. to answer these portions, & invested in consols. The dividends were received from them by the tenant for life, who died on July 1, 1857:—Held: the portioners were only entitled to that portion of the half-year's dividend due upon July 5, which had accrued since July 1, the tenant for life being entitled under Incumbered Estates Act to receive the income upon the fund set apart for portions, & not distributable during his lifetime, or if it had remained unconverted.—*WELLESLEY v. Testator died in Feb., & the next half-year's payment of dividend upon the debentures was received in the following July:—Held: debentures being in the nature of mtges. upon which the interest accrued de die in diem, the portion of the half-year's dividend due up to testator's death was to be considered as capital & not income, as between the tenants for life & remaindermen.—Re ROGERS' TRUSTS (1860), 1 Drew. & Sm. 338; 30 L. This order was made in the absence of the legal personal representatives of the tenant for life. After the sale a dividend was declared & received by the purchaser in respect of profits, a portion of which had been earned prior to the death of the tenant for life:—Held: the estate of the tenant for life was not entitled under Apportionment Act, 1870 (c. 33), to be paid out of the purchase-money of the stock anything in respect of the dividend; but, inasmuch as if the trust had been strictly carried out in accordance with the terms of the will, by transferring the investments to the beneficiaries, the representatives of the tenant for life would have been in a position, either directly, or through the trustees, to obtain payment of an apportioned part of the dividend, their claim ought under the special circumstances of the case to be acceded to.—*BULKELEY v. u. Proceeds of realisation of investment—Sale of settled leaseholds.]—Held: the most equitable apportionment of the purchase-money of the sale of settled leaseholds was to give the tenant for life the interest arising from the investment together with a half-yearly sum out of the principal, such sum to be half the quotient obtained by dividing the principal moneys by the number of years that the lease would have to run at each division.—BUSBY v. BUSBY (1893), 14 N. S. W. Eq. 42; 9 N. S. W. W. N. 124.—AUS.

x. — Sale of mortgaged property.]—Money was invested under a settlement on mtgo.; the income was payable to the tenant for life, the corpus to go to the remainderman. The interest fell into arrear, the mtgee. entered into possession, & after some years sold the property, the proceeds of the sale being less than the capital invested. The income payable to the tenant for life was also very much in arrear:—Held: the sum realised by the sale must be apportioned between the tenant for life & the person entitled to it in remainder in the proportions which the arrears of interest due to the tenant for life bore to the original principal sum invested.—EQUITY for purpose of rebuilding.]—A sum of £96 paid to guardian of an infant tenant in tail for rebuilding a copyhold tenement that had been burnt down, but which never had been so applied during the infant's life :—Held : to belong to the succeeding remainderman in tail, subject to a deduction of interest upon a larger sum at which the loss was computed.—*ROOK v. During life of J. houses on the estate insured by him were burnt down, & insurance money paid to J. which was placed in the funds in his name. J. by his will devised the estate to R. in fee, & his personal estate to W. W. applied part of the insurance money in repairing a house upon the estate. The insurance money unapplied remained standing in J.'s name. W. by his will, stated the circumstances, as to the fund so standing in his brother's name, & bequeathed the residue of his personal property :—Held : the insurance money unapplied was subject to the uses of the settlement, & passed to R. the devisee of J.—*NORMIS v. The will contained no provision for fire insurance. The mill having been burnt down, & it not being considered for the benefit of any person interested in the settled estates that it should be rebuilt :—Held : the insurance moneys belonged to the infant tenant in tail as his personal estate & were not to be treated as real estate for the benefit of all persons interested in the settled estates.—*WARWICK v. 2168. — Insurance of settled chattels.]—During the minority of a life tenant of settled estates in D., the trustees, acting under the powers of Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 42, & Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 11), s. 18, insured (a) the mansion house & (b) certain settled chattels & furniture against fire. The policies were taken in the names of the trustees, & the premiums were paid out of income. The house & chattels were for the most part destroyed by fire, & the trustees recovered £7,000 on the house policy & £1,244 on the chattel policy. The trustees, the infant life tenant, aged twenty, & the remaindermen all desired the house to be rebuilt & refurnished, but the infant life tenant, who was not bound to insure, claimed that, as the premiums had been paid out of his income, the policy moneys in the hands of the trustees were his, & he was entitled to a charge for any amount expended :—Held : (1) under Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (c. 78), s. 83, the remaindermen were entitled to have the £7,000 recovered on the house policy applied in rebuilding, & the infant life tenant was not entitled to a charge ; (2) the infant life tenant was entitled to the £1,244 recovered on the chattel policy, to which Fires Prevention (Metropolis) Act, 1774 (c. 78), s. 83, did not apply.—*Re QUICKE'S TRUSTS, POLTIMORE v. The property consisted of six hundred & fifty houses let on repairing leases for ninety-nine years at very small ground rents. The trustees employed a surveyor to report on the state of the property, & as a result served notices to repair on a large number of the tenants. The costs of so doing amounted to about half the annual income of the settled estate:—Held: these expenses were costs of management, & payable therefore out of income under the provision in the will, but the ct. had power under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 36, to direct their payment out of capital, if it thought fit, & in the special circumstances of the case it would do so.—*Re TUBBS, DYKES v. 2192. Expenses of receiver.—(1) A. was sole legatee & exor. of testator's personal estate, & tenant for life of his real estate, with remainder to his son. At the death of testator, he was largely indebted, & his personal estate was outstanding, owing, as to the greater part, to his having advanced large sums to a bank, of which his son was a partner, & which failed & became bkpt. For a long period, about eleven years, the tenant for life kept down the interest of the debts out of his life estate, which was wholly or nearly absorbed by such payment. Ultimately, enough personality was got in to pay a large portion of the debts, & was so applied; & then the real estate was sold:—Held: no portion of the money representing the corpus of the real estate could be applied in recouping the tenant for life the interest he had paid.

(2) A receiver had been appointed both of the real & personal estate:—Held: the tenant for life must bear the receiver's poundage.—SHORE v. SHORE (1859), 4 Drew. 501; 28 L. J. Ch. 940; 7 W. R. 390; 62 E. R. 192.

2193. Private Act authorising sale—Costs of obtaining.—Where an estate was settled on legal limitations in favour of one for life, with remainder to an infant tenant in tail, the ct. declined to order that the costs of an application to Parliament for a private Act to carry into effect a proposed sale which was beneficial to the estate should be borne by the estate whether such application were or were not successful. But the tenant for life consenting, the ct., being of opinion that the proposed application to Parliament would be for the benefit of the infant, sanctioned the application on the terms that the costs were to be borne by the tenant for life, unless an Act of Parliament was obtained otherwise directing.—STANFORD v. ROBERTS (1882), 52 L. J. Ch. 50; 48 L. T. 262.

should not sell any of his ships, or private shares in ships, for a period of seven years from the time of his death, unless the keeping of them should cause loss to or diminution of his estate, & in such case he gave his said exors. a discretionary power to sell same; but, subject as aforesaid, he directed them to retain his said ships & shares of ships for the period of seven years at the least, upon trust to superintend & manage same. At the time of testator's death many of his ships were employed in various voyages, all of which turned out profitably. Some of the other ships in which he had shares incurred losses:—Held: the whole must be considered as one general mercantile adventure, & that the amount of the necessary outfits, repairs, alterations, permanent improvements, & general expenses incurred before & subsequently to his death, should be deducted from the profits made & received after his death. The tenant for life entitled to the interest of the balances invested.—GREEN v. BRITTEN (1867), 16 L. T. 825; 2 Mar. L. C. 564.

2195. Depreciation of machinery in business settled.—Testator gave his trustees authority to carry on his business & bequeathed to his widow during her life "the profits arising from my business":—Held: the trustees had properly charged against the profits before paying them to the widow a yearly sum for depreciation of the machinery used in the business in addition to the cost of repairs.—Re CRABTREE, THOMAS v. CRABTREE (1911), 106 L. T. 49, C. A.

2196. Drainage works—Ordered by local authority.—C., by will, bequeathed a leasehold house in London to trustees in trust, after payment of all ordinary outgoings for ground rent, repairs, taxes, expenses of insurance or otherwise, to pay the rents to his wife for life, with remainders over. The local authority ordered certain drains to be made, under Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), s. 73. The trustees paid all the expenses of their construction out of the rents. The tenant for life took out a summons to have them paid out of the corpus of testator's estate:—Held: upon the construction of C.'s will, this was one of the expenses to be paid out of the rents before the income was paid to the tenant for life, semble, in no case would any part of similar expenses under the Act be thrown upon the remainderman in favour of the tenant for life.—*Re CRAWLEY, ACTON v. The lease was to contain a covenant by the landlord to pay the tenant for unexhausted improvements at the expiration of the term, but it was never executed. During the term the landlord died, having devised the farm to pltf. for life, with remainders over. On the expiration of the term the tenant gave up possession & pltf. went into possession. The question then arose, who was to pay the tenant for the valuation of the unexhausted improvements:—Held: the obligation to pay for unexhausted improvements was in the nature of a covenant running with the land; &, consequently, the valuation was payable

The will did not impose on the trustees any trusts whatever for the management, maintenance, or repairs of the mansion house. At testator's death the house was in general disrepair. Upon the application by the trustees as to whether they could apply capital moneys in their hands in putting the house into good repair.—Held: as the evidence did not show the case to be one of "salvage," the ct. could not, either under the Settled Land Acts, which admittedly did not apply, or its general jurisdiction, authorise the proposed expenditure.—*Re WILLIS, WILLIS v. 2201. — Expenses of compelling tenants to repair.—The expenses incurred by trustees in compelling tenants of the settled property to fulfil their obligations to repairs, such as costs of survey & of serving notices on the tenants, must be borne in fair proportion by the tenant for life & remainderman & that can be effected by raising the amount on a mtge. of the property. Such expenses are not "outgoings."—Re McCLURE'S TRUSTS, Carr v. Commercial Union Insurance Co. (1906), 76 L. J. Ch. 52; 95 L. T. 704; 23 T. L. R. 42; 51 Sol. Jo. 67.

2202. Drainage works.—By the will of testator, who died in 1840, certain freehold messuages were devised to trustees, their heirs & assigns, upon trust to permit A. & B. during their joint lives, & the survivor of them during his life, to hold, occupy, & enjoy the same, & to receive & take the rents thereof, & after the death of the survivor, upon trust for the first & other sons of B. successively in strict settlement. During the life of one of the equitable tenants for life, the trustees applied certain capital moneys held by them upon similar trusts in payment of expenses incurred for drainage works in respect of the devised messuages, which were without such sufficient drains as specified in Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 49:—Held: (1) as the trustees had the legal estate in the messuages, & were the persons entitled for the time being to receive the rack rents thereof, although in trust for the beneficiaries, they were "owners" within the definition of that term in Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 2, had rightly paid the drainage expenses in question out of the capital moneys in their hands, but as between the tenant for life & the remainderman the capital moneys so applied must be treated as a charge upon the messuages.

(2) By a clause in his will testator declared that the parties beneficially entitled to the rents & profits "of any of his houses" should keep the same in good & absolute repair:—Held: these drainage works were not "repairs" within the meaning of that clause.—Re BARNEY, HARRISON v. BARNEY, [1894] 3 Ch. 562; 63 L. J. Ch. 676; 71 L. T. 180; 43 W. R. 105; 8 R. 159.

2205. Making up road.—By the leases in 1875 & 1877 of two houses abutting on a private road, the lessee covenanted to pay all rates & taxes & to keep up the road. In 1882 the lessee executed a deed of gift of the two houses to his son upon trust for the father for life he paying "all outgoing & performing the covenants in the leases" & after his death upon trust for the son absolutely. In July, 1884, the local board served notices on the father under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 150, requiring him to make up the portions of the road on which the houses abutted; but the notice was not complied with & the board themselves did the work, which was completed in Feb. 1885. In June, 1885, the father died & the son entered into possession of the houses. In Sept. 1886, the son was served by the board with notices assessing a sum on each house for the proportion of expenses of making up the road & in Feb. 1887, he was served with demands & orders for payment of the assessed amounts by instalments with interest. In an action by the son claiming payment of the assessed expenses out of the father's estate:—Held: (1) the expenses were not a debt due from the father's estate inasmuch as the relation of debtor & creditor was not created by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), between the board & an owner of property for expenses incurred by the board; (2) the charge of the expenses under sect. 257 could not be recovered by the son against the estate of the tenant for life.—*Re BOOR, BOOR v. Testator's estate included an estate pur autre vie in certain funds which produced about £244 a year & two policies of assurance for £1,000, & £750 respectively, the annual premiums on which amounted to about £60. The cestui que vie had disappeared some years ago & his whereabouts was not known:—Held: the trustees were entitled to postpone the sale both of the life interest & the policies, & the premiums on the policies were payable out of capital.—*Re SHERRY, SHERRY v. A summons was taken out by the tenant for life asking that the Consols might be sold out & the proceeds invested in the debentures stocks of four leading railway cos. in accordance with

Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 39), s. 21. On Jan. 17, 1889, the judge made an order in chambers refusing the application on the ground that he had no power to alter the specific directions of the former order. On motion now made to discharge this order:—Held: since, if the money were invested in land, it might immediately be sold again by the tenant for life, & the purchase-money invested as asked, the ct. would direct the investment to be made at once. Order made accordingly. The costs of the application were ordered to be paid by the tenant for life.—Re TENNANT (1889), 40 Ch. D. 594; 58 L. J. Ch. 457; 60 L. T. 488; 37 W. R. 542; 5 T. L. R. 316.

There were four children & the wife became of unsound mind, though not so found by inquisition. The income of the trust funds amounted to £115 & the husband's expenses by reason of the lunacy were £84 12s. yearly. Under these circumstances, on a petition presented by the trustees, their lordships expressed the opinion that the whole income should be paid to the husband, he undertaking to apply it for the support of his wife & children, & an order to that effect was made, but it was ordered that the income should bear the costs of the petition.—Re SPILLER (1860), 2 L. purchased, to be vested in the trustees, to the use of C. for life, & after her death to W. for life, with limitations over in favour of the sons of W. in tail; & testator directed that until such time as his residuary estate should be laid out in the purchase of lands as aforesaid, his trustees should pay & apply the dividends, interest, & annual produce thereof, or of such part thereof as should remain so uninvested in the purchase of lands, to & for the use of such persons, & for such estates & interest, as he or they would be entitled to in the hereditaments directed to be purchased, or as near thereto, as the law would permit. Testator died in 1858, & at the same time of his death a considerable portion of his estate was invested in English & Irish Bank Stock, & in East India Stock. C. Other Proceedings concerning Estate.

2243. Costs out of capital.—Proceedings for protection of estate—By trustees.—The trustees of a freehold estate of which pltf. was equitable tenant for life under a will, brought actions under the advice of counsel against two persons for interfering with the property, & compromised them for trial. Pltf. had no notice of the proceedings, but had some time previously warned the trustees, on the occasion of an injury done by persons other than defts. to these actions, that he should hold them liable if they did not take all necessary steps to protect the property. In Dec. 1881, pltf. applied to the trustees for the rents accrued since May, 1880. The trustees' solr. answered stating the amount of the rents received, & saying that it was less than the costs incurred by the trustees in the action, & that they were out of pocket. A correspondence ensued, in the course of which the trustees expressed their willingness to concur in any arrangement for raising the costs out of the estate, but pltf. insisted on having the rents paid to him irrespective of any arrangement for raising the costs, & brought his action to enforce payment. The Vice-Chancellor of the Lancaster Ct. made an order declaring that as the actions were brought without the knowledge or consent of pltf., the costs were not chargeable against the income. & the ct. "being of opinion that the actions were commenced under the advice of the counsel," ordered the trustees' costs of them to be raised & paid out of the estate, but ordered the trustees to pay pltf. his costs of the present action up to the hearing. Pltf. appealed against the direction to raise the costs of the former actions out of the estate, & the trustees from the order as to the costs of the present action:—Held: (1) the direction to raise the costs of the trustees of the old actions out of the estate ought to be affirmed, for the actions appeared to have been brought bonâ fide & to have been beneficial to the estate, but the reason given to the decree for allowing them ought to be varied, as that result did not necessarily follow from their having been commenced under the advice of counsel, but (2) the order on the trustees to pay costs must be reversed, & directions given for raising their costs of this action out of the estate, for the costs of trustees properly incurred in the administration of the trust are a first charge on both the capital & income of the trust estate, & the trustees were not bound to part with the income till their costs had been otherwise provided for, & they therefore had been guilty of no misconduct.—*STOTT v. 2245. — Settlement of action for foreclosure.—A. was tenant for life on the L. estate, & his eldest son, B., an infant of sixteen years of age, was the first tenant in tail in remainder thereof. The L. estate was subject to four legal mtges., the different mtges. being on different portions of the estate; to one equitable mtge. over the whole of the estate; & to a charge for a portion over the whole estate. Under three of the legal mtges. the rate of interest was 5 per cent. per annum, reducible to 3 per cent.; & the rate of interest on the other legal mtge. & the portion charge was 4 per cent. per annum. One of the legal mtges. commenced a foreclosure action, & the L. estate was in danger of being broken up & foreclosed, when, at A.'s request, C. & D. paid off pltf. mtgee. & took a transfer of his security & also of the equitable mtge. The foreclosure action was stayed, & A. paid to pltf. mtgee. his costs of the foreclosure action & of the transfer of his security. A. incurred & was liable for certain costs in the foreclosure action & in connection with the transfers to C. & D. The other three legal mtgees. then demanded repayment, & threatened to foreclose the estate. A. then negotiated with S. to advance such a sum as would enable A. to pay off all the above-mentioned incumbrances on the L. estate, & procure a transfer of the said incumbrances to C. & D. for a term of five years, at 3½ per cent., & also to advance to A. a further sum sufficient to pay the costs, charges, & expenses already incurred by A. as above-mentioned, & also the costs, charges, & expenses of & incident to the transfer of the several mtges. A. then commenced an action against B., stating the above facts & verifying them by affidavit, & A. claimed to be entitled to charge the inheritance with such costs, charges, & expenses as he has incurred, with interest for the same:—Held: A. was entitled to (1) a declaration that he was entitled to a charge on the part of the L. estate comprised in the legal mtge. in respect of which the foreclosure action was brought for the costs, charges, & expenses paid or incurred by A. in relation to the foreclosure action, & of the transfers to C. & D., with interest at 4 per cent.; (2) a declaration that A. would be entitled to a charge upon the several portions of the L. estate comprised in the other three legal mtges. & in the equitable mtge., & the portion charge for the costs, charges, & expenses to be incurred by A. & the mtgees. & transferees thereof in relation to the proposed transfers of the last-mentioned securities, or for any other costs properly incurred by pltf. in protecting the L. estate from the claims of the mtgees. thereof, with interest at 4 per cent.; & (3) if necessary, the above-mentioned costs, charges, & expenses & the costs of this action might be raised by a proper mtge. of the L. estate.—MORE v. MORE (1889), 60 L. T. 626; 37 W. R. 414.

2247. Settled legacy appropriated by executors—Action by remainderman against executors—Costs out of legacy.—A stock legacy bequeathed to several in succession, was appropriated by the exors., & the residue paid over. In a suit between the remainderman & the exors. alone, the legacy was transferred into ct., & the costs of suit were paid thereout. The tenant for life afterwards filed a claim to have the amount of costs recouped out of the residue. It was dismissed with costs.—RICHARDSON v. RUSBRIDGER (1855), 20 Beav. 136; 52 E. R. 554.

Testator died in 1775, leaving his brother his heir-at-law. The nephew entered into possession of the real estate, which consisted of a plantation in Jamaica, subject to a mtge. created by testator in 1765. The brother afterwards died, leaving the nephew, his only son, & then heir-at-law of testator; the nephew died in 1822 without issue male. He then directed the unsold hereditaments to be settled on A. for life, with remainder over. Testator was greatly indebted, on bonds, & his personal estate was largely deficient. More than a year elapsed before the sale of the real estates:—Held: the interest on all the debts for the first year was payable out of the corpus of the real estate, but the tenant for life was bound to keep down the subsequent interest.—*GREISLEY v. 2262. —.]—The obligation of the tenant for life of an estate subject to incumbrances, to keep down interest on the incumbrances, exists only as between him & the remainderman, & not as between him & the incumbrancers.

Testator devised real estate to trustees for term of 500 years upon trust to raise a sum of £9,000, with interest, for his younger children, & subject thereto to his son F. for life, with remainders over. One moiety of the charge of £9,000 became vested in testator's daughter, M. No part of the charge was ever raised; & F., who had been let into possession, failed to keep down the interest. M. died in the lifetime of F., having by her will left him a legacy to be paid out of her moiety of the £9,000:—Held: the legacy could not be retained by the exors. of M. in satisfaction of the arrears of interest due to her.—Re MORLEY, MORLEY v. SAUNDERS (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 594; 38 L. J. Ch. 552; 21 L. T. 132; 17 W. R. 959.

2264. —.]—Testator devised all his real estate, except two specified estates, to trustees, upon trust for his son for life, with remainder in strict settlement, & he devised the two specified estates upon similar trusts in favour of his two daughters respectively for life, with remainders to their respective issue. By a deed executed on the marriage of his son, testator covenanted to pay to the son or his wife during their joint lives an annuity of £700. Testator's personal estate proved insufficient to provide for the annuity:—Held: the three real estates ought to contribute towards payment of the annuity rateably according to their respective values; & each tenant for life would have a charge upon the corpus of the estate in respect of the proportion of the annuity paid by him, or her, but would have to keep down the interest on the amount so charged.—*Re HARRISON, TOWNSON v. The rents received from the estate were insufficient to pay the interest, & the tenant for life paid to the assignees of the charge this interest out of other money of his own; but did so without giving any notice whatever to the remainderman of his intention to make the deficiency a charge on the inheritance. After the death of the tenant for life the remainderman claimed to redeem, & the assignees of the charge sought, as against the inheritance, to charge it with the amount of the deficiencies:—Held: they were not entitled to do so.—*KENSINGTON (LORD) v. 2269. — —.]—(1) Apart from any question arising upon the special terms of the instrument creating the settlement, a tenant for life must keep down the interest accruing during his lifetime on all paramount incumbrances to the extent & out of the rents & profits received by him. If the current rents are insufficient to keep down the interest, subsequent rents arising during the life of the tenant for life are applicable to liquidate arrears accruing during the same life tenancy.

(2) Where several estates are included in the same settlement, the tenant for life is bound, out of the whole rents & profits, to keep down the interest on charges on all the estates.

(3) Upon principle, therefore, a tenant for life of several estates included in the same devise is liable, as between himself, & the remaindermen, to make good arrears of interest accrued during his life tenancy out of subsequent rents received by him from any of the estates, even although the charge in respect of which the arrears have arisen has been paid off by means of a sale of part of the property.—*HONYWOOD v. 2297. —.]—J. by his will left his residuary real & personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale & conversion & to pay debts & legacies & then for his eight children, of whom one was to have one-fifteenth & the others two-fifteenths each, & he settled all the shares wholly, or partially upon trust for the son or daughter for life with remainders over. By a settlement made on the marriage of one of his sons before the date of his will testator had covenanted to pay to that son an annuity of £250 a year. Testator died in 1901, leaving a very large estate. His widow & all his children were living, & owing to a mistaken view of the construction of the will the son's annuity had not been paid. The trustees had sufficient funds, representing capital, in hand to pay the arrears, but the question was raised whether, as between the tenants for life & remaindermen of the settled shares, part of the burden of paying the past & future instalments of the annuity ought not to be borne by the tenants for life:—Held: each instalment of the annuity must be apportioned between capital & income by calculating what sum if set aside at testator's death would, with simple interest at 3½ per cent. to the day of payment, have met the particular instalment; & the sum so ascertained ought to be chargeable to capital & the balance to income, having regard to the number of shares into which the estate was divisible.—Re POYSER, LANDON v. POYSER, [1910] 2 Ch. 444; 79 L. J. Ch. 748; 103 L. T. 134.

SUB-SECT. 5.—DISCHARGE OF INCUMBRANCES BY TENANT FOR LIFE.

2298. Tenant for life entitled to retain charge.]

—(1) Tenant in tail restrained as to alienation, but with powers of leasing & jointuring as in case of tenant for life, considered as tenant for life, & therefore his personal representative a creditor for a charge on the estate paid by him, intent to the contrary not appearing, though the subsequent remainders were exactly of the same nature, & the term having been very short, little more than forty years remained.

(2) Tenant for life is only to keep down the interest of an incumbrance, but not to be charged with any part of the principal.—SHREWSBURY (COUNTESS) v. SHREWSBURY (EARL) (1790), 1 Ves. 227; 3 Bro. C. C. 120; 30 E. R. 314, L. C.

2300. Benefit of tenant for life.]—FAULKNER v. DANIEL, No. 2255, ante.

2301. —.]—On his father's death in 1904, pltf. became entitled as tenant in tail to the family estates, which were subject to charges & incumbrances. With a view to the reduction of mtges. out of savings of income, & in order to meet the wishes of his older relatives in that respect, pltf. went to reside abroad giving powers of attorney for the management of his estates to one of the trustees, & with pltf.'s assent a considerable proportion of income was applied in reduction of mtges. on the estates. In Feb. 1909, pltf. attained twenty-one, & in Oct. 1909, disentailed & resettled the estates, becoming the first tenant for life. The same course as to payment of incumbrances out of income was continued. Pltf. claimed a charge on the settled estates for sums paid out of income in further reduction of these incumbrances between the date of the resettlement & 1912. His evidence was that all the payments were to be for his own benefit, & he regarded the incumbrances as pro tanto paid off altogether:—Held: pltf.'s intention throughout was to benefit himself alone, the presumption in favour of a limited owner who pays off incumbrances was not rebutted & pltf. was entitled to a charge on the inheritance for the amount paid out of income in discharging incumbrances.—WILLIAMS v. WILLIAMS-WYNN (1915), 84 L. J. Ch. 801; 113 L. T. 849.

2302. — Where no intention to exonerate estate.—Evidence of intention.]—Where tenant for life pays off an incumbrance upon the estate, he shall be considered as a creditor for the money so paid; but where tenant in tail pays, it is in exoneration of the estate of which he may make himself absolute owner.

A tenant for life, in general, paying off a charge, without taking an assignment, is a creditor for the sum so paid, but the smallest demonstration that he meant to pay it off will prevent his representative from coming for the money (LORD THURLOW, C.).—JONES v. 2303. — — — — —.]—If a tenant for life pays off a charge on the inheritance, he is primâ facie entitled to that charge for his own benefit; but he may, if he think proper, exonerate the estate. In the absence of evidence, the presumption is, that he pays the charge for his own benefit, & not for the benefit of the persons entitled in remainder; but evidence may show the contrary conclusion to be true.—BURRELL v. 2304. — — — — —.]—In 1824, A. purchased an estate, & he mortgaged it to raise part of the purchase-money. In Feb. 1840, the mtge. was paid off & transferred to B., who in Apr. 1840, executed a declaration of trust in favour of A. A. died in 1848.—Held: the charge had merged.

What the ct. is to look at is, to see what was the intention of the person who paid off the charge. That intention, in the absence of any circumstances, is to be gathered from what it was his interest to do; but if there be any circumstances affecting the matter, they also are to be regarded (ROMILLY, M.R.).—PITT v. 2308. — — — — —.]—A reversionary interest in trust funds was mortgaged by the reversioner. He afterwards on his marriage assigned the same interest, subject to the mtge., to trustees, on trust for his wife for her life, with remainder to himself for his life, with remainders over. After the marriage he paid off the mtge. debt out of his own moneys, & the mtgee. executed a deed which purported to reconvey the mtged. property to him "absolutely discharged from" the mtge. debt & all claims under the mtge. deed. The solis. who prepared the reconveyance were ignorant of the existence of the settlement.

In an action by the reversioner, claiming to have the reconveyance set aside or rectified, he gave evidence that he did not intend to pay off the mtge. debt for the benefit of the settlement, but that he intended to keep the charge alive for his own benefit.—Held: notwithstanding the form of the reconveyance, plff. was entitled to have the charge kept alive for his own benefit, & the sum secured by the mtge. constituted a charge on the property having priority over the settlement, & a declaration was made to that effect.—GIFFORD (LORD) v. FITZARDINGE (LORD), [1899] 2 Ch. 32; 68 L. J. Ch. 529; 81 L. T. 106; 47 W. R. 618.

2309. Payment of bond debts insufficient.]—A tenant for life discharging an incumbrance upon the estate is presumed to have intended to keep the charge alive, against the inheritance for his own benefit, & the absence of an assignment will not conclude him; but a similar presumption does not arise from the payment by a tenant for life

2302i. — Where no intention to exonerate estate.—Evidence of intention.]—After an express declaration of the tenant for life to charge, it cannot, from the debts being paid by him, from no assignment of the securities being taken, or from length of time, be presumed he intended to exonerate the estate.—REDINGTON v. 2302ii. — — — — —.]—A tenant for life paid off incumbrances & by his will declared his intention to have been not to exonerate the inheritance:—Held: this declaration of intention was sufficient.—LYSAGHT v. LYSAGHT (1851), 4 Ir. Jur. 110.—IR.

2302iv. — — — — —.]—A tenant for life of real estate paid off a charge on the fee, & took an absolute release of his estate in the lands, with the intention of extinguishing the charge, under an erroneous belief that he was owner in fee of the lands. He subsequently became aware that he was only tenant-for-life, & he consulted his solicitors, with the view, if possible, of keeping the charge alive for his own benefit, & a case was sent to counsel in reference to the matter, who advised proceedings in Chancery, which, however, the tenant for life declined to bring. He made no mention of the charge in his will. There was conflicting evidence as to various expressions of his intention, made subsequent to the payment off of the charge. After his death his execs. brought an action to raise the charge as portion of his assets.—Held: notwithstanding the release of the lands & the other circumstances of the case, the tenant for life was entitled, on discovering his error, to keep the charge alive against the inheritance, & his subsequent acts & declarations sufficiently evidenced that intention.—CONOLLY v. BARTER, [1904] 1 I. R. 130.—IR.

h. Discharge by successive tenants for life.—Repayment ratably in proportion to payments made.]—Testator devised certain lands, subject to an instalment mtge., to his wife for life, remainder to his children for life, remainder over. After testator's death his widow paid several instalments on foot of the mtge. She died intestate, & further instalments were then paid by the other tenants for life. The lands were sold, & the balance of the mtge. paid off out of the proceeds. The remaining surplus of the purchase-money proving insufficient to repay the tenants for life in full:—Held: the several tenants for life were entitled to be repaid ratably, the first tenant for life having no right to be repaid the sums expended by her on foot of the mtge., in priority to the other tenants for life.—Re NEPEAN'S SETTLED ESTATE, [1900] 1 I. SECT. 8.—ADJUSTMENT OF LOSSES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—AUTHORISED INVESTMENTS.

A. In General.

2310. Tenant for life not entitled to recoupment out of capital—Bequest of stock to produce certain income—Dividends on stock reduced.]—Testator bequeathed so much of his personal estate as when invested in stock would produce £125 a year, to trustees, upon trust to pay the dividends of such stock to A. for life, with a direction that the capital stock should, at A.'s death, fall into the residue of his, testator's, estate, & a provision, that, if the stock should, before the trusts were fully performed, be paid off or reduced, by which any loss or deficiency might arise, the persons respectively interested therein should bear & sustain such loss or deficiency out of their respective interests, upon their becoming entitled thereto. The dividends on the stock were reduced during the life of A.:—Held: A. was not entitled to have the reduced dividends made up to £125 a year by a sale of a portion of the capital of the stock.—BAGUE v. DUMERGUE (1853), 10 Hare, 462; 20 L. T. O. S. 322; 1 W. R. 197; 68 E. R. 1008.

2311. — Sale of leaseholds—Income from investment of proceeds less than rents.]—Leaseholds under a dean & chapter, renewable by custom, were held by trustees upon trust for a tenant for life, with remainder over; & the trustees were directed, "two years or sooner before the time for renewal," to bring a part of the rental into a fund until a sufficient sum was raised for the renewal, "so that the estates may be always kept renewed . . . for ever." In June, 1865, & Feb. 1866, notices to treat for parts of the leaseholds, then having about thirteen & five years respectively to run, were given by a railway co. At Lady Day, 1866, the dean & chapter ceased to renew leases; & about the same date their property was taken over by the Ecclesiastical Comrs. The values of the two properties having been assessed at amounts which, when paid, & invested in 3 per cent. stock, gave a diminished income to the tenant for life:—Held: the tenant for life was not entitled to be recouped the deficiency of income out of the corpus of the fund.—Re Wood's Estate (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 572; 40 L. J. Ch. 59; 23 L. T. 430; 19 W. R. 59.

2312. — — — — —]—Under an order of the ct. in a partition action, leasehold property settled upon trust for A. for life with remainders over was sold, & the proceeds paid into ct., & invested in Consols, the dividends of which were much less in amount than the yearly rents received from the leaseholds:—Held: A. was not entitled to any allowance out of the corpus to make up the deficiency in her annual income.—LANGMEAD v. COCKERTON (1877), 25 W. R. 315.

2313. — Trustees entering into possession of mortgaged leaseholds—Rents received less than interest on mortgages.]—Where trustees, under a power in a will, have invested trust funds on the security of mtges. on leasehold properties, & have, on the bkpy. of the mtgor., foreclosed, the effect of Conveyancing Act, 1911 (c. 37), s. 9, is to place the property which has been foreclosed so far as practicable in the same position as if it had originally formed part of the estate of testator.

Trustees, acting under a power in a will, invested trust money on the security of nine mtges. on nine leasehold properties. The mtgor. having become bkpt., the trustees foreclosed. Four of the properties were sold, leaving five unsold. In the case of two, the net rent exceeded the amount of the interest on the mtge. In the case of two others the net rent was about equal to the former interest, & in the case of the remaining property, the net rent was less than the former interest:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled to the whole of the net rents, pending the sale of the properties; but if during that period the net rents amounted to less than the amounts he would have received by way of interest on the mtges., he would not be entitled to claim any part of the proceeds of sale.—Re HORN'S ESTATE, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. GARNETT, [1921] 2 Ch. 222; 93 L. J. Ch. 490; 131 L. T. 286; 68 Sol. Jo. 577.

2314. Misappropriation by trustee—Loss borne by life tenant.]—A trustee, whose duty it was to renew leaseholds out of the rents, applied them to his own use:—Held: the tenant for life, & not those in remainder, must bear the loss.—*SOLLEY v. 2317. Securities bearing interest—Tenant for life receiving deficient or no interest—Death of tenant for life—Right of representative to have arrears made good.]—Second mtge. 6 per cent. gold bonds of a Mexican railway co. contained a promise by the co. to pay the principal secured in 1917, & interest thereon, "accumulative, at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum" on Mar. 1 & Sept. 1 in each year, "upon surrender of the annexed coupons, as & when earned, out of any net earnings of any year remaining after interest" on the co.'s first mtge. bonds had been paid for such year, & provided as follows: "If in any year the net earnings so remaining available for payment of interest upon the "second mtge. bonds "shall not be sufficient to pay such interest in full, there shall be paid any part thereof earned & available, & any deficiency shall not be waived, but shall be paid to the holder hereof out of the net earnings of any subsequent year or years, as & when there shall be any net earnings available for such purpose."

By a settlement made in May, 1899, some of the second mtge. bonds were settled upon trust to pay the income to M. for life, & after her death to her husband, T., for life, & after the death of the survivor, if T. survived her, in trust for the next of kin, excluding T., of M.

Interest less than 6 per cent. per annum was paid on the bonds down to 1901, & no deficiency of any year was ever made up out of the earnings of any subsequent year or otherwise.

In Mar. 1902, the bonds, with the coupons, were sold by the trustees for £2,700, & in May, 1902, M. died leaving T. surviving her, & he was her legal personal representative:—Held: T. was not entitled to any part of the £2,700 as representing the apportioned amount in respect of any deficiency of interest in M.'s lifetime, but the whole of the £2,700 went to M.'s next of kin.—*Re TAYLOR'S TRUSTS, MATHESON v. 2319. —————.]—Testatrix, who died on July 15, 1915, was entitled under the will of testator, who died in 1901, to a life interest in the residue of his estate, which included fully-paid preference shares conferring a right to a fixed cumulative preference dividend at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, the co.'s arts. providing that the co. in general meeting, on the directors' recommendation, should declare the dividend to be paid. For the year 1906 a reduced dividend of 4 per cent. was paid, & no further dividend was declared until 1915. On Nov. 29, 1915, a dividend of 10 per cent. was declared, "being 3 per cent. in respect of arrears for the year ending Sept. 1906, & 7 per cent. in respect of arrears for the year 1907." In 1916 the dividend paid was 14 per cent., being 7 per cent. for the years 1908 & 1909 respectively:—Held: the case was covered by the judgment in Re Sale, Nisbet v. Philp, No. 2318, ante, & the estate of testatrix, the tenant for life, was not entitled to the dividends on the preference shares declared since her death, except an apportioned part of the dividend declared in the year 1915 down to the

B. Securities for Principal and Interest.

2320. Interest falling into arrear—Deficiency on realisation of security—Ratio of apportionment of proceeds.—A sum of £8,000, held upon trust for A. for life, with remainders over, was invested upon a mtge. The investment proved unsatisfactory, & shortly after the death of A. the mtge. was realised for £7,900 only. At A.'s death there was due to him £536 in respect of arrears of interest. It was proposed to ascertain what capital sum, if received at the date of the first default in payment of interest, would, with compound interest at 4 per cent. per annum, have produced at the date of realisation of the mtge. the sum of £7,900, & that the capital sum so ascertained should be paid to the remaindermen as capital, & the residue of the £7,900 paid to A.'s estate in respect of his claim for interest:—Held: on the contrary, the £7,900 must be divided into two parts, in the proportion of £8,000 & £536, the former to be paid to the remaindermen, the latter to A.'s representatives.—*Re MOORE, MOORE v. The estate due on the mtge. fell into arrear, & in 1880 a petition for sale & the appointment of a receiver was presented by the trustees of the will & a receiver was appointed in the same year. In 1898 A., the first tenant for life, died. At her death considerable arrears of income were due to her, a portion of which was afterwards paid to her exors. In 1901 the lands subject to the mtge. were sold under Land Purchase Acts, & did not realise the amount of the mtge. security. Prior to the sale nothing had been paid to B., the present tenant for life, in respect of interest:—Held: the date of the sale of mortgaged lands must be taken to be the period at which the deficiency of the security was first ascertained; & the sum realised by the sale should be apportioned, in proportion to the amounts due at that date, between the exors. of the first tenant for life, the present tenant for life, & the trustees of the will as representing the persons entitled to the corpus of the fund.—*STEWART v. 2325. ————— Income received brought into hotchpot.]—Testator gave his residuary estate to trustees in trust for his widow for life, with remainder to certain persons absolutely. After his death the trustees invested £7,535, part of his residuary estate, on mtge. of freehold property at 5 per cent. The trustees afterwards entered into possession & paid the rents to the widow, the tenant for life, but such rents were insufficient to keep down the interest, the arrears of which amounted at her death to £3,400. Shortly after her death the trustees sold the mtged. property; but it realised £7,005 only, that is, less than the principal of the mtged. debt:—Held: the £7,005 should be apportioned between the exors. of the tenant for life & the remaindermen, the residuary legatees, upon the basis of the following calculation; add to the £7,005 the amount of income actually received by the tenant for life; divide the total between the remaindermen & the exors. of the tenant for life in the proportion which the original principal, £7,535, plus interest thereon at 5 per cent. from the death of the tenant for life to date of sale, would bear to the aggregate amount of mtge. interest, less income tax, which the tenant for life would have received during her life had it been regularly paid, the exors. of the tenant for life giving credit for the amount of income she actually received.—*Re FOSTER, LLOYD v. By an order the rents were apportioned in the proportion of the arrears due to the tenant for life at her death & the arrears since due to the remaindermen without prejudice to any re-adjustment when the security was realised. The security was subsequently realised, & the purchase-money was placed on deposit:—Held: the rents paid under the order must be brought into hotchpot, & the aggregate of those rents & the purchase-money should be distributed between the representatives of the tenant for life & the remaindermen in the proportion which the arrears of rent due at the death of the tenant for life bore to the aggregate of the principal money & arrears due to the remaindermen of rent due at the death of the tenant for life bore to the aggregate of the principal money & arrears due to the remaindermen.—Re SOUTHWELL, CARTER v. HUNGERFORD (1915), 85 L. J. Ch. 70; 113 L. T. 311.

2328. ————— Clause disentitling life tenant to property not producing income.]—The will of testator contained the ordinary clause empowering his trustees to postpone the sale & conversion of his estate & declaring that the income thereof, previous to the conversion, should be applied as if it were income arising under investments authorised by the will. Then followed this proviso: "But no property not actually producing income which shall form part of my estate shall be treated as producing income or as entitling any party to the receipt of income." There was a debt, due to testator at the time of his death, which could not be got in, & the trustees took from debtor as security for it a third mtge. upon certain policies of insurance on his life. Debtor died in the lifetime of a lady who was tenant for life under the will, & the trustees who had received neither principal nor interest in respect of the debt, realised their security with the result that after payment of the prior charges, they received a sum which was less than the amount due by all the interest & some of the capital:—Held: (1) according to the rule of the ct. this sum represented the arrears of interest as well as the capital & (2) it must be treated as property actually producing income within the meaning of the proviso & must be apportioned between the tenant for life & the remainderman in the proportion that the interest due from the date of the mtge. bore to the capital thereby secured.—Re HUBBUCK, HART v. STONE, [1896] 1 Ch. 754; 65 L. J. Ch. 271; 73 L. T. 738; 44 W. R. 289; 40 Sol. Jo. 257, C. A.

Grose-Smith*, No. 2324, post, notwithstanding the provisions of a clause in the trust deed whereby the debentures were secured to the effect that the proceeds of realisation were to be applied first in satisfaction of all arrears of interest & next in satisfaction of principal.—*Re PENNINGTON, PENNINGTON v. 2330. — Mortgagee in possession—Apportionment of receipts.]—On Dec. 10, 1884, a mtge. of £18,000 on farm A. was settled on successive trusts for two life tenants & a remainderman without making any provision for some three years' arrears of interest then owing to one settlor who became first life tenant thereunder. The first life tenant died on July 8, 1893, & the second life tenant on Jan. 22, 1903. From Oct. 11, 1881, to Oct. 11,

2330 i. — Mortgagee in possession—Apportionment of receipts.]—Money in settlement was invested by the trustee on a mtge. The interest fell into arrear, & a receiver was appointed over the lands, pending sale. The security was likely to prove deficient. The tenant for life having died:—Held: the money brought in by the receiver 1902, the mtgor. had worked farm A. together with farm B. under an arrangement by which he was to pay the net incomes to mtgees. of farm A. & farm B. respectively to the extent of the interest due to them. The net incomes were not nearly sufficient to keep down the interest in either case, but owing to errors in the apportionment of working expenses during the joint working the mtgees. of farm B. had altogether been paid £1,028 in excess of the income properly attributable to their farm. On Aug. 11, 1905, the trustees recovered the £1,028, representing income earned from Oct. 11, 1881, to Oct. 11, 1902, from the mtgees. of farm B. From Oct. 11, 1902, to Oct. 11, 1906, the mtgor. continued to work farm A. as manager to the trustees. On Oct. 11, 1906, the trustees let farm A. at a rent of £515, & on Nov. 29, 1906, they received £2,368 in respect of the sale of farm stock provided out of & representing income earned from Oct. 11, 1881, to Oct. 11, 1906. The interest was now heavily in arrear, & the security was greatly depreciated. Foreclosure proceedings had been commenced, but no order had yet been made:—Held: the first life tenant's representative could not as against the other beneficiaries claim any arrears of interest owing at the date of the settlement, but subject to this exception the two sums of £1,028 & £2,368, & every sum of accruing rent received up to the time of foreclosure absolute, must be treated as a payment on account of all arrears of interest owing at the date of payment, & must be apportioned between the estates of the two life tenants & the remainderman in proportion to the amounts owing to them for arrears of interest at the date when the particular sum was received.—*Re BROADWOOD'S SETTLEMENTS, BROADWOOD v. Testator's assets included several mtge. debts the interest on which was in arrear at his death. Testator had entered into & remained in receipt of the rents of the mtgd. properties up to his death & the trustees had continued in such receipt. The securities being deficient, the question arose between the tenants for life & the remaindermen as to the application of these rents:—Held: the trustees must first apply each instalment of rent received since testator's death from each mtgd. property in satisfaction of the arrears of interest which at testator's death were due in respect of the mtge., & then distribute the balance as income up to but not exceeding the interest accrued since testator's death on the mtge., & apply any excess as capital.—*Re COAKS, COAKS v. Proceeds of working the colliery come to the hands of a receiver in the foreclosure action were transferred to the credit of an action to administer testator's estate:—Held: the funds in ct. were apportionable between capital & income, on the principle that so much as would, if invested at testator's death at 4 per cent. with annual rests, have amounted to the sum transferred at the date of transfer should be treated as capital & the rest as income.—*Re GODDEN, TEAGUE v. When the day arrived, it appeared that a leasehold property forming part of the residue could not be advantageously sold, & that it would be for the benefit of all persons interested that it should be retained by the trustees of the will & managed by them, although at a probable annual loss:—Held: the annual loss or profit, if any, ought to be apportioned between capital & income by calculating the sum which, put out at interest at 4 per cent. per annum on the given day & accumulating at compound interest at the like rate with yearly rests, would, together with such interest & accumulations, after deducting income tax, be equivalent at the end of each year to the amount of the loss or profit sustained or made during that year & then charging the sum so ascertained against, or crediting it to, capital, & charging the rest of the loss against, or crediting the rest of the profit to, income.—*Re HENGLER, FROWDE v. Testator left property employed in business, & other property. The trustees carried on the business, & duly invested the other property. For some years the business was successful, & the profits were duly divided among the tenants for life. SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

Sec. generally, REAL PROPERTY, Vol. XXXVIII., p. 709, Nos. 532–537.

2342. Pending suit—Custody most convenient to court.—Testator devised his real estate in strict settlement, giving to trustees a power of sale & exchange, to be exercised with the consent of the person entitled in possession, if of full age; & he bequeathed his residuary personalty to the trustees upon the trusts declared concerning the moneys to arise from sales under the power. Shortly after the death of testator a decree was made at the suit of the first tenant for life, then an infant, for the execution of the trusts of the will. Parts of the estates were sold under the power, & the money paid into ct., & a large fund was there applicable to the purchase of real estates. After the tenant for life came of age inquiries were directed as to the investment of part of the funds in real estate, & as to the propriety of applying to Parliament for a private estate Act, which inquiries were still being prosecuted. Shortly after this the tenant for life applied to the ct. that the trustees might be ordered to deliver to her the title deeds of the estates, subject to the limitations of the will, which application was refused:—Held: as a suit affecting the estates was being prosecuted, the custody of the deeds did not depend on the question who had the legal right to them, but on the question what custody was most convenient for the purposes of the suit; & the Ct. of Appeal would not interfere with the discretion of the Vice-Chancellor on the subject.—*STANFORD v. Right as against heir.]—Pltf., as heir-at-law of C., sued deft. to recover possession of a title deed under the following circumstances: By a conveyance of Nov. 12, 1862, certain freehold property was conveyed to C. in fee. On July 13, 1865, C., by an ante-nuptial settlement of that date, in consideration of his intended marriage with deft.'s sister, charged the property with the payment, after his death, of a year annuity of £12 to her during her life, & secured same by a grant of the property to deft., as trustee for his sister, for a term of one hundred years, with the usual powers of distress & entry, etc., in case of the quarterly payments of the annuity being in arrear. Upon the execution of the settlement C. handed the deed of conveyance of Nov. 12, 1862, to deft., & said to him, "You shall have the deed of the house to hold in your own possession for the safety of your sister," & at the same time a written acknowledgment of the receipt of the conveyance, & an undertaking to deliver it up to C. or his assigns, on the fulfilment of the trusts of the settlement, was signed by the deft.

The marriage took place, & on C.'s subsequent death, in Dec. 1875, pltf., as his eldest son & heir-at-law, brought an action in the county ct. against deft. to recover possession of the conveyance of Nov. 12, 1862:—Held: deft., as trustee of the settlement, was entitled to retain possession of the deed of conveyance in question during the continuance of the trusts of the settlement on the ground that it was delivered to him by C., the settlor, as a further security for the payment of the annuity, & the possession of it enabled him the better to perform the trusts of the settlement with the execution of which he was charged.—*CORIN v. 2377. Trustees entitled to lien on land.]—Testator gave real & personal property in trust to accumulate rents & profits during the minority of H. who was to be, & in fact was, let into possession on attaining twenty-one as tenant for life. A private Act authorised land to be purchased by the ct. at the instance of a tenant for life of full age, & to be paid for out of the personalty. The moneys so paid were to be deemed a debt from the real to the personal estate, which debt was to be held by the trustees as part of the personalty & secured by a lien on the purchased land. Subject to such lien the purchased land was to be settled on the trusts of the will:—Held: as to land so purchased, the trustees, so long as their lien existed, were entitled to the custody of the title deeds.—WHEELER v. TOOTELL (1903), 51 W. R. 693; 47 Sol. Jo. 710.

After trust exhausted.]—By an ante-nuptial settlement lands of the wife were released to the use of the relessees to uses & their heirs during the joint lives of the husband & wife, & the life of the survivor, on certain trusts, with a limitation to the use of the wife in fee, in the event, which happened, of there being no issue of the marriage. After the death of the husband, who survived the wife, the surviving relessee to uses, with a tenant in possession of the land under a lease from the husband, made a feoffment, & levied a fine to the use of himself in fee:—Held: a ct. of equity might entertain a suit instituted by the heir-at-law of the wife against the relessee to uses to recover possession of the land & the title deeds.

Semble: the surviving relessee to uses after the determination of his own legal estate had no rightful title to the custody of the title deeds, & could not be considered as holding them as a trustee for the reversioner.—RELICE v. TRYE (1847), 1 De G. & Sm. 273; 12 Jur. 689; 63 E. R. 1065.

The tenant for life died, & the estate then stood limited, first, to F. & W. for five hundred years to secure a sum of £2,000, with remainder to trustees for six hundred years to secure a jointure & portions, with remainder to A. in tail. A. being an infant, a suit was instituted on his behalf, in which the £2,000 was raised on the security of the term. Upon that occasion F. & W. covenanted with the mtgees. to produce the title deeds from time to time, & not to part with them; but they were relievable from the covenant on certain terms. A receiver was appointed in the suit, & the ct. directed the costs of the solrs. of the suit to remain charges upon the estate at interest. W. & C. were solrs. in the suit for A. A. upon coming of age, presented a petition for the delivery of the title deeds:—Held: (1) independently of the covenant W. & C. held the deeds for A. & not for the termors, but the covenant having been entered into for the benefit of the infant, F. & W. were not bound to part with the deeds, until released from their covenant; (2) W. was not entitled to hold the deeds for the trustees of the term of six hundred years, or for any costs other than those of seeing himself properly released from the covenant, & he had no right to require them to be delivered to the receiver in the cause.—*HOTHAM v. The heir-at-law could not be found. 2385. Exercise of power—Purposes foreign to object of settlement.—Purchaser not compelled to take a doubtful title; viz. by executing a power of sale, introduced under a direction by a decree, establishing a will, to the master to approve a proper settlement: the will not authorising the insertion of such a power; nor could it be sustained under a power by a former settlement; which, if not extinct by the failure of the limitations, & the union of the estate for life with the reversion, could not be duly applied to purposes clearly foreign to its original object: & though purchasers are not put to exercise a very nice & critical judgment with regard to the purposes, for which powers are created, it could never be intended to refer to a perfectly new set of limitations, in a new settlement, at a long subsequent period, under a disposition by the will of the owner of the fee; to be exercised, not for any purpose in the least degree connected with the settlement, but avowedly as an expedient to supply the want of a valid power in that settlement, & enable those, whom he had made only tenants for life, to dispose of the estate.—*WHEATE v. Upon the marriage of A. & B., A.'s estate was settled upon him for life; remainder to the use, that if B. should survive she should have a jointure of £600 per annum; remainder to trustees for 500 years, to secure the arrears of jointure; remainder to trustees for two thousand years, to raise portions for younger children; & subject thereto, the estate was limited to the issue of the marriage, with an ultimate remainder to A. in fee. The settlement contained a power to B., at any time after the marriage, to charge the sum of £2,000 on the property, to be raised after her decease, & for the benefit of her personal estate; & for the purpose of raising that sum, she had power to create a term. There was in the settlement a power of sale & exchange given to trustees, to be exercised with the consent of A., & after his decease, within twenty-one years from thence, with the consent of the persons for the time being entitled to the rents & profits. There was no issue of the marriage, & A. died, living B., having devised, amongst other things, the estate in question to trustees, upon trust to sell, & apply the proceeds

2392. Power directing purchase & settlement of other lands—Death of tenant for life before settling—Purchase presumed made under direction in power.—Where a tenant for life sells part of the settled estate under the authority of an Act of Parliament which directs him to lay out the consideration money in the purchase of other lands, & to settle them to the same uses, & he afterwards purchases lands in fee simple, to nearly the amount, but dies without having settled them accordingly, leaving them to descend upon his heir-at-law, who was also the first tenant in tail in remainder under the settlement, a ct. of equity will intend that the purchase was made in performance of the obligation imposed by the Act, & will not permit the remainderman to recover the value of the lands sold against the personal estate of the tenant for life.—TUBBS v. BROADWOOD (1831), 2 Russ. & M. 487; 39 E. R. 479.

2393. Power to sell land if required for public undertaking—Cemetery company incorporated under Act—Sale to cemetery company good under power.—By a settlement, executed on the marriage of pltf.'s eldest son, it was provided, that pltf., who was tenant for life of the lands comprised in the settlement, should have power to contract with any person or persons for the sale of any part of those lands, in case the same should, by virtue of any Act of Parliament, be wanted or required for the purposes of any canal, railway, or other undertaking. By an Act of Parliament, passed subsequently to the date of the settlement, certain incorporated persons were empowered to purchase part of the lands comprised in the settlement, but there was no clause in the Act empowering them to compel the sale & conveyance of the lands in question:—Held: pltf. was entitled to compel a specific performance against the persons incorporated, of a contract entered into by him with them for the sale of part of the lands comprised in the settlement.—*KENSINGTON (LORD) v. 2406. Object of power—Mutual advantage of possessor & successor.—(1) The limitation of estates by virtue of powers must be strictly pursued.

(2) Of all kinds of powers, the most frequent is, that "to make leases." For the encouragement of farmers, to occupy, stock, & improve the land, it is necessary they should have some permanent interest. Unless the owner of the estate for life was enabled to make a permanent lease, he could not enjoy to the best advantage, during his own time; & they who come after, must suffer, by the land being un-tenanted, out of repair, & in a bad condition.

(3) The plan of this power is for the mutual advantage of possessor & successor. The execution thereof is checked with many conditions, to guard the successor; that the annual revenue shall not be diminished; nor those in succession or remainder, at all prejudiced in point of remedy, or other circumstance of full & ample enjoyment (LORD MANSFIELD).—TAYLOR d. (2) Under a leasing power, with a condition (inter alia) for re-entry for non-payment of rent for twenty-one days, a lease granted with a condition for re-entry for non-payment of rent in twenty days, in case no sufficient distress can be taken on the premises whereby to levy the rent, etc. is not a good execution of the leasing power; such conditional power of re-entry being less beneficial to the remainderman than an absolute power of re-entry on non-payment of rent.—COXE v. J. having called upon the exors. to pay the residue, they require an indemnity against the contingent claims of the tenants in case of eviction, & upon the refusal of J. to give such indemnity, he files a bill against them for an account & payment of the residue:—Held: as J. had the power to disturb the leases, he was bound either to confirm them, or to give the indemnity required, & the exor. had a right to hold the residue, till he obtained the confirmation or indemnity.—VERNON v. 2412. — Subsequent Act conveying premises to trustees for sale—Clause dealing with interim income—No leasing power implied.]—By a private Act passed in 1720 for the purpose of confirming a prior settlement, the Shrewsbury estates were limited to the issue of the settlor as they should succeed to the earldom; & the Act contained powers for each successive tenant for life or in tail to lease all or any part of the lands for three lives or twenty-one years, or for any term of years determinable on three lives, so as there should be reserved & made payable by every such lease the usual & accustomed yearly rents, boons, & services, with a proviso for re-entry for non-payment.

By a subsequent Act, passed in 1803, certain outlying portions of the estate were conveyed to trustees, "for ever freed, released, & discharged, & absolutely acquitted, exempted, & exonerated, of & from all & every the uses, trusts, estates, entails, remainders, charges, powers, provisos, limitations, & agreements in & by the settlement & the Act of 1720 respectively created, limited, provided, & declared of & concerning the same hereditaments & premises, or any of them, except only such leases as had been theretofore made & granted of the same in pursuance of the powers contained in the settlement & Act," in trust to sell, & on payment of the purchase-money, to convey the same to the purchasers "freed & discharged, & acquitted, exempted, & exonerated as aforesaid," the proceeds of such sales to be laid out in the purchase of other lands, to be subject to the same uses, etc., as the lands so sold.

By Sect. 7 of the Act of 1803 it was enacted & declared, that "in the meantime & until the manors, lands, etc., thereby directed to be sold,

No sale was effected under the powers conferred by this Act: & in 1838 the then earl granted to P. a lease of a portion of the land so vested in the trustees for sale, for ninety-nine years, provided three persons named, or either of them, should so long live, at the yearly rent of £30, P. covenanting to lay out £1,000 in building on the land within five years:—Held: the earl had no power to lease the land in question so as to bind succeeding tenants in tail of the Shrewsbury estates.—*SHREWSBURY (EARL) v. Reservation of rent to tenant for life, his heirs & assigns—Remainderman entitled to rent.]—Where one seised in fee settles lands on himself for life, with remainders to other persons, reserving a leasing power, which he afterwards exercises, reserving rent to himself, his heirs & assigns, those in remainder shall have the rent. So, where one seised in fee settles lands on A. for life, with remainders, & gives him a leasing power, which he exercises, reserving rent, during the term, to himself, his heirs & assigns, those in remainder shall take it. By a deed to lead the uses of a recovery, lands were limited to the use of such persons as A. should by deed or will appoint, &, in default of & until appointment, to the use of B., in trust for A., his heirs & assigns, reserving to A. a leasing power. A., reciting the power, demised for a term to C. 2446. Power to grant building lease—Lease not expressed to be building lease—Covenant by lessee to repair old houses or houses to be built—Naked power not coupled with interest.—A. tenant for life having power to grant building leases for sixty-one years reserving the best improved ground rent granted a lease for that term which was not expressed to be a building lease, but which contained a covenant by the lessee to keep in repair the premises demised, old houses, or such other house as should be built during the term:—Held: this was not a building lease within the power. Such a lease being granted by tenant for life, who had a bare naked power without any legal interest, is void, & consequently not capable of being confirmed by the remainderman accepting rent.—JONES d. COWPER v. VERNEY (1739), Willes, 169; 125 E. R. 1115.

2447. — Building or rebuilding & repairing—Lease containing covenant to repair only.—Testator devised a messuage & premises to his son for life, with power to demise for sixty-one years, “for the purpose of new building or effectually rebuilding & repairing any messuage, etc. being or to be on the premises.” The son granted a lease for that term, in which the tenant covenanted to expend £250 at least, for the purpose of effectually repairing the messuage & premises, to the lessor’s satisfaction; & he also covenanted when the same should be so well & effectually repaired as aforesaid, to repair & uphold the same as need should require, during the term. On ejectment brought after the son’s death by the remainderman against the lessee:—Held: this lease was not a good execution of the power, inasmuch as a covenant effectually to repair, if the above-mentioned covenant were such, was not equivalent to a covenant effectually to rebuild & repair.—*DOE d. 2458. — Consistent with interest of tenant for life—Lease for lives renewable for ever.—On the marriage of T., a settlement was made of certain lands held on a lease for lives renewable for ever. The settlement gave T. an estate for life, & contained the following power of leasing: "It shall be lawful for T. & all & every other person or persons to whom any use is hereby limited, when in actual possession of the lands, etc., to demise the lands for any number of lives or years, consistent with their respective interests therein, to commence in possession, & not in reversion, remainder, or expectancy," reserving the best rents, without taking any money by way of fine, etc. T. granted a lease to A. at a farm rent, for the lives of three persons therein named; with a covenant, that on failure of any of the three lives, the lessor, his heirs & assigns, would, on the payment of £5 as a fine upon each life that should happen to die, add to the time & term of the lease the life of another person, nominated by the lessee, from time to time successively for ever.—Held: this lease was not warranted by the power; & a decree by the Ct. of Chancery in Ireland, directing specific performance of the covenant of renewal, was reversed, & the bill ordered to be dismissed with costs.—CLARK v. SMITH (1842), 9 Cl. & Fin. 126; 6 Jur. 697; 8 E. R. 363, H. L.

2459. Power to lease for lives or years—Lease for lives or years "which shall last longest."—J. by marriage arts., covenants to settle his estate to certain uses, reserving to himself a power of making leases for thirty-one years, or three lives. He grants a lease to A. for three lives, or thirty-one years, which shall last longest.—Held: this lease was supportable as a good execution of the power.—COMMONS v. MARSHALL (1774), 6 Bro. Parl. Cas. 168; 2 E. R. 1005, H. L.

2460. Lives must be certain & co-existing.—Under a power of leasing for one, two, or three lives, or for any term of years determinable on one, two, or three lives, such lands as were then demised for any such term, lands are not included contained a clause to make leases in these words: "with the usual leasing power for three lives, or 31 years, in possession, & not in reversion."—Scmble: a lease made under such a power, for three lives, & for such other lives as should be added, pursuant to a covenant for perpetual renewal, is not, therefore, void, as the demise for three lives is separable from the excess.—JACK d. WHEATLEY v. CREED (1828), 2 Hud. & B. 128; 2 Ir. L. Rec. 1st ser. 71.—IR.

a. — Lease with clause enabling lessee to surrender.—Marriage articles contained a clause to make leases in these words: "with the usual leasing power for three lives or 31 years, in which were then held under a demise "to W. & G. for ninety-nine years, if W. & his widow, & any eldest son living, or in ventre sa mère at the time of his, W.'s death, or if no son, any eldest daughter then living or a ventre sa mère, or any or either of those three, viz. of W. & such his wife, son, or daughter should so long live, remainder to G. & his widow, son, or daughter, in the same manner"; of which description of persons, five were in fact living at the time of the power reserved, who were all entitled in succession, three at a time, to come in under a lease. Under such a general power, the three lives must be certain & co-existing.—DOE d. WYNDHAM v. HALCOMBE (1798), 7 Term Rep. 713; 101 E. R. 1214.

2461. Power to lease determinable on lives—Lease for lives absolutely.—A. being seised in fee of an estate, by lease & release executed upon his marriage, settled same upon himself for life, remainder to his first & other sons in tail, with a power to the tenant for life to grant leases for years, determinable on three lives. A. afterwards granted a lease of part of the estate in question for the lives of three persons therein named, & the life of the survivor; & there was a covenant that the lessee should quietly hold & enjoy the premises for & during the term, without interruption of the lessor, his heirs or assigns, or any other person claiming any estate, right, or interest by, from, or under him or any of his ancestors. The lease, being for three lives absolutely, was not conformable to the power, & became void on the death of A., & his eldest son brought an ejectment & evicted the lessee, two of the cestuis que vies being then living :—Held : by the words, during the term in that covenant, the parties intended a term to continue so long as any of the cestuis qui vies survived, & not a term to continue only for the life of the grantor.—EVANS v. VAUGHAN (1825), 4 B. & C. 261; 6 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 349; 3 L. J. O. S. K. B. 213; 107 E. R. 1056.

2462. Power to lease for similar term as leases then held—Lease for two lives existing at date of settlement—Grant of lease for three lives.—In 1743 a tenant in fee granted a lease for three lives, & in 1776 his son, whilst one of these lives was in being, granted another lease of the same property for two lives, to take effect after the death of the survivor of the three lives. In 1819 a settlement of these estates was made, by which power was given to the tenant for life to grant leases for lives for a similar term or terms as were comprised in the lease of 1776. In 1848 the then tenant for life granted a lease of the property for three lives :—Held : the lease was invalid, the power not justifying the granting of a lease for more than two lives.—*JENNER v. Twenty-eight years after the marriage, the wife still living, & there being no issue of the marriage, the husband gave a bond conditioned for the granting a lease for ninety-nine years, at a rent of £20 per annum, upon the expiration of a subsisting lease. As soon as the subsisting lease determined, the obligee of the bond entered into possession, & for some years paid a rent of £20 :—Held : notwithstanding some evidence of inadequacy in the rent, the representatives of the obligee were entitled to a decree for specific performance of the agreement contained in the bond.—*BUTLER v. "By half-yearly payments"—Lease at rent payable on certain feast days—Admissibility of evidence showing feast days usual half-yearly days.—By a marriage settlement certain estates were settled in strict settlement, & a power was reserved to the persons being in the actual possession of the premises, by virtue of the limitations in the settlement, to lease any part of the lands thereby settled "for one, two, or three life or lives, or any term or number of years not exceeding twenty-one years, so as upon all & every such lease or leases there should be reserved & continued payable during the respective continuance of such lease or leases, by half-yearly payments, the best & most improved yearly rents that could be reasonably had or obtained, without taking any sum or sums of money or other thing by way of fine or income for the same." By lease dated Jan. 11, 1783, a tenant for life of the estates demised a part of the settled estates, to hold from Jan. 4, preceding, for the lives of three persons therein named, yielding & paying yearly & every year during the term the yearly rent or sum of £31 10s., at or upon the two most usual feasts or days of payment in the year, viz. the feast of St. Philip & James the Apostles May 1, & St. Michael the Archangel Sept. 9, by even & equal portions; the first payment to be made on the feast of St. Philip & James the Apostles next ensuing the date of the lease:—Held: (1) the lease was not a due execution of the power, & it was therefore invalid; (2) the leases of other estates in the same part of the country were not admissible in evidence to show that the days on which the rent was reserved in the lease were the usual half-yearly days of payment of rent in that part of the country.—*DOE d. iii. Lease at Ancient or Usual Rent.

2493. "At usual rent"—Rent payable at different periods.—A manor was entailed by a special Act of Parliament which contained a proviso that the donees should do no act to the prejudice of their issue, unless for jointures or for term of life, etc., or for years or at will, according to the custom of the manor; rendering the true & ancient rent of the lands, etc., so demised, & that all other acts should be void. One of the donees accepted a fine of a stranger sur conusans de droit come ceo, etc., of the moiety of the manor etc., & by the same fine granted the moiety for three hundred years rendering rent. Among the lands, etc., so granted was an acre of waste, parcel of the manor of the value of twelve pence, but which had never been demised before; nor had the free rents, nor the copyhold rents, heriots, etc., parcel of the manor which were included in the same grant, ever been demised before. The rent reserved amounted to the rent formerly reserved upon the demesne lands, the free rents, the copyhold rents, etc., eighteen pence more & twelve pence for the acre of waste, & was made payable at two feasts of the year, the old rent having been reserved payable at four. After the death of the donee, the lessee brought an ejectione firmæ against the heir to the entail, & on special verdict, stating the above facts, judgment was given for deft., & resolved:—(1) although it is provided by the Act that all estates, etc., restrained by the Act, etc., shall be void, yet by construction of law they are not void as to the tenant in tail himself, but voidable by the issue; (2) in respect of the acre of waste which was never demised before, the rent which is entirely reserved out of the whole cannot be called the true & ancient rent; (3) the reservation of the rent at two days instead of four makes the grant & render void.—MOUNTJOY'S (LORD) CASE (1589), 5 Co. 2494. ————J.—By a private Act, passed in 1720, certain estates were settled in strict settlement, & a power was reserved to the respective tenants in tail, by deed, to lease any part of the lands thereby settled, "for the term of three lives or twenty-one years, or for any term or number of years determinable upon the death or determination of three lives, so as upon every such lease there be reserved, & made payable yearly, during the continuance thereof, the usual accustomed yearly rents, boons, & services for same; & so as there be contained therein a condition of re-entry for non payment of the rent, & rents thereby to be reserved." By lease, dated Jan. 6, 1785, a tenant in tail of the estates demised a part of the premises thereby, settled to hold from the date of the lease for ninety-nine years, & three persons therein named should so long live, yielding & paying yearly & every year during the term, unto the lessor, the yearly rent of £50 upon Mar. 25, & Sept. 29, by even & equal portions, the first payment to be made on Mar. 25 ensuing the date of the lease. Previous to the time of passing the Act, the premises demised by his lease had been demised jointly with other premises by the settlor's ancestor, by a lease bearing date Feb. 2, 1708, "for ninety-nine years, determinable upon three lives, at a yearly rent of £82 payable on the same days as those mentioned the person who is authorised to exercise leasing powers has acted bonâ fide, before the ct. should go the length of

in the lease of Jan. 6, 1785, & the first payment to commence on Mar. 25 ensuing the date of the lease." It did not appear whether any other lease was granted between that period & the year 1756. At that time another lease of the premises, demised by the lease of Jan. 6, 1785, was granted at a rent of £32 payable at the same period as in the other leases:—Held: (1) it was not a valid objection to the lease of Jan. 6, 1785, that the rent was made payable on Mar. 25 & Sept. 29, although the term commenced on Jan. 6, & there was a forehand rent, which might prejudice the remainderman, inasmuch as the rent was made payable on the same days by the former lease, & this was the usual & accustomed rent; (2) for the same reason, it was no objection to the lease that the rent was made payable by half-yearly payments, although the power required it to be payable yearly: the word yearly meaning a payment of rent in the year; (3) part of premises formerly demised, jointly with others, at one entire rent, might be let under the terms of this power, at a rent bearing the same proportion to the old rent that the premises demised by the lease bore to the whole premises formerly demised.—*DOE d. Leases for ninety-nine years, determinable on lives as aforesaid, having been made by the tenant for life:—Held: (1) to show whether the first proviso in such power be complied with, the previous leases of the same premises, but not other similar leases in P., were evidence; & semble, the latest preceding lease of the same premises is the most proper evidence; (2) to show whether the second proviso be complied with, leases of the same kind in P. are evidence; (3) Qu.: whether a lease be good which reserved the ancient amount of yearly rent on the premises, but made it payable quarterly, the ancient reservation having been of a half-yearly payment; (4) a lease under the power, with a condition for re-entry on the rent being twenty days in arrear, was not bad, although the condition in the ancient lease was for re-entry after rent being twenty-one days in arrear; (5) nor was such lease bad for restricting the re-entry to the case of there being no distress upon the premises, the ancient restriction of the re-entry being to the case of there being no overt distress upon the premises; (6) Qu.: whether, the ancient lease having reserved, as a heriot, the best beast of the lessee, being one of the lives, his exors., administrators,

The steward accordingly underlet the lands at rents exceeding the principal rents by £1,371, & some time after the grants of the principal leases, executed a trust obligation in favour of the objects of the trust:—Held: the leases, from the time of the grants until the declaration made by the trust obligations, were held in trust for the grantor, & they were invalid as a violation of the prohibitions, & not within the permission of the deed of tailsie.—HAMILTON v. WARING (1820), 2 Bli. 196; 4 E. R. 300, H. L.

The ancient heriot was the three best beasts or the £6 13s. 4d., at the lord's option, not on the falling of each life, but contingent on a certain order of survivorship. In ejectment against lessee:—Held: as the lease avowedly varied from the ancient leases, the onus was on the lessee to show that the new reservation, without the option, was as beneficial to the lord as the ancient reservation.—*DOE d. 2511. Evidence of ancient rent—Letter to previous life tenant—Containing particulars of estate.]—Where A., tenant for life, with a limited power of leasing, reserving the ancient rent, received a letter from a confidential agent in 1728, containing a minute account of the tenants & rents of the estate, which letter the tenant for life indorsed “A particular of my estate,” etc., & handed down to B., the succeeding tenant for life, who had a like limited power of leasing, by whom it was also preserved & handed down amongst the muniments of the estate to the first tenant in tail:

—Held: such paper was evidence for the tenant in tail against a lessee of B., in order to show that the rent reserved by B. the tenant for life, was less than the ancient rent which was reserved at the time to which such paper referred; the paper having been accredited by the then owner of the estate, who had the means of knowing the fact, & who had an interest the other way, viz. to diminish the rent in order to increase his fine upon renewal under the power.—*ROE d. 2512. — Whether latest lease has greatest weight.—By will of 1761 power was given to tenants for life to lease for lives, so that there were reserved in every such lease the ancient & accustomed rents & heriots for the premises, or more. By codicil of 1763, reciting that another child was born to testator since the making of his will, that his former children were provided for, & that he wished to provide for his last born child, provision was made accordingly & the will was thereby also ratified. In a lease of 1724 the rent was £1; & a heriot, or £3 in lieu of it, was reserved; & the lease was granted on payment of a fine. By another lease, granted in 1762, between the times of making the will & the codicil, the rent was £15, & there was no heriot or fine. A tenant for life, in execution of the leasing power, granted a lease according to the lease of 1724:—Held: although the latest lease preceding the creation of the power was entitled to greater weight than any single earlier lease, & ought to govern the decision where there was a balance of evidence, yet, where the ancient custom appeared to have been uniform, & a single lease varying therefrom was granted just before the creation of the power, the exceptional lease ought not then to govern merely because it was the latest.—*DOE d. estates to renew the same with the person or persons to whom the revenue thereof shall belong by adding a third life in such estate, & paying such reversioner two years purchase for such renewal; & also to exchange either of the two lives on payment of one year's purchase":—Held: this power of renewal only authorised the addition of one life to the three on each estate, & of making one exchange of a life.—*DOE d. 2536. Power to lease without impeachment of waste—Condition in lease to pay ten pounds per acre for ploughing up pasture land.]—A lease granted by virtue of a power enabling tenant for life to make leases without impeachment of waste, contained a proviso that the tenant should pay a further rent of £10 per acre for ploughing up pasture land or for managing the farm contrary to the covenants. In an action to recover the penalty, a motion in arrest of judgment on the ground that this amounted to a licence to commit waste, was disallowed. Qu.: whether the above reservation was a rent or a penalty.—BRINGLOE v. GOODSON (1839), 8 Scott, 71; subsequent proceedings, 5 Bing. N. C. 738.

2538. — Covenant in lease that lessor shall do repairs.]—By a settlement made in 1810, S., in contemplation of his marriage, conveyed certain real estates to trustees to his own use until the marriage, & after the marriage to the trustees their exors., administrators, & assigns, for the term of five hundred years without impeachment of waste upon certain trusts, & immediately after the expiration or sooner determination thereof, & in the meantime subject thereto, to the use of S. for life, without impeachment of waste, with remainder to certain other uses. It was also provided by the deed, that it should be lawful for S. during his life, from time to time, by deed either referring to or not referring to the power, to demise the real estate for any term not exceeding twenty-one years, so that there should be reserved the best or most improved yearly rent, to be incident to the immediate reversion of the hereditaments so demised, that could be obtained for the same, & so that the lessee was not by any clause or words therein to be contained made punishable for waste, or exempted from punishment for committing waste. The marriage took place, & S. afterwards, by deed, leased the premises to deft. for twelve years. By the lease which did not refer to the deed of settlement, the rent was reserved to S., his heirs & assigns; & it contained a covenant by the lessee to repair a blacksmith's shop, & all the glass & leadwork of the windows of the messuages, & all doors, etc., the lessee being allowed sufficient bricks, etc., for the repairs, & to yield up the premises so repaired at the end of the term to S., his heirs & assigns; there was also a covenant by S. that he would repair all the messuages, houses, outhouses, edifices, & buildings, except in respect of repairs thereinbefore covenanted to be done by deft. S. died before the expiration of the term. In an action by the trustees against the lessee for a breach of the covenants of the lease, in not repairing the premises:—Held: the lease was not in pursuance of the power, & void as between the trustees & the lessee, because the condition as to the rent being reserved incident to the immediate reversion was not performed, for the rent was made payable to "S., his heirs & assigns," & S. had no legal reversion, & because the lease contained an implied exemption from punishment for permissive waste.—YELLOWLY v. GOWER (1855), 11 Exch. 274; 24 L. J. Ex. 289; 156 E. R. 833.

2539. — Power in lease to dig & use stones, etc., for colliery & buildings.]—An indenture of settlement contained a power for the tenant for life to lease for lives certain hereditaments to any person willing to build houses thereon. Also a power to lease for sixty-three years the coal mines under the lands "with all such powers, authorities, accommodations, liberties, & privileges as shall be necessary or are usually contained in leases of collieries or mines in the county, place, or neighbourhood where the collieries intended to be demised are or shall be situate, for seeking, winning, working, drawing, taking, & carrying away the coals; so as the lessees be not made punishable for waste by any express words therein contained. In execution of this power the tenant for life granted a lease which contained a power for the lessee "to erect, build & construct, & set up in & upon the mines, lands & premises, all such engine houses, machine offices, counting houses, warehouses, store rooms, workshops, workmen's cottages, huts, etc., erections, buildings & accommodations as shall be bonâ fide necessary or proper for or in the due prosecution & carrying on of the works." There was also a power to dig & use stones, slate, brick earth & materials in any part of the land which should be required for the collieries or for any buildings thereby authorised to be made in the exercise of any power thereby granted. Ejectment having been brought to recover possession of the coal mines on the ground that the lease was not a due execution of the power, the jury found that a power to build cottages in places convenient with reference to the works was both necessary & usual in leases of collieries in the neighbourhood:—Held: the lease was not in excess of the power; the lease was not void on the ground that the power to build was in violation of the provision in the settlement that the lessees should not be made punishable for waste.—MORRIS v. RHYDYDEFED COLLIERY CO. (1858), 3 H. & N. 885; 28 L. J. Ex. 119; 32 L. T. O. S. 163; 5 Jur. N. S. 439; 7 W. R. 95; 157 E. R. 726, Ex. Ch.

2540. Power to lease for twenty-one years at best rent without waste—Lease of part with sporting rights over rest.]—Estates, hereditaments, & premises were devised to R. for life with power to the tenant for life to make any lease of the several estates, hereditaments, & premises, or any part or parts thereof, for twenty-one years, reserving the most improved yearly rent with a condition for re-entry on non-payment, so that there should be no clause giving the lessee power to commit waste, & so as the rent should be incident to, & go along with, the reversion:—Held: this power did not authorise a lease of part of the land with liberty to sport over the rest.—DAYRELL v. HOARE

2542. Lease by way of mortgage.]—G., a tenant for life in a marriage settlement, was thereby empowered to make leases for lives of lands in Ireland, at the best rent, without fine, & a power was also given, with the consent of trustees, to raise any sum of money. The trustees, in pursuance of the power, consent that G. should, by mortgaging all or any part of the lands, or in any other manner he should think fit, raise any sum of money not exceeding £5,000.

Under this power & consent G., in consideration of £300 & a rent, grants to V. part of the lands in settlement upon a lease for lives. The grant, & a receipt expressing that the £300 was raised under the power and consent as part of the £5,000, were duly registered.

Before, & at the date of this grant, V. was the solr. of G., who was involved in litigation, & in distress.

The rent, with the premium calculated at six per cent., were considerably short of the annual value of the lands.

Upon a bill, by a tenant in remainder under the settlement, to set aside the lease, & on appeal:—Held: the lease was a good execution of the power to raise money; but void, as obtained by a solr. from his client, in circumstances of embarrassment, & at an undervalue.—WARD v. HARTPOLE (1776), 3 Bli. 470; 4 E. R. 671, H. L.

2543. —.]—M., who died in 1831, settled certain real estates, & empowered the tenant for life thereof to grant leases of the mines therein for such term or number of years, & under & subject to such rents or reservations & agreements as to such tenant for life should seem reasonable & proper.

In 1843 L., the first tenant for life, demised to C. the collieries comprised in a lease made in 1829, which expired in 1848, with powers to work, etc., "except as in the indenture of lease was excepted," for ninety-nine years at a peppercorn rent, subject to redemption on payment of £6,000 & interest:—Held: the mtge. of 1843 was a valid exercise of the leasing power.—MOSTYN v. LANCASTER, TAYLOR v. MOSTYN (1883), 23 Ch. D. 583; 52 L. J. Ch. 848; 48 L. T. 715; 31 W. R. 686, C. A.

2544. Power to lay out land as roads & to lease—Grant of right of way to particular lessees.]—A private estate Act, enabling tenants for life to grant building leases, empowered the lessors to lay out & appropriate any part of the land authorised to be leased, as & for a way, street, square, passage, or sewer, or other conveniences for the general improvement of the estate & the accommodation of the tenants & occupiers:—Held: exclusive private rights of way over land so appropriated for a way, might be granted to particular lessees, as such appropriation did not confer a right of user by all the tenants & occupiers.—WHITE v. LEESON (1859), 5 H. & N. 53; 29 L. J. Ex. 105; 1 L. T. 189; 24 J. P. 24; 5 Jur. N. S. 1361; 8 W. R. 137; 157 E. R. 1097.

2545. Power to lease mines & pay profits to trustees for investment—Lease for sixty years—Power construed as restricted to life tenancy.]—

A gift of a power to lease mines & minerals, following the gift of a life estate in the real property of which they form part, though expressed in general terms, does not of necessity imply a power in the tenant for life to make a lease exceeding the term of his own life. A. devised his estates to his daughter for her life, without impeachment of waste, & then to her issue, male & female, & in default of such issue, over. The will gave the daughter, or any person in possession under the limitations in the will, power to work or to make a lease of the mines. She was to receive & pay over to trustees the rents & profits of the mines, which were to be applied to the purchase of other estates, of which she was to receive the rents for her own life. While in possession she made a lease, reciting the will & granting a term of sixty years:—Held: the lease was not warranted by the power, for on the whole will it appeared to be the intention of testator to restrict her to making a lease for her own life only.—VIVIAN v. JAGON (1868), L. R. 3 H. L. 285; 37 L. J. C. P. 313; 19 L. T. 218, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. JAGON v. VIVIAN (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 422, Ex. Ch.

2546. Forfeiture of life interest.]—HARVEY'S CASE (circa 1586), 4 Leon. 161; 74 E. R. 794.

2547. —.]—By settlement of 1712 a house called B. part of the manor of H. was settled upon the settlor's nephew for life, remainder to the first & other sons in tail, with divers remainders over. By indenture in 1722, the brother of the settlor settled the remainder of the manor upon his son, nephew of the first settlor, for life, remainder to W. his first son, then born, for life; remainder to his first & other sons in tail male; & a term was created by this deed to raise £4,000 for the daughters of W. & there was a proviso in the deed, that in case W. or such one who should come into possession of the manor should, within seven years, convey B. to the same uses as the manor was limited he should have a power of making a jointure; but if he should refuse or neglect so to do, all the uses limited of the manor, subsequent to his estate for life, should cease; there was also a proviso by which W. was entitled to make leases, for the benefit of his daughters or younger sons.

F., the grandson, took possession of B. & afterwards of the manor, & lived several years, but did not settle B. to the uses of the deed of 1722, but suffered a recovery of it, & disposed of it by will; & did not execute the power of jointuring, but charged the term with £4,000 for his daughters & executed the power of leasing for their benefit.

The bill was to have B. conveyed to the uses of the deed of 1722, or to have the leases declared void, & the execution of the power bad, or for a compensation to the amount of the charges on the manor of H.:—Held: this was not a case of election; & as upon neglect of settling B. to the same uses, only the estate subsequent to W.'s estate for life were made void, & the powers, though subsequent in the order of the deed, were annexed to the estate for life the execution thereof ought not to be set aside.—*FREKE v. 2552. — Bankruptcy of tenant for life.]—Pltf. executed a post-nuptial settlement whereby he conveyed certain freehold hereditaments, the legal estate in which were outstanding, to a trustee upon trust to pay the rents, issues, & profits to pltf.'s wife during her life, & after her death to pltf. during his life, & after the death of the survivor for the benefit of their children. The settlement contained a power to pltf. during his life, & after his death to the wife during her life, & after the death of the survivor to the trustee, to renew leases for lives, & take fines on renewals, but so that the usual rents were still reserved. Pltf. subsequently assigned his interest under the settlement to B. by way of mtge. The trustee of the settlement disputed the right of pltf. to take the fines for his own benefit, claiming them on behalf of the wife. Pltf. accordingly filed a bill against the trustee, & B., praying that he might be declared entitled to take the fines on renewals of leases for his own benefit. After the filing of the bill pltf. became bkpt., & his assignee obtained a supplemental order to carry on the suit:—Held: (1) on the construction of the settlement pltf. was entitled to take the fines on renewals for his own benefit; (2) inasmuch as the legal estate was outstanding & beyond pltf.'s control, & the trustee had interfered with his power of granting leases, he was entitled to bring a suit in equity for declaration of his right; (3) the power of granting renewed leases was not extinguished or suspended either by the assignment of pltf.'s interest by way of mtge. or by his bkpcy.—*SIMPSON v. A. granted the estate to trustees for five hundred years, on trust, if she should so direct, to raise portions by mtge. or sale:—Held: the term, till called into operation, was subservient to the leasing power, & was no answer to an ejectment by a lessee holding under a lease granted subsequently to the settlement.—DOE d. COURTAIL v. THOMAS (1829), 9 B. & C. 288; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 218; 7 L. J. O. S. K. B. 214; 109 E. R. 107.

SECT. 3.—OTHER POWERS.

2554. Whether execution of power valid.—Power to charge.—Assignment of life interest for small consideration.]—A feme covert having a power under her marriage settlement to create a term, & to raise money after the death of her husband, & being in distress, executes that power in the lifetime of her husband, & assigns her interest for a trifling consideration. The judges, upon a case sent to them, were of opinion it was a good execution of the power, & so this ct. held it, on the judge's certificate.—SUTHERLAND (COUNTESS) v. NORTHMORE (1729), 1 Dick. 56; 21 E. R. 188.

Annotation:—Refd. Hanbury v. Bateman, [1920] 1 Ch. 313.

(2) If a man has a power to charge an estate, it is not necessary, in the execution of it, he should refer to the deed out of which the power arises; for in a ct. of equity it is enough that his intent appears. & if in the execution he sufficiently describes the estate he had a power to charge, the estate is certainly bound, especially where the person charging is a purchaser of the power (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—*PROBERT v. 2562. — For benefit of grandchildren of settlor—Exercise by parents on death of settlor.—

C., before the marriage of his daughter, conveyed certain lands to the use of himself for life, with remainder to trustees for a term of two hundred years, upon trust for securing a rentcharge of £100 per annum to the husband & wife for their joint lives, & the life of the survivor; & from & after the expiration or sooner determination of that term, & in the meantime subject thereto & to the trusts thereof, to the use of other trustees for a term of one thousand five hundred years, with remainder to C. in fee. The trusts of the one thousand five hundred years' term were declared to be as follows: That the trustees should, after the decease of C., but subject & without prejudice to the yearly rentcharge & the remedies for securing the same, by mtge. or sale or other disposition of the settled estates, or out of the rents thereof, levy & raise £2,000, in trust for all & every the child & children of the marriage, or such one or more of them, exclusive of the others, & in such shares, etc., & with such annual or other sums of money for the maintenance of such children from & after the decease of C., as the parents should by deed appoint:—Held: that the one thousand five hundred years' term did not wait for its commencement until the death of the survivor of the husband & wife, but commenced at the death of C.; & therefore it was competent to the parents after the death of C., by deed executed in pursuance of their power, to direct an annual sum to be raised out of the estates for the maintenance of their children born & to be born.—*GOUGH v. 2564. — Power to lay out money in freehold land & fee simple & inheritance thereof—Purchase of fixed rentcharge—Purchase of freehold subject to one thousand years term.—By a private Act, money was directed to be laid out in the purchase of freehold lands, tenements, or hereditaments, & the fee simple & inheritance thereof, which might be approved by this ct.:—Held: (1) the purchase of a fixed rentcharge was not a proper investment; (2) the purchase of a freehold estate, subject to a term of one thousand years, at a fixed rent, was equally objectionable.—*Ex p. a jointure & portions, with remainder to himself in fee, conveyed part of the lands to B. in fee, in exchange for other lands. B.'s heir afterwards having contracted for the sale of the land, the purchaser refused to complete the contract, on the ground that A. had no power to exchange the lands in fee. The vendor then procured the execution of certain deeds, with a view of bringing the exchange within the terms of a power of sale & exchange, given to the trustees under the settlement:—Held: under these circumstances, & likewise on the ground that the after-executed deeds were grossly inaccurate, the purchaser was not bound specifically to perform the agreement.

Semble: the after-executed deeds, although the surviving trustee of the marriage settlement was a party to them, did not make the transaction between A. & B. a due execution of the power.—COWGILL v. OXMAINTOWN (LORD) (1839), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 369; 3 Jur. 313; 160 E. R. 745.

2567. — Power to substitute lands with consent of trustees—Consent to be signified by deed—Conveyance executed by trustees subsequent to its date.—E. being the tenant for life under a settlement of certain estates, had power to release the settled estates from certain charges by the substitution of other lands, which, however, was only to take place with the consent of the trustees of two separate terms, "to be signified by some deed to be duly executed by them respectively, & not otherwise." In 1857, E. having agreed to sell a portion of the settled estates called M. to pltf., conveyed same to him by a deed to which the two trustees were both made parties, as giving their consent to a substitution of other property, but the execution by one of them was under a power of attorney dated six weeks after the deed, & the other did not execute it till nine months after its date. Pltfs. having subsequently agreed to sell the property called M. to deft., the latter objected to the title, on the ground that this was not a good execution of the power, but pltf. having produced an affidavit showing that the trustees had seen the draft of the deed before its execution, & were acquainted with the whole intended transaction:—Held: due execution had been sufficiently shown, & deft. was bound to accept the title.—OFFEN v. HARMAN (1859), 1 De G. F. & J. 253; 29 L. J. Ch. 307; 1 L. T. 315; 6 Jur. N. S. 487; 8 W. R. 129; 45 E. R. 355, L. JJ.

2568. "Same power of leasing, selling & exchanging as in will"—Power in will for trustees to sell & exchange only—Life tenant's powers same as trustees.—Testatrix, by her will, declared, that every person thereby made tenant for life should have such & the like powers of leasing, selling, & exchanging any part of the devised estate as were by her father's will given to the tenants for life & in tail mentioned in his will, or to the trustees thereof. It appeared that the father's will did not give a tenant for life or in tail any power of leasing, selling, or exchanging; but gave trustees full power to sell & exchange the hereditaments therein comprised, & to give receipts for the purchase-money:—Held: tenant for life in possession of the estate devised by testatrix had the same powers of selling & exchanging that estate as were by the father's will given to the trustees.—COX v. COX (1855), 1 K. & J. 251; 69 E. R. 451.

2569. Power to raise money—Interest payable from date of payment.—Where any settlement or contract contains a provision that a certain fixed sum of money is to be charged on land & to be paid at a fixed time, then, as between the owner of the land & the person entitled to the money, the money, in the eye of a ct. of equity, bears interest from the date fixed for payment of the money, although nothing is said as to interest in the settlement or contract, unless there are circumstances negating the presumption that interest is payable.—Re DRAX, SAVILE v. DRAX, [1903] 1 Ch. 781; 72 L. J. Ch. 505; 88 L. T. 510; 51 W. R. 612; 47 Sol. Jo. 405, C. A.

2570. Power to allot land as public way—Dedication of road as highway.—In 1827 a tenant for life having power under a private estate Act to allot & set out a competent part of the settled land for public ways or otherwise for the use & convenience of the occupiers, had constructed a carriage road on the estate for the development of building:—Held: it was competent to the tenant for life to dedicate the road as a highway for foot passengers under the estate Act.—BROCKMAN v. FOLKESTONE CORPN. (1912), 107 L. T. 483; 76 J. P. 443; 10 L. G. R. 856, C. A.; on appeal, sub nom. FOLKESTONE CORPN. v. BROCKMAN, [1914] A. C. 338, H. L.

2571. Grant by successive tenants for life of right to use adit—Confirmation by local Act—Successors of life tenant bound.—A tenant for life of a settled estate & his brother, who was entitled contingently to a tenancy for life in remainder described as "the grantors," entered into an agreement in 1900, with a water co. authorising the co. to make beneath the estate an adit for the storage of water. The agreement provided that the works should be completed before Dec. 31, 1914, or such later day as the grantors or their successors should, if they thought fit, appoint, that on completion the grantors or their successors would grant to pltfs. the right in perpetuity to use the adit, & for payment to the grantors & their successors of a rent. The agreement was set forth in the schedule of a local Act, & by sect. 42 thereof the agreement "set forth in the schedule to the Act" was confirmed & made binding on the parties thereto, who were authorised to carry same into effect. The Act did not expressly confirm any powers given by the agreement to the grantors:—Held: there was sufficient confirmation of the powers vested in the grantors by the agreement; that the grantors were therefore empowered to extend the time for completion & to accept further considerations than those specified in the agreement & a grant by grantors to the co. upon the completion of the works of a right in perpetuity to use the adit would bind the children or other successors of the tenant for life.—*WESTGATE & BIRCHINGTON WATER CO. v. Part XIII.—Statutory Powers in Relation to Settled Property.

SECT. 1.—UNDER SETTLED LAND ACTS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—DEFINITIONS.

A. "Settlement."

See, now, Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), ss. 1, 117 (1) (xxiv).

2572. State of affairs in relation to certain land—Brought about by one or more documents.]—A., being the tenant for life of certain settled estates under a settlement made in 1862, duly disentailed the same in 1920 & limited them to himself in fee simple. The lands in question were subject to a jointure rentcharge, & A. sold various portions prior to 1926 subject to the charge but in each case with a covenant of indemnity.

On Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), coming into force, A. applied to the ct. for the appointment of two persons as trustees under the original settlement of 1862 for the purposes of the Act.

The point having been raised whether such persons on appointment might not, by virtue of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 31, be trustees for the purposes of the Act not only in respect of the lands to which A. was still beneficially entitled in fee simple but also in respect of the lands already sold, a summons was taken out for the determination of this question:—Held: (1) on the coming into force of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 38), the whole of the estate became, by virtue of sect. 1 (1) (v), settled land, but the part vested in A. was the subject-matter of one settlement & each part vested in a purchaser was the subject-matter of another settlement, though each settlement was brought about by one & the same document, namely, the original settlement of 1862.

In general, a settlement for the purposes of the Act, is a state of affairs in relation to certain land, brought about or deemed to have been brought about by one or more documents, the particular state of affairs being one or more of those specified in Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 1 (1) (i) to (v) (ROMER, J.).

(2) The different portions of the land being subject to different settlements, there was nothing in the language of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 38), s. 31, which would, under the circumstances, prevent the ct. from appointing trustees of the one settlement without those trustees thereby becoming trustees of any of the others.—Re OGLE'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1927] 1 Ch. 229; 96 L. J. Ch. 113; 136 L. T. 300; 70 Sol. Jo. 953.

2574. "By way of succession"—Limitation to vicar "& his successors"—By award under Inclosure Act.]—An award, under an Inclosure Act to "A. & his successors, vicars of X." of lands in respect of glebe is not an instrument limiting an estate or interest in land "to or in trust for any persons by way of succession" so as to constitute "a settlement" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1).

But, where the purchase-moneys of glebe lands, comprised in such an award & afterwards taken by a railway co., are paid into ct., then by the combined operation of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 32, & Lands Clauses (Consolidation) Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 69, & upon the authorities, such moneys may be dealt with as capital moneys arising under Settled Land Acts; & the ct. has discretionary jurisdiction under Settled Land Act, 1887 (c. 30), to authorise the application of them in the redemption of terminable rentcharges on the glebe created under Land Improvement Act, 1864 (c. 114).—*Ex p. 2575. — Various interests limited to same person.]—Real estate stood limited to trustees upon trust for a married woman for her life for her separate use without power of anticipation & after her death to such uses as she should by will appoint & in default to the use of herself in fee; & she contracted to sell the property to a purchaser. The ct. was not satisfied that these limitations created a "settlement" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2, but held, that the married woman had the powers of a tenant for life within s. 58 (1) (ix) of the same Act, & could make a title as such to the purchaser.—Re POCOCK & PRANKERD'S CONTRACT, [1896] 1 Ch. 302; 65 L. 2577. ——Testator by his will gave certain legacies & annuities, some of which were contingent upon the legatees & annuitants attaining the age of twenty-one. He directed that every legacy & annuity should be primarily payable out of his personalty, & charged his real estate in aid, but not in exoneration, of his personalty with the same, if the personalty should be insufficient. He devised his real estate to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. He declared that if his residuary personalty should be insufficient for payment of his funeral & testamentary expenses, debts, legacies, & annuities, the trustees might raise the deficiency by mtgc. of the real estate, but so that the annuities should be paid out of rents & profits, & not by raising a capital sum to provide for the same; & he charged the residuary personalty with the payment of the legacies & annuities, & directed that the ultimate residue of the personalty should be invested & should follow the limitations of the real estate. After testator's death the exors. had paid settlement estate duty in respect of the contingent legacies & annuities. There was a probability that the personal estate would be insufficient to pay the funeral & testamentary expenses, legacies, & annuities. The question having arisen as to how the settlement estate duty ought to be borne as between the residuary estate & the legatees & annuitants:—Held: the contingent legacies must be treated as settled.—Re ST. ALBANS (DUKE), LODER v. ST. ALBANS (DUKE), [1900] 2 Ch. 873; 69 L. J. Ch. 863; 49 W. R. 74; 44 Sol. Jo. 690.

2578. ———.]—The object of testator in this case was to provide for the payment of certain life annuities & for immediate distribution of the residue, subject to due provision being made for payment of the annuities. For that purpose a special fund was to be created for the protection of the annuitants, & subject to the trust imposed upon that fund in their favour, the residue of the estate was to be distributed among the residuary legatees. By a deed of appropriation the trustees appropriated certain freehold ground rents to meet such annuities. Testator declared that his trustees should be trustees of his will for the purpose of Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, & he further declared that they could exercise all the powers conferred on a tenant for life by Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890:—Held: (1) notwithstanding that "an undivided share in land" was excepted from the definition of "land" in Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 117 (1) (ix), as regards the land appropriated to meet the annuities, the will operated as a settlement within s. 1 (1), of the Act, & as regards the other land the will operated as a settlement within the same sub-sect., & therefore, as regards the whole of the residuary real estate the will operated as a settlement under the Act; (2) the appointment of the trustees of the will as trustees for the purpose of Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, made them, under s. 23 (1) (a) (b), of the Act of 1925, trustees for the purposes of the settlement under that Act, & they could, therefore, exercise the powers of a tenant for life.—*Re BIRD, WATSON v. The trustees invested part of the trust funds in the purchase of lands which were conveyed to them to be held upon the trusts of the settlement. The tenant for life desired to be recouped out of capital moneys for expenditure on improvements upon part of the land so purchased; & the question was raised whether the settlement came within the provisions of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38):—Held: the settlement, although not in its inception a settlement of land, was nevertheless a "settlement" upon trust for "persons by way of succession" within the definition in Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1). 2592. Ecclesiastical property.—Some houses in a cathedral city had from time immemorial been granted by the bishop of the diocese for the time being to one of the ecclesiastical dignitaries, for his life. The deed of grant was called a "collation," & the grantee was "inducted" by the registrar of the diocese into possession of the property. By the last deed of collation the bishop granted the houses to the then archdeacon of the city for his life, but so long only as he should continue to be archdeacon. On the deed was indorsed a certificate signed by the registrar that five days after the date of the deed the grantee was duly inducted by him into the actual corporal possession of the property. Upon a summons by the archdeacon, with the approval of the bishop, asking that trustees might be appointed for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), of the settlement created by the deed, the object being that the archdeacon, as tenant for life, or having the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), might sell the houses, & the proceeds of sale might be invested in the names of trustees, & the income thereof paid to the persons who would have been from time to time entitled

He directed that on the decease of either J., P. or L. his or her share of the ground rents should go to his or her children. Testator empowered his trustees to sell the ground rents, pay off the mtge., debt, invest the residuary proceeds of sale, & stand possessed thereof upon the trusts declared respecting the annual ground rents should they remain unsold. Testator died in 1891. J. had three, & P. one, infant children entitled to the ground rents in remainder. The trustees considered it advisable in the interest of all the beneficiaries to retain the ground rents & apply the income in reduction of the mtge. debt thereon, which by Jan. 1901, was reduced to less than half. The mtge. debt became vested in the surviving trustee of the will. Upon a summons taken out by the tenants for life against the surviving trustee & infant remaindermen:—Held: the tenants for life were entitled to immediate possession of the ground rents & to sell them to pay off the mtge. debt & also to delivery up of the documents of title held by the surviving trustee, as trustee, relating to the ground rents.

After the death of the father, W. & G. contracted to sell some of the land in fee. The purchaser objected that the vendors were not tenants for life within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38):—Held:

as either W. or G. alone, or both of them together, might bid at any sale by the trustees, they must be treated as if they had bought the life estates back, in which case they would be tenants for life, & could therefore sell under the powers of the Act.—Re HALE & CLARK (1886), 55 L. Testator by his will directed his trustees to hold his residuary real & personal estate upon trust for the children of his two marriages in equal shares, the income of the share of each son to be paid to him for life, subject to trusts to prevent alienation or incumbrance of income, the income of each daughter to be paid to her for life, independently of her husband & subject to similar trusts, & on the decease of each child upon trust for their children respectively as therein mentioned. In the event of the death of any child of testator without issue his or her share was to accrue for the benefit of his surviving children. The will gave the trustees a discretionary power to sell testator's real & leasehold property & to convey the same free from the trusts of the will. There were five children now living, who, & the widow of a son who had died, were each entitled to a life interest in one undivided ninth share of the trust estate. Four of them had signed a written consent to sales by the trustees, but the other two had declined to do so. The trustees had entered into a provisional contract for the sale of a leasehold house which formed part of the estate:—Held: the tenants for life of the undivided shares were persons entitled for "concurrent estates or interests" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (6), & together constituted the tenant for life of those shares, & therefore, under Settled Land Act, 1884 (c. 18), s. 6 (2), the consent of one only of those persons was necessary to the exercise by the trustees of their power of sale.

A.'s father was dead, & he had had two children & had exercised his power of appointment on the marriage of two of them:—Held: (1) by virtue of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1) & (5), A. had the powers of a tenant for life; (2) provided the price paid was the best price that could reasonably be obtained in accordance with s. 4 (1) of the 1882 Act, the vendor need not sell for cash, but might sell for a consideration as good as cash, in this case for Consols.—Re SUTTON'S CONTRACT (1920), 65 Sol. He was however given a life tenant's powers by the resettlement & had therefore full life tenant powers under s. 23 (1) (a). With the concurrence of the trustees he desired to be relieved of these powers:—Held: (1) the Earl, though having a life tenant's powers under s. 23 (1) (a), was not a life-tenant within the definition of s. 117 (1) (xxviii), but only a statutory owner under (xxvi), therefore the Ct. could not make an order under s. 24 (1) authorising the trustees to exercise the powers on the Earl's behalf, as that sect. was confined to life tenants proper or limited owners with an estate or interest in possession having life tenant powers under s. 20, & did not apply to a mere statutory owner; (2) s. 104 (1) which prevents a life tenant releasing his powers, was similarly confined to those life tenants or limited owners, & did not apply to a mere statutory owner; therefore the Earl could release his powers by deed under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 155, & on his so doing Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 23 (1) (a), would cease to operate, & the trustees would have a life tenant's powers under sub-sect. 1 (b).—Re CRAVEN SETTLED ESTATES, [1926] Ch. 985; 95 L. 2619. Persons within term—Act construed broadly.]—At the dates of his will & death testator was lessee for a long term of a house called "The Grange," which he & his wife & family occupied at the same two dates. By his will testator devised "The Grange" specifically to his trustees, upon trust to permit his wife during her life to occupy it, she paying all rents, rates, taxes, assessments, & outgoings in respect of it; & observing & performing the covenants on the part of the lessee contained in the lease thereof, & with permission also to use & enjoy testator's effects in "The Grange." Testator provided that after her death the trustees were to hold "The Grange" upon trust to permit "such one or more of my children who shall for the time being be unmarried & shall desire to reside in "The Grange," to occupy "The Grange," & use & enjoy my effects in "The Grange" so long as one or more of my said children shall remain unmarried & shall desire to reside there, he, she, or they paying all rents, rates, taxes, assessments & outgoings in respect of "The Grange," & observing & performing the covenants on the part of the lessee contained in the said lease thereof." Then the will declared that, after the marriage of all testator's children or the death of the last unmarried child or in case all the unmarried children should notify the trustees their desire not to reside in "The Grange," the trustees should hold "The Grange" & the effects therein upon similar trusts in favour of a married son, S., to those thereinbefore declared in favour of testator's wife. Then followed a similar provision, after a provision for S.'s children, for H., another son of testator. After the deaths of testator & his widow, X. & Y. were the two youngest & the only unmarried children of testator. They resided together at & expressed their desire to See Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 20 (1).

2621. Meaning of "in possession"—Contrasted with reversion—Not with possession of another person.—(1) M., by his will, devised real estate to trustees, upon trust to pay the net rents & income to his wife, who was one of the trustees for the maintenance, education & benefit of his son J. until he should attain twenty-one, & without being liable to account to his trustees or his son for the same, & upon his attaining that age, then upon trust for him absolutely, but if he should die under twenty-one, without leaving issue, then upon trust as to the rent & income for his wife during life or widowhood & after her death or second marriage upon trusts for grandchildren:—Held: the infant son was a person having the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (ii).

(2) The words "in possession" in Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1), refer to possession as contrasted with reversion or remainder, & not to possession personally as contrasted with possession by another person.—Re MORGAN (1883), 24 Ch. D. 114; 53 L. J. Ch. 85; 48 L. T. 964; 31 W. R. 948.

The estates were so heavily incumbered that after payment of outgoing & interest there was not enough to pay the annuity of £400. A. therefore had received nothing, & there was no prospect of his receiving anything for many years:—Held*: (1) A. was a person entitled to the income of land under a trust or direction for payment thereof to him during his life; (2) [A.'s income was] subject to expenses of management within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (ix), & therefore possessed the power of selling given by the Act to tenants for

e. Trust for infant absolutely—Gift over on marriage without consent before twenty-one.—Land was devised to an infant absolutely, subject to a proviso that if she married without the consent of testator's exors. before attaining twenty-one, then the gift should become absolutely null & void. The income derived from the pro-

gave her residuary estate, in the events which happened (a) to her niece C. on condition that she resided in testatrix's house during the life of testatrix's sister M. & provided there a home for M. so long as she wished; (b) in the event of C. not complying with the condition, to another niece upon the like condition; (c) in the event of neither niece complying with the condition, upon trust for M. for life with other trusts over on her death. At the date of testatrix's death M. was a lunatic not so found, confined in an asylum, & was not expected to recover her faculties. Upon a summons by C. under Settled Land Acts:—Held: C. was a person having the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38); the condition as to providing a home was void so far as it prevented C. from exercising her power of sale; & she was entitled to sell the house & keep the proceeds absolutely.—*Re RICHARDSON, RICHARDSON v. 2630. Gift to class—Contingently on attaining twenty-one—Power of member attaining twenty-one.—Testator devised freehold premises upon trust after his daughter's decease for her children attaining twenty-one or marrying in equal shares. At the death of testator's daughter one child had attained twenty-one & three were infants:—Held: (1) the child, who had attained twenty-one had the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (ii), as having an estate in fee simple in possession with an executory limitation or disposition over in the event of other members of the class obtaining vested interests in the shares of the premises which had not for the time being vested in the other children of testator's daughter & was entitled to the possession of the title deeds; (2) she was entitled to the whole income of the trust premises subject to the divesting of a proportionate part upon a like contingency.—Re WALMSLEY'S SETTLED ESTATES (1911), 105 L. T. 332; 55 Sol. Jo. 600.

2631. —Contingently on surviving life tenant—Provision for maintenance during minority.—Testator's will contained a gift for life to a daughter, of the income of a share, & such share to be held after her death in trust for such daughter's children as shall be living at his death, or born afterwards, or shall have died in his lifetime leaving issue surviving him in equal shares. The will contained a provision that during minority the income of any share to which a minor might be entitled in expectancy, might be applied in maintenance. The two adult grandchildren of testator were held entitled to exercise the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (ii), as being tenants in fee simple, with an executory limitation gift or disposition over on failure of issue, or in any other event, such provision as to maintenance being held only an additional defeasance & not a partial disposition of the interest.—Re DILKS, GODSELL v. HULSE (1924), 131 L. T. 533; 68 Sol. Jo. 538.

2632. Gift to person contingently on attaining twenty-one—Position of persons entitled on failure of contingency.—Testator by his will, dated in 1917, devised & bequeathed certain lands & a house & its contents "upon trust in fee simple or absolutely for such son, living at my death, of my son W. as first or alone attains the age of twenty-one years, or, failing any such son, then upon trust as part of my residuary estate"; & he gave his residue in trust for both or either of his sons W. & J. who should survive him, &, if both, in equal shares. The will also provided that if & so long as some son, living at testator's death, of his son W. should be living, but the property should not have become absolutely vested beneficially in any such son, the trustee should at the expense of the residuary estate maintain the house & keep up an establishment there, & allow the same to be used or enjoyed by any of the persons for the time being entitled in expectancy thereto. Testator died in 1919. His two sons survived him. W. had four sons living at testator's death, the eldest of them being then thirteen years of age:—Held: (1) the interests of the grandsons were contingent, & until one of them should have attained the age of twenty-one or all of them should have died without attaining that age, W. & J. were entitled to the intermediate rents & profits of the property.

(2) W. & J. were not persons having the powers of a tenant for life under s. 58 (1) (ii), (vi) or (ix), Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (ii), (vi) or (ix).

I cannot see how the residuary legatees, who take subject to the powers & obligations of the trustees to which I have already referred can possibly be said to be tenants in fee simple. . . . The trustee has an obligation to keep up this house & to spend money upon it in order to keep up an establishment & to keep it in repair for the purposes of the subsequent power that is given to the trustee to allow any one of the persons entitled in expectancy to occupy the house at any time that they wish. If, after the discharge of that obligation & the exercise of that power, should the trustee see fit to exercise it, there is anything left in the way of rents & profits arising from this property, then the residuary legatees are entitled to it. But how do they get it? They get it as a part of the residue otherwise undisposed of, & not as income of the property at all. Therefore, in my opinion, whether you put it in the words "during his own or any other life" or not, there is no trust or direction for payment of the income of the land to these residuary legatees at all (LORD STERNDALE, M.R.).—*Re ASTOR, ASTOR v. party was to be applied during her minority for her maintenance & education & the surplus accumulated for her:—Held: the infant had the powers of a tenant for life, under Settled Estates & Settled Lands Act, 1909, No. 2235, s. 124 (1) (ii) as being a person entitled in possession to an

should sell the house & out of the income from the investment of the proceeds pay £50 a year to his wife during her life, & subject thereto he gave the residue of the proceeds for his brother's children. Testator died in 1866 & the question being raised whether his widow could under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), accept a surrender of such lease & grant a new lease of the house for a term of twenty-one years from Dec. 25, 1883, at an increased rent:—Held: the widow was not a person under sect. 58 of that Act entitled to the powers of a tenant for life & was therefore not able to accept a surrender & make a new lease of the house.

I think the object of that sect. [Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 51] is to strike at & defeat (so far as they might control the powers given by the Act) all provisions even if contained in existing settlements which might be in their intention & substance prohibitory, obstructive or penal for the purpose of preventing alienations or other acts contemplated by the statutes. I do not think it was intended to enlarge or alter the substance of any original limitation of a particular estate (not properly an estate for life) which might be lawfully in force when the statute came into operation & as to which the author of the settlement had neither contemplated nor in any manner provided against any such acts as those in question, nor indeed could rationally have done so as the law stood when the settlement was made (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—Re HAZLE'S SETTLED ESTATES (1885), 29 Ch. Upon the death of testator in 1912 questions arose (inter alia) as to the position of the daughter under the will. It was not disputed that she was tenant for life of the mansion house, but it was objected that she had not the powers of a tenant for life of the rest of the real estate:—Held: the daughter had the powers of a tenant for life in respect of testator's residuary estate under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (vi).—*Re BEAUCHAMP'S WILL TRUSTS, CADGE v. to appct., & to accumulate the surplus which should devolve upon the same uses as the property itself, & subject thereto to the use of appct. & his assigns during his life, with remainders over:—Held: appct., who had not yet attained the age of twenty-seven years, was by virtue of the provisions of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (vi), a person having the powers of a tenant for life under that Act.—*Re LLEWELLYN, LLEWELLYN v. 2658. —————.]—Suspension of life estate—During accumulation for payment of debts.—Testator devised his real estate to trustees upon trust to permit his daughter to receive the rents & profits during her life for her separate use, & directed that if a certain claim against him for £1,000, settled by him on her marriage, should be enforced, then "all her interest & benefit from the estate" should "cease until all the debts & claims on the same" were paid; with a gift over at her death in favour of her children. After testator's death the claim for £1,000 was enforced. The personal estate of testator was insufficient for payment of the £1,000 & other debts & claims. The daughter, who was the heiress-at-law of testator, claimed a declaration that she had the powers of a tenant for life, under the settlement created by the will, within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38):—Held: the life estate given by the will to the daughter was not gone, but only suspended; there was an implied trust for payment of the debts & claims by the trustees; when those were paid the daughter would come in again by virtue of her suspended estate, & be equitable tenant for life; and that as the implied trust for payment of debts was one which might be properly carried out by accumulating the rents & profits, if it were necessary from time to time so to do, it was substantially a "trust for accumulation of income" for payment of debts within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (vi), & the daughter was therefore a person entitled to exercise the powers of a tenant for life.—WILLIAMS v. JENKINS, [1893] 1 Ch. 700; 62 L. J. Ch. 665; 68 L. T. 251; 41 W. R. 489; 3 R. 298.

2659. Estate must be in possession.—Under a will certain real estate was vested in trustees in trust for A. for life, & on her death in trust for her children equally as tenants in common; the shares of daughters to be for their separate use without power of anticipation. On a sale of the real estate upon A.'s death, two of the vendors who were married women claimed to convey as tenants for life within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38). The purchaser contended that they must convey as absolute owners & obtain an order under Conveyancing Act, 1881 (c. 41), s. 30. In an action for specific performance:—Held: the husbands, if they survived, taking an estate by the curtesy by virtue of the general law & not under the will, & the estate given to the married women being one & entire with no limitation to the husbands, the effect of the restraint on anticipation was not to bring the case within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2, as creating a settlement whereby the estate was limited to persons by way of succession;

&, therefore, the married women were not tenants for life within the meaning of the Act.

The Act of 1882 enumerates among the persons who have the powers of a tenant for life "a tenant by the curtesy." That means a tenant by the curtesy in possession (CHITTY, J.).—BATES v. KESTERTON, [1896] 1 Ch. 159; 65 L. J. Ch. 108; 73 L. T. 656; 44 W. R. 150; 40 Sol. Jo. 97.

No power of sale or leasing was contained in the will:—Held: (1) notwithstanding the direction to the trustees with respect to repairs, W. was equitable tenant for life of the settled land, & as such, was entitled to be let into the possession & management of the estate, upon her undertaking to see to the repairs; (2) inasmuch as there were no trustees of the settlement created by the will for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), W. was not entitled to exercise the powers of a tenant for life under that Act until trustees of the settlement were appointed & a proper notice of her intention was given them.—*Re BENTLEY, WADE v. 2663. Term on trust to accumulate income—Life tenant not entitled to possession—Term determinable on satisfaction of trusts.]—Testator by will dated in 1883 devised an estate to the use of trustees for a term of 1,300 years & subject thereto to his son H. for life, with remainders over in strict settlement. The trusts of the term were to raise portions, to pay annuities, H. being one of the annuitants, & to apply the residue as a sinking fund to pay off mtge. debts & other charges. It was estimated that the trusts of the term would require from fifteen to twenty years for their fulfilment. Testator directed that the trustees should "during the continuance of the last-mentioned trusts" enter into & hold possession of the rents & profits of the estate "& not deliver the same to any person beneficially interested in any part thereof," & should manage the estate as therein mentioned. Very full powers of management were given to the trustees, provided that when all the trusts of the term should have been fully paid & satisfied the term should cease. He, moreover, gave to the trustees such other powers over the estate as were given to a tenant for life in possession by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38):—Held: H. was a person having the power of a tenant for life of the estate within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (ix), & his consent was necessary under s. 56 (2), to the effectual exercise by the trustees of the powers of sale & enfranchisement contained in the will.—Re CLITHEROE ESTATE (1885), 31 Ch. 2669. Terminable life interest.]—Testatrix devised her freehold hereditaments to the use of her trustees, giving them large powers of management, & directing them to pay certain annuities & other periodic sums out of rents & profits. During the successive lives of pltf. & two other persons, but not for more than twenty years after testatrix's death, the trustees were to apply the surplus rents in the discharge of incumbrances on the estates thereinbefore devised, or in the purchase of other estates to be held on like trusts.

Subject to & after the determination or failure of the several directions thereinbefore contained, the trustees were to stand possessed of the hereditaments in trust for F.'s daughters successively according to seniority in tail male, with a like remainder to E.'s daughters. No such daughters were yet in esse.

After the determination or failure of the directions & trusts thereinbefore contained, the trustees were to settle the hereditaments to successive uses for lives & in tail male for ultimate remaindermen, but without any ultimate limitation of the fee. There were ultimate remaindermen for lives & in tail male in esse.

In Re Llanover (Baroness), [1903] 2 Ch. 330, FARWELL, J., held that the direction to apply the surplus rents in the purchase of other estates must be deemed to be struck out by Accumulations Act, 1892 (c. 58), & the accumulation trust must be read as limited to the discharge of incumbrances.

On a subsequent motion to vary the minutes he formally declared that when & so soon as the accumulations should be sufficient to discharge the incumbrances the accumulation trust would become a trust for the purchase of land only & consequently void under Accumulations Act, 1892 (c. 58), & that from that time, & so long as the surplus rents should by law remain undisposed of, they would belong, & be payable by the trustees as received, to pltf. as heiress-at-law. The accumulations were not yet sufficient to discharge the incumbrances:—Held: on the construction of the will, subject to the accumulation trust for discharge of incumbrances, the surplus rents would be payable to a daughter of F. or E. as tenant in tail male, but that until the birth of such a daughter, & subject to any such daughter's interest, the surplus rents subject to the accumulation trust were payable by the trustees to pltf. as heiress-at-law during the lives of F. & E., after whose deaths, subject to any daughter's estate in tail male, the ultimate remainders would come into possession; (2) having regard to the nature & extent of her interest as heiress-at-law, pltf. had not at the present time the powers of a life tenant either under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (vi) & (ix).

(3) Semble: Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38),

s. 58 (1) (vi), does not apply to a person merely entitled to receive surplus rents from trustees who are in possession & managing the estates, & (ix) does not apply (a) to a terminable life interest, or (b) to any interest taken under an intestacy, though comprised in the subject of the settlement under s. 2 (2).—*Re LLANOVER (BARONESS), HERBERT v. 2676. Right to part of income—Remainder to be capital money.]—Under indentures of settlement & appointment made in 1906 & 1918 respectively, land became settled upon trust to pay two-third parts of the net income thereof to T. during his life, & the other one-third part of such net income was directed to be held upon the trusts & subject to the powers upon & subject to which capital money arising under the Settled Land Acts from freehold hereditaments forming part of the settled estate would be held; that was to say, in trust, after the death of T. for his first & other sons in tail. During the life of T. all the powers conferred by the Settled Land Acts on a tenant for life in possession of settled land were declared to be exercisable by the trustees in relation to the settled estate:—Held: T. was not entitled to the income of the settled estate during his life subject to a trust for accumulation of income within Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 20 (1) (viii); &, accordingly, he had not the powers of a tenant for life, but the trustees of the settlement had such powers by virtue of the terms of the settlement & s. 23 (1) of that Act.

In my judgment there is a substantial distinction between a case where a person is entitled to the whole income of settled land, subject to an overriding trend for the accumulation of income, & a case where a person is entitled only to a certain portion of the income, & the remainder of the income is to be held & dealt with as capital money. LAWRENCE, J.—Re FREWEN, [1926] Ch. 580; 95 L. 2677. Income during fixed term—If beneficiary so long live.]—Under a settlement, dated Sept. 13, 1906, lands stood limited, in the events which happened, to the use of trustees for a term of ninety-nine years, if C. should so long live, upon trust to pay the rents & profits thereof to C. during the remainder of her life, & subject to the term & the trusts thereof, to the use of W. during his life, with remainders over:—Held: C. was a person entitled to the income of the settled land during her life, until the determination of her interest by means of the expiration of the term & consequently, she was a person having the powers of a tenant for life, within Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 20 (1) (viii).—Re WALERAN SETTLED ESTATES, [1927] 1 Ch. 522; 96 L. J. Ch. 209; 136 L. T. 605; 70 Sol. Jo. 1242.

2678. "Immediate binding trust for sale"—Must overreach all prior equitable charges—So as to affect whole subject-matter of settlement.]—(1) Land is not "subject to an immediate binding trust for sale" within Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 20 (1) (viii), unless the trust for sale is exercisable so as to overreach all prior equitable charges, with the result that the whole subject-matter of the settlement is subject to the trust for sale.

(2) Under testator's will T. became entitled as tenant in tail of the settled land subject only to a jointure rentcharge of £1,500 appointed by deceased tenant for life to his widow under a power in the will. In 1923 T. disentailed, & by a conveyance conveyed the settled land, subject to the jointure, to trustees upon trust for sale, with power to postpone, & to stand possessed of the net proceeds of sale & the rents & profits until sale upon the trusts of a settlement of even date. Under this settlement the income of the proceeds of sale & the rents & profits until sale were applicable in paying life annuities of £5,000 to T., £1,000 to her husband, £3,500 to the jointress, & in paying the balance to T. during her life. In 1924 & 1925 two orders were made under Settled Land Act, 1884 (c. 18), s. 7, which together gave T. power to exercise all the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Acts, 1884 to 1890:—Held: the settled land was subject to a compound settlement consisting of the will, the disentailing deed, the conveyance & the settlement, & T. had the powers of a tenant for life of the compound settlement conferred on her by Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 20 (1) (viii), as the land was not "subject to an immediate binding trust for sale." & was entitled to have a vesting deed executed in her favour pursuant to sched. II. para. 1; (3) on the falling in of the jointure T. would by virtue of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 29 (4), become entitled to exercise the powers conferred by the orders made under Settled Land Act, 1884 (c. 18), s. 7, but must exercise them in the names & on behalf of the trustees for sale.—Re LEIGH'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1926] Ch. 852; 95 L. 2679. Income of "land"—Life interests in undivided moieties.]—Under the will of Lord S., immediately before the coming into operation of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), the entirety of his Lancashire estate was limited to trustees for a term of one thousand years, with power to sell or exchange. In the meantime, & subject thereto, H. & G. were each entitled to a life interest in an undivided moiety of the estate. During the existence of the term the trustees were entitled to the rents & profits of the estate, which were to be applied in paying off incumbrances:—Held: (1) Para. 1 of Part IV of the First Schedule to the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), applied to land held in undivided shares vested in possession only when two elements were present, namely, the absence of any antecedent freehold estate, & present immediate beneficial enjoyment by possession, physical or notional, & therefore did not apply to this case; (2) H. & G. were not "a person entitled to the income of 'land'" who had the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 20 (1) (viii), because, undivided shares in land being excluded from the definition of "land" in that Act, it was impossible for two undivided moieties of land to constitute "land" within the sect.; & as the entirety of the estate was settled by the will, & there was no tenant for life, or person having the powers of a tenant for life, the trustees of the will had the powers of a tenant for life, & the fee simple was vested in them under paras. 5 & 6 (c) of Part II of the First Schedule of the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), & Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 23 (1) (b); (3) the powers of sale & exchange & other powers given to the trustees by the will remained exercisable by them.—*Re STAMFORD & WARRINGTON (EARL), PAYNE v. 2705. —.—The Costessey Hall estates were settled by a deed of Jan. 26, 1874, under which Lord Stafford was tenant for life in possession. By the will of the late Lord Stafford he bequeathed certain pictures upon trust to permit the same to be used & enjoyed by the person who under the settlement of 1874 should for the time being be entitled to the Costessey Hall estates, to be held as heirlooms for the successive owners of the hall, but not to vest absolutely in any tenant in tail male by purchase who should not attain the age of twenty-one years or die under that age leaving issue male. Testator died in 1884. One of the pictures bequeathed as heirlooms had been recently sold for a large sum of money. The money was paid to the trustees of the will & invested by them in Consols. The judge held that the settlement was a compound settlement, & he appointed the trustees of the will to be trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts of the settlement of the heirlooms & the proceeds of sale thereof created by the deed of 1874 & the will. The heirlooms were now vested in an infant female tenant in tail in remainder. The tenant for life asked that the trustees of the compound settlement should apply £15,000, part of the proceeds of sale of the picture, in discharge of a mtge. on land settled by the deed of 1874:—Held: (1) the effect of the order of the judge was that both the land settled by the deed of 1874 & the heirlooms must be treated as if they had been settled by the same document; (2) the words "land" in s. 37 & "settled land" in Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 21 (ii), meant the land by reference to the limitations of which the heirlooms were settled by the will; (3) the slight difference in the limitations of the deed & the will, & the fact that the heirlooms were vested in the tenant in tail, were not sufficient ground for distinguishing Re Marlborough's (Duke) Settlement, Marlborough (Duke) v. Marjoribanks, No. 2798, post; (4) the investment in Consols by the trustees before they were appointed trustees of the compound settlement did not prevent the desired application of the money; (5) the tenant for life, although a trustee under s. 53, was not committing a breach of trust, & the money ought to be applied in the discharge of the mtge.

(6) I do not think that I can say that the tenant for life is not entitled to regard as more important, in the interests of all the persons, including himself, who are now or may hereafter become entitled to the estate, the freeing of those estates from the incumbrance in question, rather than the keeping of this money invested or dealing with it in some other form (WARRINGTON, J.).—*Re STAFFORD'S (LORD) SETTLEMENT & WILL, GERARD v. Sect. 1.—Under Settled Land Acts: Sub-sect. 2, A., B. & C.]

1882 (c. 38), s. 20, a tenant for life submits for approval to the trustees of the settlement a scheme for the execution of an improvement, the duty of the trustees is confined to seeing (a) that the improvement proposed is an improvement authorised by the Act, namely, that it is for the benefit of some land comprised in the settlement; (b) that the scheme for the execution of the improvement is a proper one for carrying out the particular improvement; & (c) that in submitting the scheme to the trustees the tenant for life is acting bonâ fide & on competent skilled advice. The trustees are not concerned with the general policy pursued by the tenant for life in improving the property, nor, in a case where there is capital money in hand, with the amount already spent on improvements.

There is a further consideration which the trustees in considering a scheme must bear in mind, namely, whether or not the tenant for life is proposing something which is outside his position as a tenant for life acting in regard to the interests of all parties entitled under the settlement, & deemed to be in the position of & to have the duties & liabilities of a trustee (WARRINGTON, J.). —*Re EGMONT'S (EARL) SETTLED ESTATES, LEFROY v. 2708. —Incumbrancers.—[The conveyance by the tenant for life under sect. 20 [Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38)] can only pass the estates subject to any charge by mtg. . . . or otherwise of his life estate, which has been made by the tenant for life for the purpose of raising money. . . . The tenant for life can only convey under the Act so as not to affect the charges on the estate, including those charges or incumbrances on the life estate which have been created by himself. When, therefore, his life estate is incumbered up to the hilt, he can only sell that which is practically a reversion, not an estate in possession (NORTH, J.). —Re SEBRIGHT'S SETTLED ESTATES (1886), 33 Ch. 2709. — Annuitant.—Settled land was all charged by the settlement with the payment of certain annuities; part of the settled land was subject to a mtg. created prior to the settlement; the tenant for life proposed to raise £40,000 to pay off this mtg. by means of a mtg. of all the land, which would override & take priority of the annuities; the selling value of the whole of the settled land was £80,000; a sale at that price would be far more beneficial to the annuitants than the proposed mtg. The annuitants applied to the ct. for an injunction to restrain the tenant for life from mortgaging the settled land so as to create a first charge over that part thereof which was not subject to the existing mtg. :—Held: the tenant for life had power to so mortgage the whole of the settled land in order to pay off an incumbrance upon a part thereof; but as the exercise of that power would, in this case, be unjust to the annuitants whose interests he was bound to consider, the ct. would interfere to prevent him from exercising that power, though he was acting bonâ fide. —*HAMPDEN v. 2714. — Discretion of tenant for life to prevail in case of doubt.—[The powers conferred by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), upon a tenant for life are, pursuant to sect. 53, to be exercised with a due regard to the interests of all parties entitled under the settlement, & the discretion vested in him by the Act as to the application of capital moneys must not be so exercised as unduly to prejudice such parties, but where it is a matter of doubt, then the discretion of the tenant for life, if fairly exercised, ought to prevail. Four estates, A., B., C., & D., were devised by the same will in trust for the same tenant for life. After her death estates A., B., & C. were devised to different persons in strict settlement, & a long term of years was created in estate D., subject to which such estate was devised as to one moiety to the uses of estate A., & as to the other moiety to the uses of estate B. The trusts of the term were for the payment off of the incumbrances on all four estates in the order in which they were devised. Upon an application by the tenant for life:—Held: (1) notwithstanding the interposition of the term of years, estate B. & one moiety of estate D. constituted one settled estate within the meaning of the Settled Land Act; & capital moneys arising from the moiety of estate D. were applicable for improvements on estate B.; it appearing that this application of the moneys, though it might delay, would not endanger the payment of the incumbrances on the other estates; (2) the costs as between solr. & client of the solr. & surveyor of the tenant for life for preparing & carrying out the necessary schemes for such improvements were costs incidental to the application & were payable out of the capital moneys arising from estate B. & the moiety of estate D. —Re STAMFORD'S (LORD) SETTLED ESTATES (1889), 43 Ch. 2732. Arrangement by way of compromise—Disposition of interests—Right to make not restricted.—Testator gave his wife the use of his residence, W., so long as she should desire to make it her permanent place of residence & should remain his widow, & directed that his estate should pay all rates, taxes, & outgoings in respect of the house & keep it in repair. He left his residuary real & personal estate upon trust for sale & conversion, & then for his children & their issue; the income of the shares of daughters to be paid to them during coverture without anticipation, & the capital of those shares to be divided after the daughters' deaths amongst their children. He directed his trustees to postpone the sale of W., & to develop it as they thought fit. The judge decided that the widow had the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), & would not forfeit the benefits given by the will if she sold or leased the property. It was now proposed that she & the trustees should enter into a compromise whereby she should release to them her claims in respect of W. in consideration of an annual payment of £275 during widowhood—a sum less than the estimated value of her interests under the will:—Held: under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 51 (1), the condition as to residence was void only so far as it tended to prevent the exercise of the powers of the tenant for life; there was nothing to prevent the widow from releasing her beneficial interests in the manner proposed; if she did so she would forfeit those interests by ceasing to reside, but would receive the value of them in the shape of the annuity of £275; no question of improper investment arose, as the real result of the transaction would be to relieve testator's estate from part of the payments to which it was subject; & the compromise was for the benefit of all parties, was within the power of the trustees, & ought to be sanctioned.—*Re TRENCHARD, TRENCHARD v. Condition requiring residence of life tenant—No bar to powers—Sale.—Testator devised real estate to the use of his son F. so long as he should reside in the dwelling-house, or upon some part of the devised estate, for not less than three calendar months in each year after he should become entitled to the actual possession thereof. After the death of F., if he should have complied with the above condition, the estate was given among his children as he should appoint. In default of appointment, or if F. should fail to comply with the condition, on the determination of his estate therein it was given to the use of trustees for sale. The only house on the estate in which F. could reside was very large, & could not be inhabited properly without an annual outlay of more than twice the annual income derived from the estate. An opportunity arose for selling a part of the estate for a purpose which, if carried into effect, would render the mansion house, if unsold, uninhabitable:—Held: (1) F. had the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), including the power to sell the estate; (2) the condition requiring residence was within sect. 51 of the Act, & void; (3) leave should be given to sell the mansion house.—Re PAGET'S SETTLED ESTATES (1885), 30 Ch. 2758. Time for notice—Sale.—(1) On a sale by tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), a notice to the trustees given less than a month before the contract, but more than a month before the day fixed for completion, held a sufficient compliance with sect. 45.

On the reading of the sect. it is quite plain that a distinction is drawn, between the making of the sale & the making of a contract for sale; & if the notice therefore required by the sect. is given before either one of those two things—assuming that they are two things, then the notice will be good (CHITTY, J.).

(2) The giving of the notice is a matter between the tenant for life & the trustees, & one with which the purchaser is not concerned (CHITTY, J.).—MARLBOROUGH (DUKE) v. SARTORIS (1886), 32 Ch. D. 616; 56 L. J. Ch. 70; 55 L. T. 506; 35 W. R. 55; 2 T. L. R. 644.

2761. ——————In Oct. 1884, H., purporting to demise as absolute owner, which he believed himself to be, granted a building lease of certain land to pltf. for the term of ninety-nine years. Pltf. made no inquiry as to H.'s title, but assumed that he was the absolute owner of the land demised. Deft. afterwards agreed to purchase the lease of the demised land from pltf.; but, on investigating the title, he discovered that the land had, under a will, belonged to H.'s deceased wife, & that H. was only tenant by the curtesy. A tenant by the curtesy has, under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58 (1) (viii), all the powers of a tenant for life; but the lease, though complying with the enabling sects. of the Settled Land Acts, contained no reference thereto; & at its date there were no trustees of the will, to whom the notices, required by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 45, in the case of a lease by a tenant for life, could be given. Deft. then refused to complete, upon the ground that the lease was invalid, or, if not, that pltf.'s title was so questionable that it ought not to be forced upon a purchaser. In an action by pltf. for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: (1) the lease could, & did, operate under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), to convey the land within the meaning of sect. 20 (2); (2) as to the absence of trustees of the settlement & the want of the notices required by sect. 45, pltf., having dealt with the lessor in good faith, was protected by sect. 45 (3) & accordingly, the lease was a valid lease, although there were no trustees, & pltf. was entitled to specific performance of the agreement.

Consent of trustees—Who may consent—Trustees entitled to assignee's interest.]—The assignee for value of a life tenant's estate died, having devised that estate pur autre vie to trustees during the life of P., aged eleven, with legal remainders over in strict settlement. The original life tenant or cestui que vie was aged forty, so that the legal remainders in the estate pur autre vie were very unlikely to come into possession. The trustees who were in possession of the settled estates under this devise had full powers of management till P. attained twenty-five & for his whole life if he previously incumbered, but otherwise on attaining twenty-five he took a life interest with possession till he incumbered. The original tenant contracted to sell part of the settled estates under the powers preserved to him by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 50:—Held: in the special circumstances the consent of the trustees was a sufficient consent within the sect. on behalf of the estate of the assignee for value.—Re MOUNTGARRET & MOORE'S CONTRACT, [1915] 1 Ch. 443; 84 L. Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69), s. 10, also applies to the lease of an easement over the same property.

In Sutherland (Dowager Duchess) v. Sutherland (Duke), No. 2887, post, it was argued that sect. 10 [of Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69)] did not apply to a lease of an easement over the principal mansion house park & lands; but Romer, J., said: In my judgment, though sect. 10 does not repeat the words in sect. 6 [the leasing sect.] of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), or any part thereof, or any easement, right or privilege of any kind, over or in relation to the same, it has the same operation & effect as if the words had been repeated (SWINFEN EADY, J.).

Two estates, each of which included a mansion house, were settled by the same instruments, to the same uses. The tenant for life acting under the powers of Settled Land Acts, leased one of the mansion houses to his wife. The evidence showed that the lease was advantageous to all the parties entitled under the settlement. Each of the trustees of the settlement, with full knowledge of the facts relating to the proposed lease, approved of it as being for the benefit of the estate, but neither of them gave any formal consent thereto, each being advised that the house in question was not the principal mansion house on the settled land:—Held: (1) on the evidence, it was not the principal mansion house; (2) if any consent to the lease was required the trustees had given their consent.—*GILBEY v. —Two estates, the B. P. estate, in Kent, & the C. H. estate, in Essex, each having its own principal mansion house, were settled by the same settlement upon the same trusts. The tenant for life had definitely adopted C. H. as his residence. The B. P. estate was a building estate, & its development as such, which had already commenced at the date of the settlement, was subsequently continued until the character of the surrounding neighbourhood had become altered to such an extent as to render a house of the size & pretensions of B. H. quite out of place & very difficult to let. Ultimately, with the sanction of the ct., B. H. & 18 acres of pleasure grounds & park were let on a twenty-one years' lease to a schoolmaster, £200 being first expended out of capital moneys in making the hall suitable for the purposes of a school. The remainder of the pleasure grounds & park, which had originally comprised about 103 acres, was cut up & laid out under a building scheme & a considerable portion sold or let on building leases:—Held: in the circumstances, B. H. had ceased to be the principal mansion house on any settled land, & the hall & the pleasure grounds & park & lands usually occupied therewith were no longer subject to the restrictions imposed by Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69), s. 10.—Re WYTHES' SETTLED ESTATES, [1908] 1 Ch. 593; 77 L. See Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 65.

2772. General rule.]—(1) In the Settled Land Acts, 1882 & 1890, the paramount object of the Legislature was the well-being of settled land.

An estate including an old family mansion house became vested under a settlement in a tenant for life, a young man who had mortgaged his life estate to a money-lender who had brought an action for foreclosure. The tenant for life, who was too poor to reside on the estate, had contracted under Settled Land Acts to sell the whole for a good price to a wealthy purchaser, & petitioned under Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69), s. 10, for the sanction of the ct. to the sale of the mansion house & demesne lands. The remaindermen opposed the petition, desiring that the mansion house & demesne lands should remain in the family :—Held : the ct. in the exercise of its discretion under Settled Land Acts must have regard to the well-being of the land & the interests of the persons from whose industrial occupation the rents & profits were derived, as well as to the interests of those entitled under the settlement ; & to refuse the sanction in such a case would be to defeat the object of the Legislature.

The question arises under the restriction as to the mansion house & the lands, pleasure grounds & park usually occupied therewith. It scarcely requires argument to show that if the commercial interest is alone to be considered the withdrawing from the sale of the mansion house & the pleasure grounds usually occupied therewith, in this particular case, would have a very serious depreciatory effect upon the sale of the remainder. The 7000 acres by themselves, or the odd 33,000 acres by themselves, certainly would not be likely to realise, if sold separately, the gross sum which would be obtained by selling both as one estate. But the question your lordships have to determine is whether, under the circumstances of this particular case, consent should be given to the sale of the whole (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

(2) I am not certain that any public considerations intervene when the question of the sale of heirlooms arises (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—BRUCE (LORD HENRY) v. AILESBUURY (MARQUESS), [1892] A. they were a " principal mansion house " & demesne within Settled Land Act, 1882, s. 15 ; the condition of forfeiture was void for the purposes of that Act ; & the ct., on the facts, would authorise a temporary letting of them to be made.—Re THOMPSON'S WILL (1888), 21 L. R. Ir. 109.—IR.

The trustees had no power of sale. Upon an originating summons by the trustees, one of whom was the tenant for life, for the direction of the ct., it appearing that Irish land was at present an unsafe investment:—Held: the trustees might defer purchasing Irish land until they could prudently do so, & might in the meantime invest the personal estate under the powers of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), ss. 21, 23.

A life tenant directed the trustees of settled real estate to raise £3,500 out of securities worth £9,600, representing the proceeds of sale of the entire real estate & to apply the £3,500 in the purchase of a leasehold residence he had contracted to buy. The lease had eighty-three years to run, but the ground rent was £190. The purchase was advised by the life tenant's valuers but deprecated by the trustees' valuer, & the remainderman being an infant, the trustees declined to proceed without the ct.'s sanction:—Held: as no ordinary trustee would be justified in making such an investment, the ct. could not sanction it; & the fact that the life tenant was buying the house for a residence, & both he & the infant remainderman were wealthy persons independently of the settlement, made no difference.

2796. Incumbrances on part of estates—Capital moneys from another part—Two estates in same settlement.]—A settlement of land was made in 1853 by a private Act of Parliament. By this Act the estates were vested in the trustees thereby appointed, upon trust by sale or mtge. thereof to raise money for the purpose of discharging certain incumbrances & liabilities. The Act provided that the trustees might from time to time absolutely sell & dispose of all or any part of the estates mentioned in a schedule, provided that the trustees should not sell any of the lands situate in the parishes of C. & H., unless it should be absolutely necessary for the purposes of the Act to do so, & in case of such necessity should not sell any of those lands until all the rest of the estates were sold. After Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), had come into operation, the tenant for life entered into a contract to sell some of the lands situate in the parishes of C. & H. The whole of the rest of the estates had not then been sold:—Held: (1) the power of sale conferred on the tenant for life by Settled Land Act was an absolute power over & above that given to the trustees by private Act, & he was therefore entitled to sell free from the restriction imposed by private Act on the trustees; (2) under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (2), the purchase-money could be applied in discharging a mtge. which affected part of the land sold & another mtge., which affected another part of the settled estate & it was not necessary that the other

At the testator's death the W. estate was subject to a mtge. in fee; the S. estate was unincumbered. J., in 1887, sold part of the S. estate under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), & by his direction the trustees under the Act applied the money in part discharge of the mtge. on W. J. died intestate in 1888, leaving only infant children. It was decided after his death that the contingent remainders as to the S. estate failed, but that as to the W. estate they did not. The unsold part of the S. estate thus became the absolute property of the eldest son & heir-at-law of J., who then claimed a charge on the W. estate for the proceeds of sale which had been applied in part discharge of the mtge., on the ground that as the S. & the W. estate did not devolve in the same way, they were different settled estates, & capital money arising from one was not properly applied in paying off an incumbrance on the other:—Held: there was only one settlement & one settled estate, & the application, before the parts of that estate had devolved in different ways, of capital money arising from one part in discharging an incumbrance on another part of the estate was within the powers of the Act, & J.'s heir was not entitled to any relief.—*Re FREME, FREME v. Rentcharge—Arrears.—Arrears of a jointure rentcharge, which was limited & secured by powers of entry & distress & by a term of years & trusts thereof in the usual way, are an "incumbrance affecting the inheritance of the settled land" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 21 (ii), & may in a proper case, where their discharge would be the wisest course for all concerned, be discharged by the trustees of the settlement out of capital moneys in their hands, but conditionally upon the tenant for life agreeing that such payment shall be without prejudice to the question, should it arise, of the ultimate incidence of the liability for the arrears as between himself & the remainderman.—Re MANCHESTER'S (DUKE) SETTLEMENT, [1910] 1 Ch. 106; 79 L. 2804. Annuity—Incumbrance on tithes.—By a charter in the reign of James I. a grant was made of certain tithes issuing out of the rectory of St. Botolph Without, Aldgate, in the city of London, to persons named in the grant, their heirs & assigns. In 1804, by a marriage settlement, it was provided that an annuity or clear yearly rentcharge of £640 should be issued & be payable out of the tithes in question for the term of one thousand years. The tithes afterwards became vested in the trustees of a will, subject to the annuity created by the settlement. The trustees sold part of the tithes to certain railway cos. for the sum of £30,670. The tenant for life under the will contended that the trustees of the will might, under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 33, invest or apply the £30,670 as capital money arising under that Act. By sect. 21 of same statute it is provided that capital money shall be applied, inter alia, in discharge, purchase, or redemption of incumbrances affecting the inheritance of the settled land, or other the whole estate the subject of the settlement. The tenant for life asked that the trustees might be at liberty to apply to the £30,670 in the purchase of the annuity created by the settlement with a view to its discharge:—Held: the annuity created by the settlement was not a rent, because it did not issue out of a corporeal hereditament; but it was an incumbrance on the tithes, & an incumbrance affecting the inheritance within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), therefore the trustees might be at liberty to purchase the annuity with a view to its discharge.—*Re ESDAILE, ESDAILE v. 2809. Death duties—Estate duty on heirlooms—Succession duty on jointure.—In 1889 estates were settled in strict settlement & heirlooms were settled upon trusts to correspond as nearly as might be to the uses of the freeholds. Under that settlement the seventh Earl of Egmont became tenant for life & the eighth became tenant for life in remainder. The seventh Earl died in 1897. Under a power contained in the settlement the eighth Earl granted to his wife a jointure "free from all deductions." He died in 1910. Estate duty & succession duty on the heirlooms were not paid in 1897, & the Crown now claimed the duties & interest thereon. The trustees had in their hands investments representing capital moneys & rents accrued during the lives of the eighth & the present Earl:—Held: the settlement must be treated as one settlement of the estates & of the heirlooms; the interest must be paid out of the income of the estate accrued during the lives of the tenants for life; capital moneys raised from other parts of the settled property might be applied in discharging incumbrances on the heirlooms; & according to the true construction of the settlement & grant the succession duty on the jointure must be paid out of the capital moneys.—*Re EGMONT'S (EARL) SETTLED ESTATES, LEFROY v. 2810. Portions—When trustees entitled to raise out of capital.—By a settlement dated Oct. 2, 1906, lands & other hereditaments in Yorkshire were settled in the events which happened to the use of trustees for a term of ninety-nine years if G. should so long live upon the trusts therein mentioned, & subject thereto to the use of G. for life, & after his death to the use that his wife should receive during the remainder of her life a yearly rentcharge of £800, & subject & charged as aforesaid to the use of trustees for the term one thousand years from the death of G. upon the trusts thereafter declared with divers remainders over. The trusts of the one thousand years' term were, in the event which happened of G. leaving five younger children, that the trustees "shall," after the death of G. or in his lifetime, at his request in writing raise the sum of £25,000 for portions to go to or amongst all or any of the younger children of G. & their issue as G. should by deed or will appoint. In a deed dated Nov. 4, 1920, appointing this sum amongst these younger children & their issue, G. requested the trustees to raise this sum by any means authorised by the settlement or by law or preferably, if the law permitted, out of capital moneys; & on Jan. 13, 1921, G. in writing requested & directed his trustees to raise the sum out of capital moneys.

This summons raised the question whether the trustees could & ought to comply with G.'s direction. There was evidence that it was desirable to do so if it was lawfully possible:—Held:

although Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 21, did not sanction the application of capital moneys in the manner directed, the ct. would sanction such application subject to the consent being obtained of incumbrancers or persons whose interests had priority to the one thousand years' term, because if, as the trustees were bound to do at the direction of G., they raised the sum of £25,000 by mtgc. of the reversionary term of one thousand years, such mtgc. would be an incumbrance "affecting the inheritance" within s. 21 (ii), so that it could at once be discharged out of capital moneys. L. died domiciled in America, & his wife & son, who was a minor, were resident there. Trustees were appointed under the Settled Land Act of the share of L. in the land, & with the consent of the other beneficiaries it was sold. Application was made that L.'s share might be transmitted to his exors. in America to be re-invested there:—Held: the ct. had no power to allow the money to be sent to America, & if necessary, trustees must be appointed under the Act to receive it in that country.—*Re LLOYD, EDWARDS v. 2818. Cases under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 74—Authorities on Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 34.]—Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 34, & Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), s. 74, are similar enactments, so that where the facts are similar decisions on sect. 74 are authorities on sect. 34.

As between tenant for life & remainderman, where lands subject to a beneficial lease are sold under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), the tenant for life will, during the unexpired period of the term, be entitled to so much only of the income of the invested purchase-moneys as equals the rents under the lease, & the rest of that income must be accumulated & invested for the benefit of the inheritance until the date when the lease would have expired.—*COTTRELL v. 2819. Proceeds of sale of leaseholds—Provision of annuity to tenant for life—Exhausting proceeds in period of lease.]—Testator bequeathed a leasehold house to his exors. & trustees in trust to permit his wife to occupy the same during her widowhood, with a provision for payment of ground rent, rates, taxes, & outgoings execution of repairs, & performance of covenants out of testator's general estate, it being his intention that his wife should be personally relieved therefrom. The widow resided in the house for fourteen years from testator's death, the outgoings, amounting to £160 a year, being paid by the trustees. She then sold the house as life tenant under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), & the trustees received the purchase-money:—Held: (1) under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 34, the proceeds of sale must be applied in paying the widow during widowhood such an annuity as would exhaust those proceeds, capital & income, in the remaining eleven years of the lease; (2) the widow was not entitled to be paid £160 a year out of the general estate in lieu of the provision for payment of rent & outgoings, as that provision, being merely an extra benefit conferred on her to enable her to reside in the house, was not a provision tending to induce her to abstain from exercising her statutory power of sale within the meaning of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 34, & consequently came to an end on the sale.—Re SIMPSON, CLARKE v. SIMPSON, [1913] 1 Ch. 277; 82 L. J. Ch. 169; 108 L. T. 317; 57 Sol. Jo. 302.

2820. Capitalisation of Increased Income—Accumulation at compound interest—How directed.]—

By a settlement dated Feb. 15, 1901, lands which included a large number of freehold reversions subject to building leases were settled in strict settlement & various powers were given to successive tenants for life "in addition to & in aid of the statutory powers." These included a power to "exchange for other manors, lands & hereditaments, . . . all or any of the hereditaments hereby assured," & a power "in case any . . . lessee . . . of any part of the hereditaments, . . . shall be willing to sell or dispose of . . . his subsisting interest, . . . to purchase the same . . . at such price or prices in money or for such other equivalent as" to the tenant for life should seem reasonable, "but so that the terms or interests which shall be purchased or otherwise acquired under the power shall be merged in & consolidated with the freehold & inheritance of the premises." By two deeds of even date the tenant for life conveyed to two persons some of the freehold reversions belonging to the settled estate, & by two further deeds of the same date received in exchange the surrender & merger of leaseholds to which other parts of the settled estate were subject, a sum being paid to the trustees of the settlement by way of parity of exchange which they applied in paying off incumbrances on the estate. The transactions resulted in a large increase of the annual income of the estate. The surrendered leaseholds were at the time of the transaction held upon terms that had less than sixty years to run:—Held: (1) neither the power of exchange given by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 3 (iii), nor the power of exchange created by the settlement enabled leaseholds with less than sixty years to run, or any leasehold interests in land already comprised in the settlement, to be taken in exchange, but the transactions could be regarded as cross-sales & purchases, & as such were valid; (2) under s. 34 of the Act of 1882 an accumulation of part of the increased income resulting from the sale of the freehold reversions must be made during the residue of the terms of the leaseholds to which the conveyed reversions were subject; (3) no accumulation of increased income resulting from the acquisition of the surrendered leaseholds was requisite in view of the special power of acquiring leaseholds for surrender contained in the settlement; (4) assuming all the leaseholds to which the conveyed reversions were subject to have equal unexpired terms, there must be accumulated at compound interest out of the rents of the property comprised in the surrendered leaseholds an amount equal to 4 per cent. interest on the value of the surrendered leaseholds plus the annual benefit to the estate from discharging the incumbrances minus the annual rents of the leaseholds to which the conveyed reversions were subject.—*Re WESTMINSTER'S (DUKE) SETTLED ESTATES, WESTMINSTER (DUKE) v. 2821. Improvement to settled estates.]—A tenant for life under a settlement containing a discretionary trust for sale of the settled estates, & also a power to sell certain settled heirlooms, asked leave of the ct. under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 37, that he might be authorised to sell part of the settled estates, & also a specified portion of the heirlooms; that the money might be paid to the trustees, & that such part as might be necessary might be applied by them in paying for certain improvements, consisting of (a) a larger & better supply of water to a mansion house; (b) a new & improved system of drainage of the mansion house; (c) rebuilding of the stables, which were out of repair; (d) the building of an agent's house; & (e) the building of two cottages. The trustees submitted that the proposed improvements, except the cottages, were not within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 25; & that even if they were the ct. would not supersede the power of the trustees by giving leave to the tenant for life to sell either the estate or the heirlooms:—Held: the proposed outlay was all within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 25; & would have been authorised without the statute; & leave given to the tenant for life to sell both the settled estates & the heirlooms, & for the application of the proceeds as prayed.—Re HOUGHTON ESTATE (1885), 30 Ch. 2824. — Property inalienable by law.]—(1) A dignity of title of honour, as an incorporeal hereditament, is “land” within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 37.

When a dignity is limited to the heirs of the body, then although no place be named in the creation of the title, the dignity is within Statute De Donis, 1285 (c. 1), & descendible as an estate tail, & the patent does not create a fee simple conditional.

There is no difference in these respects between a baronetcy & other descendible dignities.

2832. — Without consent of trustees.]—
(1) Except in a case mentioned in sect. 15, a tenant for life has, under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), an absolute power of selling the settled land without the consent or control of the trustees of the settlement, unless they have reason to believe that any intended exercise of the power is improper, in which case they may apply to the ct. for directions under sect. 44. Consequently, neither the fact that at the time the tenant for life enters into a contract for sale there are no trustees of the settlement under the Act, nor when there are any, the fact that no notice has been given them by the tenant for life, under sect. 45 (1) of his intention to proceed to a sale, prevents his making a statutory title. It is sufficient for the protection of the purchaser if by the time he comes to complete there are trustees under the Act to whom he may pay his purchase-money if required so to do by the tenant for life under sect. 22 & notice has been given them under sect. 45 (1); though under sect. 45 (3) a purchaser dealing in good faith with the tenant for life is not concerned to inquire respecting the giving of the notice.

(2) Now, looking back to the power, I find, first of all, in sect. 3, "powers of sale, exchange, & partition, with, in sect. 4, the usual provisions which one finds in such powers, for instance: 'Every sale shall be made at the best price'; & 'every exchange & every partition shall be made for the best consideration in land or in land & money that can reasonably be obtained,' & so on. So that I think the meaning of this sect. 53 is that, for the security of the remaindermen, as between the tenant for life & them, he in exercise of this power shall be treated as a trustee & shall have all the liabilities of a trustee exercising a like power. The consequence of that is, no doubt, that if a purchaser knows the tenant for life is exercising the power improperly, & is aware that what the tenant for life is doing would amount to a breach of trust, he, the purchaser, has a perfect right to say, 'I will not complete'" (KAY, J.).—HATTEN v. RUSSELL (1888), 38 Ch. D. 334; 57 L. J. Ch. 425; 58 L. T. 271; 36 W. R. 317.

2833. — Subsoil alone.]—A tenant for life by virtue of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 63 of a settlement by way of trust for sale created by will, of undivided shares of settled land beneath which a railway co. desired to construct tunnels for an electric railway, having joined with the owners of the remaining shares in entering into an agreement with the co. for the sale of them of the right to construct, maintain, & use tunnels with railways therein under the land, took out a summons under Settled Land Act, 1884 (c. 18), s. 7, asking for leave to enter into a contract in the form of an agreement with the co. for the sale of them of that right. It was urged in support of the application that to proceed under Settled Land Acts was cheaper & more simple than under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18), & that the right in question constituted an easement under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 3, or, if not, that the ct. had power under that sect. to make the order asked for:—Held: the sale of the subsoil of the settled land was not the sale of an easement under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 3, but the ct. had power under that sect. to make an order authorising the sale as being a sale of part of the settled land.—Re PEARSON'S WILL (1900), 83 L. T. 626.

—See MINES, Vol. XXXIV., p. 636, Nos. 328–332.

2834. — Right to discharge mortgages.]—Land which was subject to mtges. was settled, subject to a term for securing incumbrances, to the use, in the events which happened, of A. for life, with remainders over. The trusts of the term provided that so long as the mtges. remained unpaid the trustees should receive the rents & profits & manage the premises & keep down the interest of the mtge. debts & certain rentcharges created by the settlement, that they should then pay to the tenant for life for the time being subject to the term an annuity of £600 a year, & should apply the residue of the rents & profits towards the payment of the principal moneys charged by the mtges., & there was a proviso for the cesser of the term upon the discharge of the mtge. debts. The settlement conferred on the trustees an immediate power of sale & exchange, but no power of leasing. The ct., having held that A. was a person having the powers of a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), ordered him to be let into possession upon his undertaking to perform the trusts of the term, & gave him the custody of the title deeds. The ct. would have made the order apart from the annuity to A.

A. subsequently contracted to sell, under the powers of Settled Land Acts, certain portions of the settled lands, including parts of all the mtged. lands & a portion which was unincumbered, & in order to complete the sale it was necessary that the mtges. should be paid off. A. therefore directed that the trustees should apply the proceeds of the sale in paying off the mtges. He deposed that he considered that this would be for the benefit of all the parties entitled under the settlement, seeing that the mtges. bore interest at 4 per cent. whereas the purchase-money could not be invested in trustee securities to yield more than 3 per cent. Upon a summons to determine whether the mtges. ought not to be kept on foot for the benefit of the ultimate remainderman:—Held: the beneficiaries under the settlement took subject to the power of sale conferred on the trustees, & inasmuch as the trustees in the exercise of that power might properly, for the purpose of carrying into effect a beneficial sale, pay off the existing incumbrances out of the purchase-money, a tenant for life doing the same thing under the powers of Settled Land Acts ought not to be held to be acting unjustly towards the remaindermen: consequently the mtges. ought not to be kept on foot, & upon the payment off out of the capital moneys of all the mtges. the term would cease.

After D. attained twenty-five or the wife remarried, whichever first happened, the house was to fall into the residuary estate, which was given to the trustees on trust for sale & conversion. After testator's death a house was purchased & assured to the wife & the other trustees in fee simple. It was now desired to sell it, & the question arose whether a title could be made under the trust for sale which “unless the settlement otherwise provides” is imported by Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 32, or whether the title must be made under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18):—Held: the direction that the house was to be purchased for the wife's residence was inconsistent with an immediate trust for sale, & amounted to a provision excluding Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 32, so that there was no trust for sale, & the title must be made under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18). Qu.: whether Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 32, applies to a trust to purchase land.—*Re HANSON, HANSON v. affecting the interests created by an original settlement, so that that settlement is no longer the only instrument “under or by virtue of which the land stands limited for the time being to or in trust for persons by way of succession,” to appoint trustees of a compound settlement constituted by the original settlement & the subsequent deed.

(2) Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69), s. 4, is not to be read as providing that an assignment made by a tenant for life of settled land in consideration of marriage or by way of family arrangement, is to be deemed one of the instruments creating the settlement for all the purposes of the Act. It is limited to the purpose of excluding the operation of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 50, altogether.

(3) Upon a sale, under the powers of Settled Land Acts, by a tenant for life who has made such an assignment, it is not necessary to appoint trustees of the settlement constituted by the original deed & the instrument effecting the assignment; but the trustees of the original settlement, having powers of sale, or appointed for the purposes of Settled Land Acts, are competent to receive & give receipts for the purchase-money.

(4) Upon a sale by a tenant for life who has alienated for value, the purchaser is in general entitled under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 50, to ask for evidence of the consent of the assignee, but if the assignment contains a general consent beforehand, all the powers of the tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), will remain unfettered.

(5) It is quite plain that one instrument may constitute a settlement, although it is to be admitted that several instruments may, under the same definition in the parts (Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1)), which I have not read, also constitute a settlement (STIRLING, J.).

(6) Suppose, for example, that under a power contained in a settlement the tenant for life has charged portions on the estate in favour of his younger children: of course, he may then be taken to know the particulars of the instrument executed by himself, but Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 20 (2), appears to me to show that he may sell the estate discharged from those portions so long as they have not been actually raised, & there is nothing in the Act to show that the framers of it contemplated that by a charge of portions persons who for the time being were trustees, either with powers of sale as expressly named for the purposes of the Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), would be deprived of the power of receiving & giving receipts for the purchase-money, & that resort should be had to the powers conferred on the ct. by sect. 38, before a sale can be completed (STIRLING, J.).—Re DU CANE & NETTLEFOLD'S CONTRACT, [1898] 2 Ch. 96; 67 L. 2850. Ascertainment of best price—What court will consider—Possible increase in value of property.—An action was brought by a remainderman to obtain an injunction to restrain the tenant for life & the trustees of a settled estate containing coal mines from selling it in such a manner as would be prejudicial to the interests of the remaindermen.

at the present time would be disadvantageous, as the development of the minerals had only recently commenced. The will by which the estate was settled gave the trustees a power to sell at the request of the tenant for life; & Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), had come into operation since the commencement of the suit. A new trustee, who consented to an immediate sale, had been appointed by plffs. during the pendency of the suit without asking the consent of the ct.:—Held: by the will the trustees had a power of sale, & they could only be prevented from exercising it if the sale were improvident or a breach of trust, & by Settled Land Act the tenant for life had cumulative powers to sell, so that both under the will & the Act the tenant for life had a clear right to sell; the ct. would not speculate as to a probable increase in the value of property for the benefit of remaindermen to the disadvantage of the tenant for life; also, it was not here necessary for defts. to have obtained the consent of the ct. to their appointment of a new trustee pendente lite.—*THOMAS v. 2851. Validity of agreement to fix by arbitration—Effect of private Act.—A tenant for life of settled land agreed with a municipal corpn. to sell a portion of the settled land at a price to be fixed by arbn. The agreement was conditional on the sanction of Parliament by a local Act being obtained. The corpn. obtained a local Act which confirmed the agreement, scheduled to it, & made it "binding on the parties thereto respectively, & same shall & may be carried into effect accordingly." The agreement was made between the tenant for life, an assignee of his life estate, & the corpn., & provided that the award of the arbitrators or umpire fixing the price should be "binding upon all the parties hereto respectively, & upon all parties interested in the" (settled) "estates":—Held: although it was a breach of trust on the part of the tenant for life to delegate his authority & enter into an agreement to sell at a price to be fixed by some one else, yet the effect of the agreement & the Act was that the agreement should be carried into effect as a sale by a tenant for life under Settled Land Acts, with all the consequences which that involved, & the persons interested in remainder in the settled estates were therefore bound.—Re WILTON'S (EARL) SETTLED ESTATES, [1907] 1 Ch. 50; 76 L. e. Power to sell in lots.]—A tenant for life selling in exercise of the powers conferred by Settled Land Acts lands

IN 1891, a WATER CO. ENTERED INTO A CONTRACT WITH a tenant for life, acting under the powers conferred by Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, for the purchase of a plot of settled land with the object of erecting thereon certain buildings for the purposes of their undertaking, & agreed to enter into a covenant not to build thereon or let it for building otherwise than for the purpose of their undertaking. They promoted a Bill in Parliament for power to erect the proposed buildings, which was thrown out before the conveyance was executed, & thereupon requested the vendor to agree to the omission from the conveyance of the covenant restrictive of building on the plot sold. The vendor, however, insisted on a conveyance in accordance with the contract, but entered into an agreement with the co. to which the trustees of the settlement were parties, to the effect that if the co. should not require the land for the purposes of their undertaking & should desire to erect other buildings thereon or to sell or let the same & thereof should give notice to the vendor, then the vendor would on payment of £10, consent to the co. building upon or selling the land without the restriction as to building contained in the conveyance, which agreement, although dated the day after the conveyance, was executed simultaneously & formed one transaction with it. The vendor died, & was succeeded by his son as tenant in tail of the settled land, who possessed lands adjoining the plot sold. The co. then gave notice & tendered to him £10 in accordance with the agreement, but he declined to give his consent, alleging that he was not bound thereby. On a special case stated by consent of the parties under R. S. C., Ord. 34, r. 1:—Held: the vendor as tenant for life of the settled land had no power under Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, to enter into such an agreement with the co., which therefore was not binding on his successors in title.—PALMER v. GRAND JUNCTION WATERWORKS CO. (1902), 86 L. T. 352.

2854. Payment into court—Option of tenant for life—Effect of consent to order for payment in.—In 1859 a suit was instituted for the administration of the estate of testator, who had devised land in strict settlement. In 1886 the tenant for life sold the land under the provisions of Settled Land Act. Trustees had previously been appointed by the ct. for the purposes of the Act. The purchaser refused to complete his contract, unless the purchase-money was paid into ct., & an order was made on his application, with the consent of the tenant for life, giving him liberty to pay it in, & it was paid in accordingly:—Held: (1) by consenting to the order for payment of the purchase-money into ct., the tenant for life had exercised the option given to him by sect. 22 (1) of the Act, of having the money paid either to the trustees of the settlement or into ct., & the money could not, therefore be paid out to the trustees but must remain in ct., & be invested or applied under the direction of the ct.

(2) Semle: the power to give receipts, which is conferred on trustees by sect. 40 of the Act, extends to trustees appointed by the ct. under sect. 38.—COOKES v. COOKES (1887), 34 Ch. D. 498; 56 L. J. Ch. 397; 56 L. T. 159; 35 W. R. 402; 3 T. L. R. 332.

He cannot get a good discharge for his purchase-money except by paying it to or by the direction of the trustees of the settlement or into Court. 2881. — — — —.]—A tenant for life without leasing power demised a plot of building land for the term of sixty years, from Sept. 29, 1834, at the annual rent of sixpence; the lease contained a covenant by the tenant for life for quiet enjoyment. The lessee accordingly erected a house on the plot of land. After the death of the tenant for life the fee simple ultimately vested in H., who accepted rent at the rate above mentioned from J., who was a son of the original lessee, & was then in possession of the house. H. afterwards conveyed the house & land to pltf. by indenture: the grant was made expressly subject to the supposed term of sixty years. No notice to quit had been given, & the annual value of the house & land was about £6. Pltf. having sued to recover possession of the house & land:—Held: as the representatives of the original lessee, under the indenture of Sept. 29, 1834, could not have sued H. for breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment, the void lease afforded no defence against pltf. claiming under the grant of the fee simple subject to it; a tenancy from year to year had not been created by the payment of a rent at the rate of sixpence a year; & pltf. was entitled to immediate possession of the house & land.—*SMITH v. 2887. What may be leased—Right of way—Over park attached to principal mansion house.—The tenant for life of a settled estate for the purpose of giving his wife a dower or jointure house, in 1889 granted her a lease for twenty-one years of a house called X., about three miles from the principal mansion house on the T. estate, of which estate X. formed part, together with rights of way over all roads & drives which from time to time should exist on the T. estate. The drives then existing were about twenty-five miles long, & extended over the estate generally, including the part usually occupied with the mansion house & up to the gate & door of such mansion house. At the same time, & substantially as part of the same transaction, the tenant for life granted to his wife a building lease for ninety-nine years of a piece of land forming part of a portion of the T. estate never previously used as building ground, & inconvenient for such a purpose, together with the right of way over certain drives, including the carriage-drive over & up to X. Any house on the building site would overlook & destroy the privacy of X.

It was part of the arrangement that the two leases should be renewed every few years, so as to ensure that, so far as possible, the terms should begin to run from the death of the tenant for life.

In May, 1891, the two leases were renewed on the same terms. Neither the old nor the new leases were substantially acted on during the life of the tenant for life. After the death of the tenant for life the lessees brought an action to have the validity of the leases established:—Held: (1) the leases were invalid, because they were not granted in the bona fide exercise of the leasing powers of the tenant for life having "regard to the interests of all parties entitled under the settlement" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 53; (2) having regard to Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 6, & Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69), s. 10, the lease of X. was invalid by reason of its granting rights of way over the park & lands usually occupied with the principal mansion house; (3) the lease of X. could not be regarded as a valid contract for a lease without the rights of way under Leases Act, 1849 (c. 26); (4) Seemle: a tenant for life may grant a lease to a married woman although she is his own wife.—*SUTHERLAND (DOWAGER DUCHESS) v. 2889. Effect of grant of invalid underlease.—A tenant for life, impeachable for waste, under a settlement which included real estate & unopened mines severed from the surface, which was not included in the settlement, granted a take-note or licence for three years to search for & work gold & other ores in the mines subject to the rights of the Crown, if any. The tenant for life subsequently acquired a lease from the Crown for twenty-one years of the gold & silver ores in the mines together with a release of the Crown's statutory right of pre-emption over the base ores. He then granted further take-notes & leases of the mines for short terms, all of which expired during his life, & received rents & premiums. None of the take-notes or leases were valid under Settled Land Acts, under which alone he had power to deal with the mines. On the expiration of the Crown lease he obtained a renewal for a further period of twenty-one years, & granted valid separate sub-leases of the gold & silver ores & of the base minerals for the residue of the Crown term less one day. On the death of the tenant for life in 1916 the tenant in tail in remainder, who had barred the entail, brought an action against the exors. of the tenant for life claiming the amount of the premiums & three-fourths of the rents received by him, & a declaration that pltf. was entitled to the subsisting Crown lease subject to & with benefit of the sub-leases. SARGANT, J., held that the take-notes & leases for short terms being invalid under Settled Land Acts the rents & premiums received thereunder could not be recovered by pltf., & the subsisting Crown lease & sub-leases did not belong to the estate.

The Ct. of Appeal affirmed the first part of the decision of SARGANT, J., but reversed the second, on the ground that the tenant for life had used his position to obtain the Crown lease, & so far as the release of the right of pre-emption over the base ores was concerned that lease extended to something which was included in the settlement. He must therefore be taken to have acquired the lease as trustee for the beneficiaries, & pltf. was entitled to the unexpired portion of the lease subject to & with benefit of the sub-leases.—*LLOYD-JONES v. 2898. — — Lease to make provision for tenant for life & wife.]—A tenant for life of a mansion house & lands, part of the settled estate, granted a lease for twenty-one years from Mar. 25, 1909, to his son-in-law, at a rental of £380 per annum, which was less than the best rent obtainable. The son-in-law never entered into possession of the property or performed any of the covenants in the lease, but subdemised it at a peppercorn rent to the tenant for life & his wife for the full term of twenty-one years less one day, if they or the survivor of them should so long live. The tenant in fee simple in remainder was adjudged bkpt. in Mar. 1916, & the trustee in bkpcy. issued a writ in July, 1918, against the son-in-law to have the lease declared void, & judgment was given to this effect in Jan. 1919. The tenant for life had died in July, 1917, & his wife, not having been made deft. to the action, had been allowed to remain in possession of the mansion house & lands. She now claimed to remain in possession of the mansion house & lands as of right, & the trustee in bkpcy. accordingly moved for a declaration that he was entitled to vacant possession as against her:—Held: this lease was not a lease which was intended "to take effect in possession not later than twelve months after its date" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1), & it had not reserved "the best rent than can reasonably be obtained" within s. 7 (2) of the Act, & accordingly, that there never was a bonâ fide exercise of the power of leasing under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), but an abuse of that power for the purpose of making provision for the tenant for life & his wife, with the result that the lease was void & the trustee entitled to possession.—*Re CORNWALLIS WEST, Ex p. Validity of covenant to grant lease in future—Sub-lease.]—The ct. has no power under Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), ss. 4, 5, to sanction a sub-lease of settled land, held under a renewable lease, for the unexpired residue of the term, with a covenant for the extension of the term by a further sub-lease after the renewal of the head lease. Such a lease would, as regards the further lease, not be a lease taking effect in possession.—Re FARNELL'S SETTLED ESTATES (1886), 33 Ch. D. 599; 35 W. R. 250.

2902. Best rent—Necessity for.]—A tenant for life, purporting to act under the powers of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), granted a building lease of some vacant land at less than the best rent that could reasonably be obtained, the rent having been reduced in consideration of the waiver by the lessee of a claim for damages against the lessor, & the lessee covenanted to lay out a certain sum in building. The lessee neglected to build, & the lease was sold by auction to the vendor at a large price. The vendor agreed to sell at an enhanced price to the purchaser, & the purchaser objected that, having regard to the amount of the price, it must be shown that the rent reserved by the lease was the best that could reasonably be obtained within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 7 (2). The vendor had no knowledge of the arrangement between the lessor & the lessee as to the reduction of the rent, & he insisted that, as purchaser for value without notice, he could make a good title to the purchaser:—Held: that, inasmuch as the lease did not comply with the statutory requirements as to rent, & the lessee did not act in good faith within s. 54, it was bad, & could be set aside as against a purchaser for value without notice.—

A certain rent was reserved by the lease, but dehors the lease it was arranged between the partners that the tenant for life should be allowed to occupy the house rent free, & should receive an additional rent as compensation in the event of his ceasing to reside there. In an action by the remaindermen, after the death of the tenant for life, to recover possession of the premises from an assignee of the lease:—Held: the lease was void for non-compliance with the requirements of Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), s. 46, on the ground that (1) the best rent had not been reserved; & (2) because the covenants in the lease, being joint covenants by a man & others with himself, were not enforceable at law, & consequently were not proper covenants within the meaning of the sect., or such as the reversioners were entitled to have inserted in the lease.—*BOYCE v. 2904. ———.—[In 1905 defts., a brewery co., who were lessees of licensed premises at a yearly rent of £150 under a lease for fourteen years from June 24, 1902, granted under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), by a previous tenant for life, deducted from their rent the compensation fund charges levied under the provisions of Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 23). The tenant for life, who was an illiterate man, complained of the deductions & defts. subsequently agreed that if he granted them a new lease for twenty-one years at the same rent of £150. they would pay the charges themselves. Accordingly, the tenant for life, without having any legal assistance or consulting the solr. to the settled trust estate, in exercise of his statutory powers granted defts. a new lease of the licensed premises for twenty-one years at a yearly rent of £150, & defts. covenanted to pay the rent without deduction, & also to pay all rates, taxes, assessments & charges, including all payments to the compensation fund under Licensing Act, 1904 (c. 23), which then were or during the term should be charged on the demised premises without making any deduction from rent in respect thereof. Defts. had paid the charges under the Licensing Act in fulfilment of their promise.

In an action by the remaindermen against defts. for declaration that the lease did not reserve the best rent that could reasonably be obtained, & was not binding upon them:—Held: there was no valid reservation in the lease of the real amount which was to be paid for the use of the premises; the rent which was really reserved was £150 subject to the deductions, & no more, & was obviously in the circumstances, not the best rent that could be obtained; & therefore the new lease was not a valid lease under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), so as to be binding upon the remaindermen.—*PUMFORD v. As an inducement to execute the deed deft. had paid to C. the sum of £21, which he applied to his own use. There was no evidence that a higher rent could have been obtained. The lease purported to be granted by the mtgees. at the request of C. & by C., as tenant for life, by virtue of the Settled Land Act, 1882. C. died in 1895. In an action to set aside the lease:—Held: (1) the ct., in giving relief to the beneficiaries, would not consider the question whether they had been damnified or not; (2) on the evidence the payment to C. could not be regarded as a fine, & the liability of deft. was not therefore limited to paying the sum over again to trustees appointed for the purposes of Settled Land Acts; & (3) having regard to the improper payment to C., the “best rent” required by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 7 (2), had not been obtained, & consequently the lease was void.—*CHANDLER v. his own interests alone, but to the interests of all persons entitled under the settlement, the interest of those more remotely entitled being of less weight than the interest of those nearer to the succession. The ct., in giving its sanction to any such proposed sale, must in the exercise of its judicial discretion be satisfied that, under the circumstances of each particular case, the sale is reasonable & proper, having regard to the interests of all parties entitled.

(2) If the application is for leave to sell an heirloom of unique character & historical repute, such as a famous jewel or work of art, the ct., in the exercise of the judicial discretion given to it by the Act, will have regard to the intention of the settlor & also to the wishes & feelings of the remaindermen.—*Re HOPE, DE CETTO v. In considering those interests more weight must be given to those of persons nearest in succession than to the interests of those who are more remote. The ct.'s duty, when asked to sanction an exercise of the tenant for life's powers under the Acts, is to put itself in the position of an honest tenant for life striving to do his duty with regard to the interests of all concerned; the ct. may, however, properly give a certain weight to the opinions & wishes of the tenant for life as head of the family.

(1) The discretion [of the ct. regarding sale of heirlooms] is a judicial discretion to be exercised in the circumstances of the case (CHITTY, J.).

(2) The circumstance that the pictures have no home is said to be a special ground. . . . Appct. is not to blame for having sold the mansion in Belgrave Square; but I cannot allow that as any special ground for assenting to the sale, because it is appet. himself, though in exercise of his legal power, who made the pictures homeless (CHITTY, J.).

(3) In regard to his financial position, that is not a circumstance which affects the rest of the family & those who succeed. . . . That is a circumstance which has been brought about by his own extravagance; . . . as a general rule the fact of the tenant for life having got himself into difficulties is not a circumstance which ought to have weight in deciding in favour of a sale (CHITTY, J.).

It was proposed that the sum arising from the sale should be applied in reduction of charges upon the settled estates. The estimated sum to arise from the sale was £7,300, & the annual income of the estates was about £7,500. The estates were settled as to one-half by a settlement made in 1876, & as to the other part by the will of testator who died in 1882. The guardians ad litem of the tenant in tail in remainder & the trustees were opposed to the proposed sale. It appeared that since testator's death there had been no substantial depreciation in the property. 2950. Repair & renovation of unsold heirlooms.]—A settlement made by will included several large estates, with three mansion houses & the pictures, china, & furniture therein, which were settled as heirlooms. Two of the mansion houses were sold under orders of ct. made in pursuance of the provisions of the Settled Land Acts, & certain pictures, china & furniture removed therefrom, for which no room could be found in the remaining mansion house & the town house of the tenant for life for the time being, were warehoused. Of the other pictures for which room was found in the remaining mansion house, some were in a bad state of repair, & required the expenditure of a considerable sum for the preservation. On an originating summons taken out by the tenant for life, to which the trustees of the settlement were made defts. for authority to sell the warehoused heirlooms, & that the trustees might have liberty out of the proceeds of sale to repair the remaining heirlooms:—Held: the tenant for life might sell the warehoused heirlooms, & the trustees might out of the proceeds of sale, spend such a sum as was necessary in repairing the remaining heirlooms, with liberty to apply in chambers as to the amount to be spent for that purpose.—*Re WALDEGRAVE, WALDEGRAVE (EARL) v. 2958. ———— Jointure charges—Prior to estate of life tenant.]—By a will real estate was devised to A. for life with remainder to his first & other sons successively in tail male, with like remainder to B. & C. & then over. A. & C. were dead, & B. was tenant for life in possession. A., B. & C. had all executed jointure deeds under a power conferred by the settlement; that executed by A. was in operation & constituted an existing charge on the settled property. Trustees of the will had been appointed for the purposes of Settled Land Acts. B. having contracted, under the powers conferred upon him by those Acts, to sell a portion of the estate, the purchaser insisted that trustees should be appointed of the compound settlement created by the will & the several jointure deeds:—Held: (1) the jointures were not charges upon the estate of the tenant for life within Settled Land Act, 1890 (c. 69), s. 4; (2) the will by itself constituted a settlement within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2; (3) under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 20, B. could convey the land discharged from the jointures, they being “estates, interests, or charges subsisting under settlement” within that sect.; & B. could make a good title to the property, & the trustees of the will could give a good discharge for the purchase-money.

If, for example, the settlement contained a power to charge portions, & those portions had been provided for by a mtge. of the property on the creation of a term or interest in the property, & such portions had been actually raised, then I apprehend they would fall within this exception [Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 20 (2)] (STIRLING, J.).—Re KECK & HART'S CONTRACT, [1898] 1 Ch. 617; 78 L. 2962. — Invalid lease.]—A tenant for life of settled land cannot grant a valid building lease of the surface of the land under the Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), with a reservation of the mines & minerals.

Where a tenant for life purports to grant such a lease, it will not be rendered a valid lease by virtue of Leases Act, 1849 (c. 26).

The defect is said to be remedied in two ways. In the first place Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 20, provides that on a lease the tenant for life may as regards land leased, as intended so to be, convey or create the same by deed to the user & in the manner requisite for giving effect to the lease, & such a deed, to the extent & in the manner to or in which it is expressed or intended to operate & can operate under the Act, is effectual to pass the land conveyed. But to pray this in aid of the lease begs the whole question. If the lease can operate under the Act there is no question at all.

In the second place, it is said that Leases Acts, 1849 (c. 26), 1850 (c. 17), apply to leases under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38). But those Acts only apply to forms & ceremonies of leases under powers, & not to matters of substance. To hold that they make a lease of this kind valid would be tantamount to saying that the tenant for life may grant any lease he likes in total disregard of all the provisions of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38). The Leases Acts do not touch a case like the present (KEKEWICH, J.).—Re NEWELL & NEVILL'S CONTRACT, [1900] 1 Ch. 90; sub nom. Re NEVILL & NEWELL'S CONTRACT, 69 L. J. Ch. 94; 81 L. T. 581; 48 W. 2967. What incumbrances included — Rent-charge.]—"Incumbrance" in Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 5, includes a rentcharge created under Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (c. 114); & therefore where settled land is subject to such a rentcharge, the tenant for life can, on a sale of part of the land, effectually exonerate the part sold by obtaining the consent of the owner of the rentcharge to charging the whole of it upon the unsold land under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 5, & the intervention of the Board of Agriculture under Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (c. 114), ss. 68, 69, is unnecessary.

As the exoneration operates as an effectual discharge of the land sold, the purchaser is not liable under Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (c. 114), s. 63, & Tithe Act, 1842 (c. 54), s. 16, to contribution at the instance of owners of unsold land subject to the rentcharge.—Re STRAFFORD (EARL) & MAPLES, [1896] 1 Ch. 235; 65 L. 2968. — Whether limited to incumbrances having priority over settlement.]—The beneficial operation of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 5, is not limited to incumbrances having priority over the settlement under which a sale is made under the Act, but extends to incumbrances arising under the settlement which are overreached by the sale & attach to the proceeds of sale.

Therefore on a sale under the Act a tenant for life can under sect. 5, with the consent of a jointress, transfer her jointure rentcharge attaching to the proceeds of sale to the unsold part of the settled estates.

The words "on a sale" in sect. 5, are not limited to cases where a sale has been made, but also include a contemplated or intended sale.—Re KNIGHT'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1918] 1 Ch. 211; 87 L. J. Ch. 111; 118 L. T. 170; 62 Sol. Jo. 141.

2963 i. "Securing money actually" raised — Portions charge.]—By will, dated Oct. 17, 1854, testator resident in Scotland devised his real estate, including the lands of B. in Ireland, to his six daughters for life, with remainders over. Testator died in 1857, having prior to his death advanced the sum of £1,500 to the husband of one of his daughters, & £475 to the husband of another daughter. In 1882, by deed of family arrangement, the real estate of testator was conveyed to trustees, to hold on the trusts of the will, charged, as to the life estates of the two daughters therein, with repayment of the sums of £1,500 & £475 advanced to their husbands respectively. An order was subsequently made for administration of testator's real & personal estate in Ireland & the lands of B. were sold to a purchaser.—Held: the sums of £1,500 & £475 were not money "actually raised" within the exception to Settled Land Act, 1882, s. 20.—*CONNOLLY v. Estate adjoined one another, & each had appurtenant to some part of it a right of way or easement over some part of the other. It was to the advantage of the respective owners of the estates, for the purpose of developing the same, that these appurtenant rights of way should be released so that each estate might be no longer incumbered with any easement in favour of the other. The question arose whether under Settled Land Acts a tenant for life of a settled estate could by way of sale or exchange release an easement which was appurtenant to such estate, or could out of capital money purchase the discharge or release of a right of way or similar right to which the settled estate was subject:—Held: whether or not the proposed scheme for exchange of the easements could properly be carried out, the better course would be that cross sales of the easements should be effected, that course being within the powers conferred by Settled Land Acts.—*Re BROTHERTON, BROTHERTON v. 2976. Duty of tenant for life—To act in interest of all persons concerned.—An equitable tenant for life accepted the surrender of a lease, which she had granted under the powers of Settled Land Acts & received from the lessee a certain sum as consideration for accepting the surrender:—Held: under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 53, the tenant for life was a trustee, & if he accepted a surrender, he must do so for the interests not only of himself but for those of the remaindermen, & if he received a consideration for accepting it, then, on ordinary principles, a ct. of equity would distribute the money between the tenant for life & the remaindermen on principles which it thought fair.—*Re RODES, SANDERS v. 2977. Effect of invalid notice by lessees—On new lease granted by tenant for life.—Sect. 7 of the Settled Estates Act, 1877, does not authorise an equitable tenant for life, not being a lessor, to take a surrender which is not sanctioned by the court.

Certain customary freeholds were demised by a lease of June 15, 1877, to two lessees, for twenty-one years from Christmas, 1876, at a rental of £130. The lease was determinable at the expiration of the fourteenth year, on the lessor or lessees giving to the other of them, "or his or their representatives or assigns," a written notice of such intention. The lessor died in Dec. 1877, having devised & bequeathed his customary freeholds & leaseholds to trustees in trust for his wife, M., during her widowhood, & then to other beneficiaries. On Dec. 21, 1889, one of the two lessees gave notice to M. of his intention to quit & yield up possession of the leasehold premises at Christmas, 1890. On Aug. 13, 1890, M. purporting to act under the provisions of Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), granted a lease of the same premises to one of the two original lessees for seven years from Christmas 1890, at the reduced rent of £100. The licence of the lord of the manor for this lease was not obtained. In an action by the trustees & beneficiaries of the original lessor against the two lessees:—Held: (1) the notice of Dec. 21, 1889, not having been served on the lessor's representatives or assigns, was not a good notice; (2) the old lease was not surrendered by operation of law, inasmuch as it was voidable if not void; (3) the granting of the new lease could not be supported under either Settled Estates Act, 1877 (c. 18), or Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), & the lessees were liable to pay the full rent of £130 under the old lease.—EASTON v. PENNY (1892), 67 L. T. 290; 41 W. R. 72; 8 T. L. R. 779.

2978. Effect of grant of new lease—Operates according to its tenor.—Where a tenant for life of settled property accepts the surrender of a lease of the settled property & grants a new lease at an increased rent, then, if that new lease is not open to question on the ground of impropriety or otherwise, Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), intends that it shall be operative in accordance with its tenor. Unless the lease is so improper as to amount to an unlawful exercise of his powers by the tenant for life, it is quite in accord with the spirit of the whole Act that the Legislature intended that the tenant for life should keep for himself everything which under the terms of the instrument he had succeeded in retaining for himself & therefore the excess rent is payable to the tenant for life, & is not to be capitalised or accumulated for the benefit of the remaindermen.—Re WIX, HARDY v. LEMON, [1916] 1 Ch. 279; 85 L. J. Ch. 192; 114 L. T. 455; 32 T. L. R. 257; 60 Sol. Jo. 291.

SUB-SECT. 11.—RELATION TO POWERS ARISING UNDER SETTLEMENT OR STATUTES OTHER THAN SETTLED LAND ACTS.

See Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), ss. 108, 109, sched. V.

2980. Provisions in settlement & statutory provisions cumulative.—The settlement gave the trustees power during the minority of any person entitled to possession to receive & apply rents & profits in management of estate & maintenance of infant, & to accumulate & apply the surplus in paying off charges or in purchase of real estate to be settled to the same uses:—Held: (1) the rents & profits received by the trustees during the minority were to be treated in manner directed by the settlement & without regard to the Act.

Power in the settlement to the trustees with the consent of tenant for life, if of age, & if not of his guardians, to sell or exchange:—Held: (2) this power was exercisable by the trustees during the minority at the request & by the direction of the guardians of the infant tenant in tail.

Power in the settlement for the guardians during minority to grant leases for twenty-one years, building leases for ninety-nine years, & mining leases for sixty years:—Held: (3) this power was exercisable during minority by the guardians with the consent of the trustees; (4) rents derived from mining leases were to be applied by the trustees in manner directed by the settlement, as coming within the term "contrary intention" expressed in sect. 11 of the Act; (5) there being no power in the settlement to sell surface land apart from minerals the trustees could exercise that power under sect. 17 of the Act; & this being an execution of a statutory power, the consent of the guardians would not be necessary.

(6) The meaning of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 56 (2), is that in all cases, notwithstanding anything contained in the settlement, the consent of the tenant for life shall by virtue of the Act be necessary to the exercise by the trustees of the settlement of any power conferred by the settlement for any purpose provided by the Act.

The meaning of sect. 60 is that where the tenant for life is an infant, the option of consenting given to the tenant for life is conferred upon the trustees of the settlement.

It is not intended to take away from the trustees named in any settlement powers given to them by that settlement . . . but if the powers in the settlement are more restricted than the powers in the Act, then the Act says that the provisions of the Act or the powers given by the Act are cumulative, that is to say, that the powers in the Act so far as they give larger authority than is given by the trusts of the settlement may be exercised in the manner prescribed by the Act (PEARSON, J.).—Re NEWCASTLE'S (DUKE) ESTATES (1883), 24 Ch. A suit having been instituted for the administration of the estate, & the wife being dead, an order was made in the suit for sale of part of the estate by the trustees:—Held: the concurrence of the children constituting the tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), was not necessary upon the sale by the trustees; but even if such concurrence would be necessary the order of the

ct. was sufficient to enable the trustees to sell without joining the fourteen children or any of them in the conveyance to the purchaser.—TAYLOR v. PONCIA (1884), 25 Ch. D. 646; 53 L. J. Ch. 409; 50 L. T. 20, 32 W. R. 335.

a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), to require capital moneys to be laid out under a proper scheme, in improvements on the settled land, is paramount to the powers of the trustees of the settlement, notwithstanding an express power in the settlement under which, had they been so minded, they could have executed & paid for the improvements out of income; the position & power of the tenant for life is not affected in this case by the fact that there are no trustees of the settlement, & that the capital moneys are in ct. at the time the expenditure is required.—*CLARKE v. Without any scheme being submitted under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 26, money was expended in making improvements:—Held: as there was a trust, providing for improvements out of income, & trust came before the trust for K., the expenses must be borne by income.—*Re PARTINGTON, REIGH v. 2998. — Settled Land Acts & power in settlement—Power in settlement more advantageous—Power to lease.]—(1) The provisions of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 56 (2), are provisions connected with the execution of any power under the Act—e.g. the consent of a third person—and not with the results of such execution, & therefore where a tenant for life has a power of leasing under the settlement & also under the Act, & exercises the former & more advantageous power, the provisions of the Act will not override the provisions of the settlement under which the donee derives a greater benefit from the execution of the power than he would have done if he had exercised the power conferred upon him as tenant for life under Settled Land Act.

(2) When such a tenant for life grants the leases "in exercise of every power or authority enabling him," he will, in the absence of any contrary intention, be presumed to have exercised the power earlier in time & more favourable to himself.

(3) A power of leasing conferred by the settlement of each of several successive tenants for life "as & when he shall be entitled to the possession or the receipt of the rents & profits," is referable to the falling into possession of the several life interests, & not to the unincumbered beneficial enjoyment thereof, & is exercisable by the donee notwithstanding that he has aliened his life interest.—*LONSDALE (EARL) v. 3000. Settlement granting powers in addition to or in aid of statutory powers—What powers within such provision—Powers of permanent improvement—Duty of trustees.]—Under a deed of settlement the tenant for life was granted "in addition to & in aid" of his statutory powers special powers of sale, enfranchisement, exchange, & partition & power also "to apply any money to arise by or upon such sale, enfranchisement, exchange or partition . . . in or towards the permanent improvement as to him . . . shall seem advantageous" of the settled estates. There was also a provision in the settlement that capital moneys arising under Settled Land Acts might be applied upon improvements authorised by those Acts without any scheme being first approved by the trustees & without an order of the ct.:—Held: (1) the power to apply any money to arise under the special powers in permanent improvements as to the tenant for life seemed advantageous was not an "additional or larger" power within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 57, & was not therefore exercisable "in the like manner" as if conferred by the Act. It was a separate independent power differing entirely from the provisions as to improvements in the Act & not a mere extension of them. The trustees were accordingly bound to apply money arising under the special powers on such permanent improvements as to the tenant for life seemed advantageous without having a scheme submitted to them & without an order of the ct.

(2) Capital moneys arising under the Act of 1882 were by virtue of s. 21 (xi), of the Act also applicable under the above power upon permanent improvements without the need for a scheme or an order of the ct.—*Re WESTMINSTER'S (DUKE) SETTLED ESTATES, WESTMINSTER (DUKE) v. 3003. — Injury possible to existing incumbrancers by exercise—Protection of incumbrances—Non-statutory investment or application of capital moneys.]—By an 1888 settlement now only subsisting by virtue of jointures & a portion charged hereunder, additional powers in extension of the statutory powers were given to the person in whom Settled Land Act powers should for the time being be vested. By a 1914 resettlement other additional powers were given to the person for the time being entitled to exercise a life tenant's powers. Both sets of these additional powers might prejudicially affect the security of the jointures & portion, but it was expressly provided that no non-statutory investment or application of capital money under the additional powers of the 1914 resettlement should be made without the consent of the 1914 resettlement trustees. The life tenant of the 1914 resettlement, though never a life tenant under the 1888 settlement, claimed as life tenant of the compound settlement, consisting of those deeds & an intermediate deed of disentail, to exercise both sets of additional powers without any consent:—Held: the life tenant was entitled to exercise both sets of additional powers, they having become statutory powers under Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 109, & the jointresses & portioner being fully protected by the fact that the life tenant being a trustee for them under sect. 107 (1), could only exercise his powers fiduciarily & after notice to the compound settlement trustees under sect. 101 (1); but any non-statutory investment or application of capital money under the additional powers of the 1914 resettlement required the consent of the 1914 resettlement trustees.—Re COWLEY SETTLED ESTATES, [1926] Ch. 725; 95 L. 3013. Attempt by remainderman to restrain sale—Extra costs of tenant for life.—A tenant for life of an estate in strict settlement had power to cut certain timber & other trees, to sell the same & to apply the produce to his own use. In 1881 he contemplated a sale of the estate, but he was restrained from selling, either under the power in the will or under that contained in Settled Land Act, by an injunction granted in an action brought by persons entitled in remainder. In 1881 the action was dismissed with costs, & in 1885 the tenant for life sold the estate under conditions of sale which stated that the purchaser should in addition to the purchase-money pay for the timber according to a valuation. The tenant for life claimed to be paid the difference of his costs, as between party & party & solicitor & client, in the action which was dismissed:—Held: the tenant for life was entitled, in defending the action which was dismissed with costs, to be paid his extra costs of so much of the action as related to the exercise of the powers contained in Settled Land Act as incidental to the exercise of his power of sale under the provisions of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38).—*Re LLEWELLIN, LLEWELLIN v. 3033. Fees of surveyors consulted as to sufficiency of price offered—Sale by request of assignee of tenant for life.—A tenant for life assigned his life interest in settled estates to an insurance co., & it was provided that he should receive an annuity out of the estates, which annuity was to be forfeited if he refused or neglected to exercise his powers under Settled Land Acts when reasonably requested to do so by the co. He also covenanted not to exercise his powers as tenant for life without the co.'s consent, & to do all things reasonably required by them in relation to the exercise of his powers. On being requested by the co. to sell a part of the settled estate he consulted surveyors as to the sufficiency of the price offered, & claimed that their fees were payable out of capital moneys:—Held: (1) those fees were incurred by the tenant for life in relation to the proposed exercise of his power of sale & on account of his position as a trustee for all parties entitled under the settlement, & were payable out of capital moneys; (2) when the co. required the tenant for life to exercise his powers in the future he was entitled to obtain proper advice, but he was not entitled to initiate a scheme for the exercise of his powers, & if, when asked to exercise his powers, he was afforded, at the expense of the estate, reasonable information & advice, that fact would have an important bearing upon the question whether further costs were properly incurred by him.—*Re HOPE, TABLETON v. Compensation to secure vacant possession.—Settled land was about to be developed as a building estate, & as a necessary preliminary to carrying out the approved scheme of improvements authorised by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), it was essential to obtain vacant possession of a farm let to a yearly tenant, & forming an important part of the settled land in question. The tenancy was determined by notice & compensation was awarded to the tenant in respect of tenant right & improvements not coming within the First or Second Schedules to the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1908 (c. 28):—Held: neither under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 21 (iii) or (x), nor under s. 25 could payment of the compensation in question be allowed out of capital moneys in the hands of the trustees; & to allow such an expenditure out of capital moneys would be entirely inconsistent with the whole purpose & scheme of the Settled Land Acts.—Re DE LA WARR'S (EARL) COODEN BEACH SETTLED ESTATE, [1913] 1 Ch. 142; 82 L. 3035. Ascertainment & payment of duties.—Where a tenant for life of settled estates has made various sales & granted leases of parts of the settled estate, & incurred expenditure in the preparation of accounts, returns, & valuations necessary to enable the comrs. to assess the increment value duty payable on sales & the reversion duty payable on the determination of leases:—Held: the expenses incurred in the ascertainment & payment of duties so far as these expenses arose in respect of a transaction involving the exercise of any of the statutory powers conferred upon the limited owner, were expenses incidental to the exercise of these powers within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (x), & payable out of capital. Included in such cases would be the expenses incurred in respect of increment value duty, & of the reversion duty payable on the acceptance of a surrender of a lease; but in cases where reversion duty became payable on the determination of a lease by effluxion of time the expenses would not come within s. 2 (x), & if the tenant for life desired to throw them upon the settled land he must exercise his statutory power of charging for that purpose.—*Re MARYON-WILSON'S SETTLED ESTATES, MARYON-WILSON v. Series of instruments forming one settlement—Instruments exercising powers of appointment—Disentail & resettlement.—(1) By indentures of settlement dated respectively in 1796, 1826, 1863, & 1885, the A. family estates became limited in 1885 to the use of E., Marquis of A., for life, with remainder to uses (inter alia), to secure the payment of certain jointure rentcharges, & then to the use of the present Marquis of A. for life, with remainders over. The first jointure was created under powers contained in the indentures of 1796 & 1826; the last jointure by the indenture of 1863; while the existing life estate was created by the indenture of 1885. Upon a sale by the tenant for life under the powers of Settled Land Act:—Held: the whole series of deeds constituted a "settlement" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 20, & consequently by virtue of that sect. the tenant for life had power to convey the estates freed & discharged from the jointure rentcharges; the purchaser was not entitled to require the concurrence in the conveyance either of the jointresses or the trustees of the terms by which the jointures were secured; & upon payment of the purchase-money to trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Act of the settlement created by the series of instruments, the income of the investments of such purchase-money would be applicable first in payment of the jointure rentcharges, as the income of the estates, if not sold, would have been applicable.

(2) The Marquis of A. does not desire that the money should be paid into ct. & there are at present no trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Acts except those nominated by the deed of July 16, 1885. They are trustees only of the settlement created by that deed & are not trustees of the settlement made by the deeds of 1863 & 1885, still less of that made by a series of instruments beginning in 1796 & ending in 1885. 3037. ————.]—Testator by his will made in 1828 gave his real estate to his granddaughter for her life, with remainder to her first & other sons successively in tail male; & he empowered her, either before or after her marriage with any husband, by deed or will to appoint to such husband for his life, to take effect immediately after her decease, a yearly rentcharge not exceeding £600 to be charged on the devised property, with power to limit a term for securing the same; & also by deed or will to charge the property with portions for the younger children of the granddaughter to the extent of £10,000 with power to limit a term for the raising & securing of the portions. After the death of testator the granddaughter married three times. By the settlement made on her first marriage, she exercised the power of charging the estates with portions for younger children, & limited a term of one hundred years to trustees for the purpose. By the settlement made on her second marriage, she demised the property to trustees for ninety-nine years, if she should so long live, on trust out of the income to raise an annual sum of £1,500 for her benefit, & then to pay the premiums on some policies of assurance on her own life, which policies were thereby settled. She also charged the property with an annual rentcharge of £600 for the benefit of her second husband. By a settlement made after her third marriage she appointed a yearly rentcharge of £600 to her third husband during his life, if he should survive her, & limited to trustees a term of three hundred years from her own death to secure the rentcharge; & by the same deed she demised the property to trustees for ninety-nine years if she should so long live, upon trust out of the income to pay £1,500 a year to her, & then to pay the premiums on some policies of assurance & subject as aforesaid to permit her third husband, during the joint lives of himself & herself, to receive the income. In 1866, the entail created by the will was barred & the property was resettled to such uses as the third husband, the wife & her son by the first husband should appoint, & in default of appointment to the uses of testator's will. By a settlement made in 1871 on the marriage of the daughter of the granddaughter by her second husband, the third husband & his wife demised part of the settled property to trustees for one hundred years from the date of the daughter's marriage, if her mother should so long live, upon trust to raise out of the income two annual sums, to be held respectively on the trusts of a settlement of even date. In 1894 the ct. appointed two trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Act of the will of testator & the resettlement of 1866. The granddaughter & her third husband, as tenants for life, desired to sell part of the settled estates. The married daughter was still living:—Held: the will of original testator, the three settlements made by the granddaughter, the deed of resettlement & the settlement made on the marriage of the daughter, together constituted the settlement of the estates, & in order that the tenants for life might be able to exercise the powers conferred by Settled Land Act, trustees for the purposes of the Act must be appointed of that compound settlement. The trustees appointed in 1894 were accordingly so appointed.—Re TIBBITTS' SETTLED ESTATES, [1897] 2 Ch. 149; 66 L. J. Ch. 660; 77 L. T. 88; 46 W. R. 3; 41 Sol. Jo. 640.

E. by his will, dated in 1889, devised certain freehold estates to the use of his son S. for life & from & after the decease of S. to the use of his first & other sons successively, according to their respective seniorities, in tail male with remainders over, & he charged his settled estates with the payment of certain annuities, some of which were still subsisting. E. died in 1892. S., the tenant for life, died in 1912, & his eldest son, W., thereupon became tenant in tail in possession of the settled estates on Apr. 8, 1914. W. executed a disentailing deed, which was duly enrolled, limiting the settled estates to his own use in fee simple. On Apr. 17, 1914, he executed a resettlement on his marriage of a part of the estates originally settled by the will to the use of himself for life with remainders over:—Held: (3) W. having ceased to be tenant in tail of the estates not comprised in the resettlement, could no longer exercise the powers of a tenant for life in respect of them; (4) as regarded the estates comprised in the resettlement, by reason of the subsistence of the annuities there was a compound settlement consisting of the will, the disentailing deed, & the resettlement, although there was no term limited to secure them nor any trust for their payment.—Re TRAFFORD'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1915] 1 Ch. 9; 84 L. 3043. — Will creating original settlement—Disentail & conveyance on trust to sell—Intervening disentailing deed & resettlement.—A tenant for life to whom under a resettlement a life estate is limited in restoration of his life estate under a preceding will, is for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), a tenant for life under the original will ; & as such can by virtue of sect. 22 (2) of the Act exercise not only the powers conferred upon him as tenant for life under the will but also any additional powers conferred on a tenant for life by the resettlement. 3045. — Settlements of several estates—First instrument the same in each case.—S., by his will, made in 1873, settled his freehold lands in the county of S., hereinafter called the S. estates, to the use of J. for life, with remainder to such uses for the benefit of the children or remoter issue of J. as F. should by deed or deeds or by will appoint, with remainders over in default of appointment.

Testator died in 1878, & about the year 1910 freehold lands at R., hereinafter called the R. estate, were purchased out of proceeds of sale of parts of the S. estates. The R. estate together with the remaining unsold parts of the S. estates & the capital moneys settled by the will of S. were appointed by J. in exercise of his power, as follows : (a) by deed dated Feb. 25, 1924, the R. estate was appointed to the use of his son B. for life, with remainders to B.'s sons & daughters in tail, with remainders over, which did not exhaust the fee simple ; (b) by a codicil to his will, dated May 8, 1924, the property then remaining unappointed which comprised the parts of the S. estates then remaining unsold & capital moneys were appointed upon limitations identical with those upon which the R. estate was settled by the deed of Feb. 25, 1924. The whole of the R. estate & parts of the S. estates settled by the codicil & specific parts of the capital moneys had, before those appointments, been charged under a deed dated June 23, 1913, by J. in exercise of his power of appointment, with a sum of £10,000 in favour of his daughter, & had by the same deed been demised to trustees for a term of years to secure that sum :—Held : (1) each of the estates was settled by a compound settlement consisting, in the case of the R. estate, of the will of S. & the deed of appointment of Feb. 25, 1924, & in the case of the S. estates of the will of S., & the codicil of J. notwithstanding that the first instrument in each case was the same ; (2) the trustees of the will of S., who were trustees of the settlement thereunder for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), were by virtue of s. 31 of that Act, trustees for those purposes of each of the compound settlements ; (3) by force of s. 91 (1) (ii), as " trustees of the settlement of the aggregate estate for all the purposes of the Act," they had power, at the direction of B., the tenant for life, to discharge the £10,000, which was charged upon the whole of the R. estate & on part of the S. estate out of capital moneys, whether already charged or not, in exoneration of those estates ; (4) no order of the ct. was required, because both settlements were without the provisions of s. 91 (2), the lands comprised in neither settlement being subject to a charge to which the lands in the other settlement were not subject ; (5) the transaction being one which was " otherwise authorised by the Act," no order of the ct. was required under s. 64 of the Act ; (6) the trustees of the compound settlements were the proper persons to execute vesting deeds in favour of B., the tenant for life, of the settled lands respectively comprised in those settlements.—*Re SYMONS, SYMONS-JEUNE v. 3046. — Effect of trust for sale—Under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18), sched. I.—Three vendors to whom land had been conveyed in 1924 in fee simple as tenants in common subject to but with an indemnity against a jointure rentcharge, charged thereon & on other lands in 1869, contracted in 1926 to sell the same land subject to the rentcharge but with the benefit of the indemnity, & proposed to convey the same as being the persons in whom the land " not being settled land " had vested as joint tenants upon the statutory trusts by virtue of the transitional provisions of para. 1 (2) of Part IV., sched. I., of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18).

The purchaser took the objection that by reason of the rentcharge the land became settled land on Jan. 1, 1926, within sect. 1 (1) (v) of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), & that para. 1 (3), & not para. 1 (2) of Part IV., sched. I., of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18), applied, & that the land was vested, not in the vendors, but in the other persons or person specified in para. 1 (3) :—Held : (1) in sched. I., Part IV., of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18), para. 1 (2), & para. 1 (3) constituted alternative provisions, the former applying to land which was not, & the latter to land which was, settled land under the law existing previously to the commencement of the Act ; (2) inasmuch as the rights of the jointress were undisturbed by the sale, she was not a person interested in the land within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 35, whose incumbrance would attach to the net proceeds of sale, & the vendors, therefore, were not bound to exercise the statutory powers of a tenant for life vested in them by sect. 28 of the same Act so as to convey free from the rentcharge, even if they could do so as trustees of a compound settlement, which was doubtful, & that even if the land were held from & after Jan. 1, 1926, under a compound settlement, they could, in the circumstances of this case, convey subject to the rentcharge by virtue of Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926 (c. 11), s. 1; (3) the land in question, "not being settled land," vested by virtue of para. 1 (2) of Part IV. of sched. I. of Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), in the vendors as joint tenants upon the statutory trusts, & they had shown a good title according to the contract.

There was one younger child only, & he was an infant on Jan. 1, 1926. A.'s elder son B. disentailed in 1924, & two further deeds were executed in that year. By one, A. & B. & A.'s wife, notwithstanding her restraint on anticipation & the trustees of the portions term, who had no power to release their term, conveyed the land to trustees on trust at A.'s request to sell the same. The trusts of the proceeds of sale were declared by a second deed, the income being payable during A.'s life in each year, as to the first £500 to A., as to the surplus up to a specified sum to B., & as to the balance to A. Testator died in 1891, & by her will his widow appointed G. her sole exor., & in exercise of her power of appointment appointed the real estate devised by her husband's will to the use of G. for life with remainder to the use of his first & every other son successively in tail male, with remainders over. Testatrix died in 1892. In 1912 G., in exercise of his powers as tenant for life in possession, contracted to sell part of the settled estate. The purchaser objected that, there being no trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Acts, the vendor could not make a good title:—Held: the general power of appointment having been fully exercised by the widow, there was a resettlement of the estate, & there being no existing interests or charges having priority over that resettlement, the original settlement created by testator's will was at an end, & consequently there were no trustees having a power of sale, & trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Acts of the widow's will must be appointed.—Re GORDON & ADAMS' CONTRACT, Re PRITCHARD'S SETTLED ESTATE, [1914] 1 Ch. 110; 83 L. In 1872 A. upon his marriage & in exercise of a power given by the will by deed charged the lands with a jointure in favour of his wife. He also created mtges. on his life estate. In 1895 A. & his only son by a disentailing assurance conveyed the lands to such uses as A. & his son should by deed jointly appoint; & by a deed of even date they appointed the lands to the use of A. for life "in restoration & continuation of his former life estate under the will," with remainder to the son in fee simple, & by this deed trustees were appointed for the purposes of Settled Land Acts. A., as tenant for life under the resettlement of 1895, contracted to sell part of the lands, the jointress & mtgees. being willing to concur & release their interests in the conveyance to the purchaser:—Held: A.'s life estate under the will was still subsisting; the will, jointure deed, disentailing assurance, & resettlement together constituted one compound settlement of which there were no trustees for the purposes of the Settled Land Acts, & therefore A. could not make a good title.

It seems clear that the settlement within the meaning of the Settled Land Acts—the only settlement in short under which the vendor is able to exercise his statutory power of sale—must be the compound settlement (FARWELL, J.).—Re CORNWALLIS-WEST & MUNRO'S CONTRACT, [1903] 2 Ch.

In 1895 G., under powers in the will, appointed a jointure to his wife & portions for his younger children. In July, 1912, G. & C. disentailed the estate by a deed by which it was conveyed, subject to charges & incumbrances & to G.'s life estate to such uses as G. & C. should jointly appoint, & in default of appointment to the uses & upon the trusts of the will. In Oct. 1912, a deed of resettlement was executed by G., C., & the trustees, by which the property was appointed & conveyed, subject to the mtges. on the inheritance & the same jointure & portions, to such uses & subject to such powers & provisions as G. & C. should jointly appoint, & subject to any such appointment to the use of G. for life "in restoration & by way of confirmation of" his life estate under the will & all powers of jointuring & charging portions & all other statutory powers annexed to or exercisable during the continuance of that life estate, & so that they might be exercisable with the same overreaching effect as if the disentailing deed & the deed of appointment had not been executed, with remainder to the use of C. for life with remainder to the use of his sons successively in tail male. This deed also declared that the persons or person who should for the time being be constituted or be the tenant for life of the settlement under Settled Land Acts might exercise over the settled lands certain specified powers by way of extension or enlargement of the powers & provisions of those Acts as if conferred thereby, the facts being admittedly indistinguishable from those in Re Cornwallis-West & Munro's Contract, No. 3054, ante:—Held: (1) G. was tenant for life under the resettlement of the property thereby settled, & as such could exercise over that property the powers by Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890, & by the resettlement conferred on a person for the time being tenant for life within the meaning of those Acts.

(2) The object of inserting the clause containing the words "in restoration & by way of confirmation" of a previous life estate was to keep alive the powers incident to the estate & conferred on the tenant for life by the original instrument. Such a clause showed an intention to keep alive the old powers, but was ineffectual to restore the original life estate when the operative words of the deed were sufficient to pass it. Alexander v. Mills, No. 2396, ante, showed that it was unnecessary to restore the old life estate in order to keep alive the powers. If & so far as Re Cornwallis-West & Munro's Contract, No. 3054, ante, determined that the vendor in that case was tenant for life under the will & not under the resettlement, & that he could not, as tenant for life under the resettlement with concurrence of the jointress & mtgees. joining to release their interests, convey the property in fee to a purchaser, that decision was erroneous.—Re CONSTABLE'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1919] 1 Ch. 178; 88 L. 3063. Whether compound settlement effected—Will & deed—Limitations almost identical.]—Land was devised by will on limitations in strict settlement. Testator also by a deed declared that the trustees, to whom he had transferred a money fund, should hold it on trust to lay it out in the purchase of land, which was to be settled on limitations identical with those of the will, except that two terms of years were interposed. The trusts of these two terms had become satisfied. The powers conferred by the two instruments were not precisely the same. The same persons were trustees of both the will & the deed. Upon the application of the tenant for life in possession under both instruments:—Held: although the limitations of the one instrument were not declared by reference to those of the other, but each set of limitations was stated independently, the principle of Re Mundy's Settled Estates, [1891] 1 Ch. 399, applied, & the will & the deed constituted one compound settlement, so that capital money arising under the deed could be applied in paying the cost of improvements executed upon land devised by the will.—Re BYNG'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1892] 2 Ch. 219; 61 L. 3070. Expression includes vesting deeds—Different parcels of settled land in separate deeds.]—Interpretation Act, 1889 (c. 63), s. 1, provides that in every Act passed after 1850, unless the contrary intention appears, words in the singular shall include the plural. As no contrary intention appears in Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), the expression “vesting deed” includes vesting deeds, & therefore, in the case of a settlement subsisting at the date of the commencement of the Act, it is not necessary that the whole of the settled land should be comprised in one single principal vesting deed. Different parcels of the settled land may be comprised in separate principal vesting deeds. No vesting deed is required in respect of capital moneys subsisting at the date of the commencement of the Act. The Act only contemplates a vesting deed in respect of land, & capital moneys are not land within the Act.—Re CLAYTON'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1926] Ch. 279; 95 L. J. Ch. 169; 134 L. T. 568; 70 Sol. Jan. 1, 1926, when the new property legislation came into force, he automatically became estate owner, holding the legal fee simple in trust for himself as equitable tenant in tail with remainders over, but still without any overriding trusts or incumbrances:—Held: if he barred his equitable entail, & so put an end to the settlement, he could make a valid disposition of the property as absolute legal owner in fee simple, without first obtaining a vesting deed pursuant to Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), s. 13, which sect., having regard to sect. 112, sub-sect. 2, applies only to dispositions under that Act.—Re ALEFOUNDER'S WILL TRUSTS, *ADNAMS v. Sale at undervalue—Whether sufficient by itself to invalidate sale.]—In the case of a sale by a tenant for life under Settled Land Act, the mere fact that the purchaser has acquired the property at an undervalue is not, by itself, sufficient to invalidate the sale. If he has acted in good faith he is protected by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 54, & he is not bound to inquire whether the tenant for life or the trustees have had the property valued.

The tenant for life of a freehold public-house which was let to a firm of brewers at a rent of £63 for a term of which there were twelve years to run, sold the property, subject to the lease, for £2,000. Immediately after the sale the purchaser contracted to resell the property for £3,000 to the brewers, to whom it had previously been offered for £2,750, but in vain. The remainderman brought an action to set aside the sale on the ground that the best price had not been obtained. 3080. Existing trustees of settlement—With power of sale—Power to vary investments.—By settlement (a), executed upon the marriage of A. & B., it was declared that the trustees C. & M. should stand possessed of money upon trust that they & the survivor of them, his exors., administrators, & assigns, should continue the money on the present investments, or with the consent in writing of A. & B. or the survivor, & after the death of the survivor then of the proper authority of such trustees or trustee, to sell & transfer the securities & lay out & invest the proceeds, with power from time to time with such consent as aforesaid to vary the securities. All after-acquired property, both real & personal, to be assured & settled upon the same trusts, etc., as the principal sum. Power to appoint new trustees, & to maintain, enlarge, or diminish the original number; ever new trustee to have the power, etc., of the trustee in whose place he was appointed. By settlement (b), executed upon the marriage of C. & D., the sister of B., it was declared that the trustees M. & N. should stand possessed of money upon trust to continue same upon its then present security, or with the consent in writing of C. & D. or the survivor, & after the death of the survivor, of the proper authority of such trustees or trustee, to call in the principal money & again lay out same in their or his names or name upon the securities therein mentioned, with power for the trustees or trustee for the time being with such consent or at such discretion as aforesaid to alter, vary, & transpose the stocks, funds, or investments to be from time to time made under the authority of the aforesaid power in any other stocks, etc., of the nature or description contemplated by the trust for investment. Covenant to settle after-acquired property similar in terms to that in settlement (a). M. had died, & three new trustees of settlement (a) had been appointed by A. & B. N. was the sole present trustee of settlement (b). Real estate had descended during their coverture upon B. & D. as coheireses in undivided moieties. A contract for the sale of this real estate having been entered into by A. & B. & C. & D. as vendors. Upon summons under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1871 (c. 78):—Held: under the express power contained in settlement (a), & the implied power in settlement (b), the existing trustees of both settlements had full power within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (8), to act as trustees under the Act, & it was not necessary to apply to the ct. under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 38, for the appointment of new trustees for the purposes of the Act.

In the second settlement there is only one trustee surviving, but power is given to the trustees or trustee to act, & to receive & give receipts for capital given to him by the settlement. I cannot doubt, therefore, that this surviving trustee comes within the exception to Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 39 (1) . . . & the exception to sect. 45 (2) (BACON, V.-C.).—Re GARNETT ORME & HARGREAVES' CONTRACT (1883), 25 Ch. The purchasers objected to the title on the ground that the trustees were not trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Acts: Held: the word "securities" in this settlement meant anything to be purchased under the power, & having regard to the power, to vary & transfer the "securities," the trustees had power to sell the ground rents, & were consequently trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Acts.—Re TAPP & LONDON & INDIA DOCKS CO.'S CONTRACT (1905), 71 L. The settlement in question was a compound settlement created by several instruments, some of which, including a will made in 1836, were dated or made prior to the time fixed for the commencement of title, & the last of which was a resettlement made in 1902. The vendor had, however, voluntarily furnished an abstract of all the earlier documents constituting the compound settlement except the will of 1836, which was recited in one of these documents dated in 1860. The compound settlement originally comprised land in Ireland alone, & by an order of the High Ct. of Justice in Ireland, made in 1908, the present trustees were appointed trustees of the compound settlement for the purposes of Settled Land Acts. In 1910 the land in England, the subject of the contract, was conveyed to the trustees & their heirs to the uses, upon the trusts, & subject to the powers, charges, & provisions to, upon, & subject to which under the compound settlement the freehold lands therein comprised stood limited. The conveyance contained a statement to the effect that the purchase was made at the direction of the tenant for life out of capital moneys in the hands of the trustees arising under the compound settlement:—Held: under the order of the Ct. in Ireland the trustees were in the position of trustees of the settlement for the purposes of Settled Land Acts in relation to the subsequently acquired land in England without being reappointed by the Ct. in England.—Re ARRAN (EARL) & KNOWLESDEN & CREEK'S CONTRACT, [1912] 2 Ch. 141; 81 L. Solicitor to tenant for life.]—J., by his will, devised an estate to trustees upon trust to receive & pay the rents to his grandson for life, & after his decease to sell & to stand possessed of the moneys for all the grandson's children. The tenant for life was upwards of seventy years of age, & a widower. He had one child only, a daughter, & she & her husband in July, 1880, contracted to sell her reversion in the estate to pltf. Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), came into operation in Jan. 1883, & the tenant for life at the end of that month advertised the estate for sale under the powers of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38). Pltf. brought an action for an injunction to restrain the tenant for life from selling; & to restrain the other defts., devisees of the legal estate under the will of the survivor of trustees of J.'s will appointed by the ct., from executing any assurance of the estate, & on motion for that purpose:—Held: (1) the tenant for life had power under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), to sell the fee simple & inheritance of the property if he should comply with the provisions of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38); (2) there were no trustees to whom he could, under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 45, give notice; & an injunction was granted to restrain him from selling until trustees had been properly appointed for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38); (3) pltf. was entitled to be served with any summons for the appointment of new trustees, & pltf. objecting, defts. solr. ought not to be appointed. —*WHEELWRIGHT v. The settlement contained a power of sale exercisable by the trustees with the consent of the tenant for life. All the trustees were dead, & the power of appointing new trustees was vested by the settlement in the heir of the last surviving trustee, who could not be found. All the cestuis que trust presented a petition asking for the appointment as trustees of three persons, of whom two were resident in America & had been acting as trustees of the settlement under an invalid appointment, & the third, L., who was in this country, had collected the rents as their agent at a remuneration, the continuance of which the ct. was asked to authorise. No other persons could be found to act as trustees, & L. would not act without remuneration:—Held: under the circumstances the three proposed trustees might be appointed & the remuneration allowed, subject, however, to the production by L. of evidence as to the number & nature of the tenancies & the propriety of the proposed remuneration, & to an undertaking by the trustees who were out of the jurisdiction that in case of the death of L. they would not appoint any one out of the jurisdiction without the leave of the ct.—Re FREEMAN'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1887), 37 Ch. This is the case, notwithstanding the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal, Re Constable's Settled Estates, No. 3055, ante, that words in a deed purporting to restore a life estate thereby or previously parted with are themselves ineffectual actually to give back to the tenant for life the very same estate he originally had.

Inasmuch as, under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 50, the powers under that Act of a tenant for life are not capable of assignment or release, & remain exercisable by him notwithstanding any assignment of his life estate, it follows that in the above case the original "settlement," as defined in that Act, is not brought to an end by the tenant for life so conveying away his life estate, but continues to subsist so long as the powers given by the Act to the tenant for life under that settlement remain exercisable, notwithstanding that no portion charged under that settlement may remain

By deed poll C., on his marriage, exercised that power & appointed that the settled land should upon his death remain to the use of the trustees of the settlement during the life of his wife upon trust to pay the rents & profits thereof to her. The appointor died in 1897, & his widow & his eldest son, the first tenant in tail, joined in disentailing the settled land & conveyed the same to uses for raising certain charges, & subject thereto, to the use of the settlement trustees during the life of the widow in restoration of the estate limited to them by the deed of appointment, with all powers annexed to such estate or vested in them or the widow during the continuance thereof, with remainder to the eldest son in fee simple. On the sale of part of the settled land by the widow, as tenant for life under Settled Land Acts, the purchasers raised an objection to the title on the ground that there were no trustees for the purposes of those Acts of the compound settlement consisting of all three deeds, or at any rate of the settlement created by the original settlement & the deed of appointment.—Held: the land stood limited in trust for persons by way of succession under or by virtue of a deed, namely, the settlement of Sept. 5, 1892, within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1); & as there existed trustees of that settlement for the purposes of Settled Land Acts, it was not necessary to have trustees for those purposes of either of the compound settlements aforesaid, & consequently, the purchasers' objection to the title failed.—Re CURWEN & FRAMES' CONTRACT, [1924] 1 Ch. 581; 93 L. The resettlement deed contained a declaration that the trustees of it should be trustees of the compound settlement for the purposes of Settled Land Acts. A jointress & portioners, whose interests arose under the settlement of 1863 & were outstanding, were not parties to the re-

(2) The trustees purported to be appointed were the existing trustees of the original settlement, one being the tenant for life's solr. The ct., being asked to appoint trustees of the compound settlement, declined to appoint the tenant for life's solr. to be one, in accordance with the ordinary rule that it will not, in the absence of special reason, appoint the tenant for life's solr. to be a trustee of the settlement.—Re SPENCER'S SETTLED ESTATES, [1903] 1 Ch. 75; 88 L. In the midst of & surrounded by the estate & near to the mansion house there was a smaller property which belonged to other persons. The tenant for life under the will purchased this property for £7,800, & having mortgaged it for £7,000, himself providing the balance, he by deed in 1904 settled it on the subsisting uses of the will, but subject to the mtge. & to repayment to himself of his costs, charges, & expenses arising out of the transaction. It was proved that the acquisition of this additional property was most desirable & beneficial. Neither in the will nor in the deed of 1904 was any general power of sale conferred on the trustees of those instruments, but the deed contained a proviso that the trustees thereof should have power, by sale or mtge. of the property thereby assured, to raise the amount of the costs, charges, & expenses above referred to. The tenant for life applied to the ct. for its sanction to his raising the amount of the incumbrance & costs, charges, & expenses by a mtge. of the entirety of the estate, & that the trustees of the deed of 1904 might be appointed trustees for the purposes of Settled Land Acts of the settlement created by the will & the deed of 1904.—Held: (1) the trustees of the deed of 1904 ought to be appointed trustees of the compound settlement for the purposes of Settled Land Acts, as otherwise there would be no one to whom notice could be properly & adequately given under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 45 (1); (2) the proviso contained in the deed of 1904 had not the effect of making the

3140. — What amounts to incumbrance—Right of pre-emption.]—Testator who died in 1920 gave his property to trustees, & settled the entirety upon trusts for various beneficiaries in undivided shares. He empowered the trustees at any time to sell any part of his estate, subject to a right of pre-emption thereby given to his son A. over property B. at a price to be fixed by the trustees' valuer before sale. On Jan. 1, 1926, the land vested in the trustees on the statutory trusts for sale, etc., under Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 1 (3), sched. I., Part IV.:—Held: (1) on the construction of the will, the right of pre-emption was only intended to attach to an exercise of the power of sale under the will, & not to a sale under the statutory trusts or any other extraneous powers; (2) even if the right of pre-emption was intended to attach to any sale whatever by the trustees, it was not enforceable against the statutory trusts of s. 35 either as an "equitable interest or power" within sect. 3 & sect. 205 (1) (1c); or as an "additional or larger power" conferred by the will on the trustees within sect. 28, sub-sect. 1, as amended by the 1926 Act Schedule; or as an "incumbrance" within Sched. I., Part IV., sect. 1, sub-sect. 9; the trustees on executing the statutory trusts could disregard the right of pre-emption.—Re FLINT, FLINT v. FLINT, [1927] 1 Ch. 570; 96 L. J. Ch. 248; 137 L. 3141. — Annuity.]—(1) By his will, dated Nov. 13, 1909, testator directed that from & after the death of his wife his trustees should stand possessed of certain hereditaments, which he described as the share of his daughter E., upon trust to pay to her husband an annuity of £500 for life, which in certain events might be determined, & he empowered the husband by will or codicil to charge the share with the payment of any sum not exceeding £10,000 for the benefit of one or more of the issue of his daughter, & directed his trustees to raise the money by a sale or mtge. of the share & hold it in trust for the person or persons entitled. Subject as aforesaid, the trustees were to stand possessed of the share & the net income thereof in trust, in the events that happened, for the children of E. in equal shares. Testator died in 1910, his wife in 1911, & E. before the date of the will, leaving a husband surviving. E. had four children who all survived testator & attained vested interests. The trustees, who were also exors., were given no power of sale by the will & were not trustees of the will for the purposes of Settled Land Acts, 1882 to 1890. Testator declared that any exor. or trustee of his will who was a solr., or a person engaged in any profession or business, might individually, or through his firm, act in the course of his profession or business on behalf of the exors. & trustees, & charge for so doing:—Held: immediately before Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), came into operation the legal estate in E.'s share was vested in the trustees of the will, & subject to the annuity of £500 & the power to charge, the land was held in four undivided shares vested in possession. The case therefore fell within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), sched. I., Part IV., para. 1, subpara 1, & the land was vested in the trustees upon the statutory trusts, the incumbrances being divested under para. 1 (1) (a). The annuity was an incumbrance within Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 205 (1) (vii), & the consent of the annuitant to any sale would have to be obtained under para. 1 (9) of Part IV. The power to charge, which might never be exercised, was not an incumbrance. If & when exercised it would operate on the proceeds of sale in the hands of the trustees.

(2) Any exor. or trustee of the will who was a solr. or a person engaged in a profession or business was entitled under the will to charge for work or business done in the execution of the statutory trusts, because such work or business would be done on behalf of the exors. & trustees.—*Re PEDLEY, WALLACE v. 3144. Application of Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926 (c. 11), sched.—Limitations subsisting before commencement of Act to be regarded—Not subsequent dealings or devolution.]—By the Schedule to Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926 (c. 11), the following paragraph was added to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), sched. I., Part IV.: "Where, immediately before the commencement of this Act, there are two or more tenants for life of full age entitled under the same settlement in undivided shares, & after the cesser of all their interests in the income of the settled land, the entirety of the land is limited so as to devolve together, not in undivided shares, their interests shall, but without prejudice to any beneficial interest, be converted into a joint tenancy, & the joint tenants & the survivor of them shall, until the said cesser occurs, constitute the tenant for life for the purposes of Settled Land Act, 1925 (c. 18), & this Act":—Held: (1) in ascertaining whether the paragraph applies, regard must be had to the limitations of the settlement subsisting immediately before the commencement of the Act but not to any dealing with or devolution of the interest of any person taking under the limitations of the settlement; (2) the paragraph only applies where the interest of the tenants for life are followed by a vested indefeasible limitation not in undivided shares.

Where testator by his will gave his residuary real estate to trustees upon trusts under which the property was immediately before Jan. 1, 1926, held upon trust for two persons during their lives in undivided shares & subject thereto upon such trusts for the benefit of testator's sons & grandsons as L. should by deed or will appoint & in default of and subject to any such appointment in trust for testator's heir:—Held: the paragraph did not apply, but the property was vested in the trustees of the will upon the statutory trusts pursuant to Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18), sched. I., Part IV., para. 1 (3).—Re COLYER'S FARNINGHAM ESTATE, [1927] 1 Ch. 677; 96 L. J. Ch. 348; 137 L. T. 413; 71 Sol. Jo. 351.

in 1922, his trustees should receive the whole income arising from his trust estate, & should divide the same equally between all his children & the child or children of any child who might be dead, such child or children taking between them the share their deceased parent would have been entitled to if living; & when & so soon as all his children should be dead except two, his trustees should sell & convert all his trust estate, & divide the proceeds equally between his two surviving children & the child or children of deceased sons & daughters, such last-mentioned children, if more than one, to take equally between them one equal share of the proceeds of sale. On Dec. 31, 1925, the property was held upon trust to divide the income arising therefrom amongst ten children, seven grandchildren, & the legal personal representative of a deceased grandchild of testator:—Held: the entirety of the land being settled land held under one & the same settlement in equity in undivided shares, the property was vested in the trustees of the will of W. in fee simple upon the statutory trusts referred to in the Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 18), sched. I., Part IV., para. 1 (3), & it was not affected by para. 4, added to Part IV., of sched. I. to the Act of 1925, by the Schedule to Law of Property (Amendment) Act, 1926 (c. 11).

In my opinion, land settled upon trust for sale & division of the proceeds cannot by any stress of imagination be described with accuracy as land so limited as to devolve or descend—for that, I take it, is what is meant by the word “devolve”—as an undivided whole (EVE, J.).—Re Higgs' & MAY'S CONTRACT, [1927] 2 Ch. 219; 96 L. 3147. Appointment of new trustees—Land vested in Public Trustee—Who may appoint—Trustees for sale.—Where land was held in four equal undivided shares, the owner of one share & the trustees for sale of the three remaining shares appointed new trustees in the place of the Public Trustee:—Held: the trustees for sale were “persons interested in more than an undivided half of the land or the income thereof,” & the appointment of new trustees was valid.—Re CLIFF CONTRACT, [1927] 2 Ch. 94; 96 L. 3152. Validity—Settlement on trusts of will—Trust in default of appointment void.—All testator's children had executed a settlement reciting that the trust in default of appointment was void, & declaring that the son's shares should be held on the trusts of the will:—Held: this was a valid resettlement, by the sons on themselves until bkpcy., & their children at twenty-five.—Re SPRAGUE, MILEY v. CAPE (1880), 43 L. T. 236.

3153. — Effect of failure to understand nature of instrument.—Pltf. was entitled to a settled estate as tenant in tail male in remainder, subject to two preceding life interests of his aunt, the protector of the settlement, & his mother.

Pltf. attained twenty-one on Dec. 10, 1878, & shortly after that date it was thought by his mother very desirable & important that some resettlement of the estate should be made. Accordingly he executed two deeds, both dated Jan. 2, 1879, to which the protector of the settlement was a party, one being the usual disentailing deed & the other a resettlement. The estate was thereby relimited to the use of pltf. for life, with remainder to uses in favour of the issue of pltf., & in default of issue, then in favour of his cousins, children of the protector of the settlement, as tenants in common, with ultimate remainder to pltf. in fee.

An action was brought by pltf. claiming to have the resettlement cancelled & set aside or modified in effect.

The question was whether pltf. had been made sufficiently aware of the nature & effect of the deed, & had had the proper amount of independent advice which is necessary, in order that such a resettlement, executed by a person who has just attained his majority, should be upheld.

The pltf. admitted in his evidence he understood that by the deed he was giving his property to his cousins in the event of his death without issue; but he stated that he did not understand, & it was not explained to him, that the deed was an irrevocable instrument, & he believed that it was something in the nature of a will which he supposed it was his duty to execute upon attaining twenty-one. He had a short time previously executed a disentailing deed, & made a will in favour of his cousins in reference to another estate belonging to him.

On the other hand, the evidence of defts. went to show that pltf. understood generally what he was executing, but that he declined an offer made by his legal adviser to have the deed read over to him, on the ground that he should not understand it if it was read. It did not appear that pltf.'s attention had been specifically called in detail to the nature & effect of the several clauses of the deed:—Held: as pltf. had an accurate general knowledge of what he was doing, & only refused to receive a detailed explanation of the provisions of the deed because he trusted his solr. to look into those details on his behalf, he was as much bound as if he were himself a lawyer, & had drawn the deed with his own hand.—LOVELL v. WALLIS (No. 2) (1884), 50 L. T. 681.

Annotation:—Reid, Bonhote v. Henderson, [1895] 1 Ch. 742.

3154. — Effect of misrepresentation—To heir in tail.—The House of Lords set aside deeds & documents by which the entailed estates of M. & R. were disentailed & resettled on the ground that the heir in entail had been induced to enter into the transactions by representations inconsistent with the facts made to him, not fraudulently nor with intent to deceive by his father's legal adviser.—MENZIES v. MENZIES (1893), 9 T. L. R. 347, H. L.

3155. — Re-settlement under power in will—In favour of infant.—Testator by his will settled a legacy of £50,000 upon usual trusts for A., his wife & issue, & declared that if no issue of A. should attain a vested interest then the legacy should fall into & form part of his, testator's, residuary estate, & testator empowered the trustees on A.'s marriage & with his consent to revoke the trusts & to resetttle the legacy upon such trusts for the benefit of A., his wife & issue, & with such powers & provisions as the trustees should deem proper. By a codicil testator bequeathed a sum of £50,000 to his trustees to be held by them upon the trusts & with powers for the benefit of B., her husband & issue, similar to those for the benefit of A., his wife & issue, declared in his will concerning the £50,000 thereby settled, except that no part of the capital was to be paid or advanced to or for the benefit of B.

Both A. & B. were infants at the date of the will. After the death of testator B. married, being still an infant, & by a deed executed in contemplation of her marriage the trustees with her consent & in exercise of the power conferred on them by the will & codicil revoked the trusts of her legacy & resettled the same upon trusts for her benefit, & her husband & issue, which varied somewhat from those declared in the will; in particular the ultimate trust in default of her issue was for her absolutely. On the question whether the resettlement was valid having regard to the fact that B. was an infant:—Held: (1) upon the true construction of the will & codicil testator intended to confer a power on B. during her minority to consent to an exercise by the trustees of their power of revocation & resettlement, & he could lawfully confer such a power upon her; (2) the ultimate trust in the resettlement, in default of B.'s issue for B. absolutely, was prohibited by the codicil, & therefore not authorised by the power to resetttle.—Re SUTTON, BOSCAWEN v. WYNDHAM, [1921] 1 Ch. 257; 90 L. J. Ch. 71; 124 L. T. 526; 65 Sol. Jo. 155.

3156. On charge created by settlement — In favour of volunteer.—Three powers by settlement, first to husband & wife jointly to raise & appoint £3,000, secondly to husband alone to raise & appoint £2,000, thirdly to survivor to raise & appoint such sum as would with the sum before raised make £5,000. The wife joining in raising £3,000, under the joint power for the husband, he covenanted not to charge by the power reserved to him alone or any other power whatsoever during her life, & so long as said £3,000 should remain unpaid, without her consent. After her death he by deed poll did charge with £2,000 more, to be paid to his exors. for debts, etc., & otherwise in performance of his will, or as he should appoint by it; & died, leaving his second wife extrix., without taking notice by his will of the charge: but the deed poll was found uncanceled among his papers: the £2,000 well charged, & went to the extrix. without a special appointment. Charge well created by settlement, though for a volunteer, not revoked by general revocation of the uses under a power for the mere purpose of partition of joint estate, & resettling to the same uses the separate part to be taken on partition.—*UXBRIDGE (EARL) v. 3157. On powers in original settlement—Whether extinguished—Power of sale—Where new powers created.—Lands were settled, subject to a power of sale in trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life. A recovery was afterwards suffered, in which the tenant in tail under the settlement was vouched, & by the recovery deed it was agreed that the recovery should enure in confirmation of the estates created by the settlement, which were antecedent to the estate tail, & in confirmation of the powers annexed to those estates, & subject thereto, to such uses as the tenant for life & tenant in tail should appoint. The tenant for life & tenant in tail afterwards exercised their power of appointment, & the trustees concurred with them in a conveyance of the lands, & they thereby created new powers of sale:—Held: the power of sale in the original settlement was not destroyed.—*ROPER v. The Crown claimed that on A.'s death his own estate & the settled property fell to be aggregated under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 4, so as to form one estate for the purposes of estate duty. Defts. contended that the settled property passed on the death of A., not under the resettlement, but under the will of testator, who died before Aug. 1, 1894, & that by virtue of s. 12, sub-s. 2 of the Finance Act, 1900 (c. 7), s. 12 (2), & Finance Act, 1907 (c. 13), s. 16, the settled property did not fall to be aggregated with A.'s own estate, but was liable to estate duty as an estate by itself:—Held: (1) the life estate devised to the use of A. for life by the will of testator was not disturbed by the resettlement; but the settled estate passed on the death of A. under the resettlement, & therefore A.'s free estate, & the settled estate of which he was tenant for life fell to be aggregated.—*PARR v. 3170. ——— Tenancy in tail—Right to rent-charge.]—By his will dated June 16, 1910, testator settled the B. estates to the same uses as were limited by a settlement of July 21, 1893, of other estates under which they stood limited at testator's death to the use of his daughter V. in tail male with remainder to her sister F. in tail male with divers remainders over. He also devised other property to the use that his trustees should receive a rent-charge "during such period or periods continuous or discontinuous" as either of them, the said V. &

F., "shall be tenant for life in possession or tenant in tail male or in tail in possession under this my will" of the B. estates & pay the same to such one of them, the said V. & F., "as shall for the time being be tenant for life in possession or tenant in tail male or in tail in possession under this my will" of the B. estates. By a disentailing assurance dated July 22, 1918, V. disentailed the B. estates & resettled them to such uses as she should appoint or in default of & until & subject to any such appointment to the uses which immediately before the execution of the disentailing assurance were subsisting or capable of taking effect:—Held: V. did not as a result of the disentailing assurance cease to be tenant in tail male in possession of the B. estates under testator's will, & therefore, the rentcharge given to her by the same will had not been determined by the execution of the disentailing assurance.—Re MEEKING, MEEKING v. MEEKING, [1922] 2 Ch. 523; 92 L. J. Ch. 68; 128 L. T. 585.

3171. On statutory power of sale.—By deed dated in 1861, lands were settled to the use of A. for life with remainder to his first & other sons successively in tail male. In exercise of a power reserved to him by this deed, A., upon his marriage in 1865, by deed charged the lands with a jointure rentcharge for his wife, & with portions for his younger children, both charges being secured by terms of years in the usual way. In 1889, in order to carry out a family arrangement, A. & B., his eldest son, by deed No. 1 disentailed the lands, & by deed No. 2, in exercise of a power contained in deed No. 1, appointed them to the use of A. for life, with remainders over, without, however, in terms expressing that this life estate was limited to A. in restoration or continuation of his former life estate:—Held: (1) deed No. 2 of 1889 should not under the circumstances be treated as the only settlement of the property, but should be treated as constituting, together with the previous deeds of 1861, 1865 & 1889, a "settlement" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), ss. 2 & 20; & accordingly it was competent for A. to sell & make good title to the lands discharged from the jointure & portions, upon trustees of the settlement being appointed to receive the purchase-money.

(2) The words in Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1), "stands for the time being limited to or in trust for any persons by way of succession," have no technical force, & according to their natural meaning, include the case of a jointure & portions for younger children limited to arise on or after the death of a tenant for life & the terms of years limited to trustees to secure them.

(3) There may be at the same time a more comprehensive settlement consisting of several deeds, & a less comprehensive settlement constituted by one only of the deeds.

(4) The effect of Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 50, is that the statutory power of sale given to a tenant for life by the Act of 1882 is not annexed to his estate as in ordinary conveyancing, but is vested in him once for all by the Act, is incapable of being assigned or released, & continues exercisable by him notwithstanding assignment by him of his estate: so that, although the life estate of A. must be treated as a new life estate arising under the resettlement, the statutory power of sale vested in A. before the resettlement was not affected by it.

(5) Mtgees. who have actually lent their money on the security of the land are regarded as strangers to the settlement & are not to have the security which they bargained for on the land itself transferred to the purchase-money at the will of the tenant for life (per CUR.).—Re MUNDY & ROPER'S CONTRACT, [1899] 1 Ch. 275; 68 L. The will of A. contained the limitations mentioned in the settlement, but did not bear even date therewith, but a posterior date, which was written upon an erasure not accounted for:—Held: inasmuch as, under the circumstances of the case, 3176. — "Succession" to "devolve upon" next heir to barony—Settlement following patent of peerage.—By letters patent the barony of B. was conferred on E. for life, with successive remainders to her second & other sons & the heirs male of their respective bodies. The patent contained a proviso that if the second son of E. or any other person taking under the letters patent should succeed to the earldom of D. the "succession to" the dignity of B. should "devolve upon" the son of E. or the heir who should be next entitled to succeed to the barony of B., if the person so succeeding to the earldom of D. was dead without issue male. Lands having been devised by testatrix to trustees & their heirs, upon trust "to convey, settle, & assure" the same "in a course of entail to correspond as nearly as may be with the limitations of "the barony of B.," "& the provisos affecting the same contained in the letters patent" a settlement was executed in which was inserted a clause providing that, if the second son of E., who had then by the death of E. become Baron B., or any other person taking under the limitations therein contained should succeed to the earldom of D., the "succession to" the lands thereby settled should "devolve upon" the son of E. or the heir who would be next entitled to succeed to the barony of B., if the person so succeeding to the earldom of D. was dead without issue male. The second son of E. afterwards succeeded to the earldom of D. He had issue male:—Held: upon the construction of the clause, that upon the second son of E. succeeding to the earldom of D. the third son of E. became entitled in possession to the settled estates.—COPE v. DE LA WARR (EARL) (1873), 8 Ch. App. 982; 42 L. J. Ch. 870; 29 L. T. 565; 22 W. R. 8, L. J.

3177. — "Tail male"—Construed as "tail general."—By a marriage settlement made in 1886 it was provided that if the eldest son of the settlor should become entitled to M.'s real estate under his will for an estate in tail male he should be excluded from all share in the trust funds subject to the settlement. E. was the settlor's eldest son, & under the limitations of the will of M. who died in 1868, he became entitled to testator's real estate for an estate in tail general. The trustees of the settlement took out a summons to determine whether he had lost his right to a share in the settlement funds:—Held: inasmuch as the intention of the settlor was clear & at the date of the settlement she must have known that if E. came into testator's real estate it must be for an estate in tail general, not an estate in tail male, the insertion of the word "male" in the settlement must be treated as a misdescription, & the settlement construed as if the word were omitted; & E. was excluded from sharing in the settlement moneys, without prejudice to his claims if the younger son died.—Re ALEXANDER'S SETTLEMENT, JENNINGS v. ALEXANDER, [1910] 2 Ch. 225; 79 L. J. Ch. 656; 102 L. T. 909; 54 Sol. Jo. 602.

3178. Operation—Limitations of estate extrinsic to settlement—& charge created.—By indenture of settlement, two estates, A. & B., were limited to the father for life & subject thereto, the estate A. was limited to the first & other sons in tail male, & the estate B. was limited to the second & other sons in like manner; & it was provided that if the second son should become an eldest son, & as such should become entitled to the actual possession or to the receipt of the rents & profits of the estate A., the limitations of the estate B. should cease & determine as if such second son were dead without issue. The second son, by the death of his elder brother, became the eldest son, & joined his father in suffering a recovery of the estate A., the uses of which were declared to the joint appointment of the father & son & subject thereto to the old uses: in exercise of this power the father & son, by a mtge. in fee of the estate A., raised a sum of money which was paid to the father & son:—Held: (1) on the death of the father, the estate B. shifted from the second son under the terms of the proviso contained in the settlement; (2) the recovery suffered by the father & son did not by itself prevent the operation of the proviso, & the mtge. had not that effect, but notwithstanding both the recovery & the mtge., the second son came on the death of his father into possession of the estate A. within the meaning of the terms of the settlement; (3) the party entitled to the estate A. might, previously to the happening of the event mentioned in the proviso, have so exercised his rights over the estate as to have prevented it from ever coming into the possession of the second son within the meaning of the terms of the settlement.

I take the law to be settled that, generally speaking, where, as in that case [Fazakerly v. Ford (1831), 4 Sim. 300] the limitations of the estate are extrinsic to the settlement containing the shifting clause, if a charge is created, for a charge is just as much taken from the estate as if a portion of the estate were taken from it, the clause will not operate (LORD ST. LEONARDS, C.).—HARRISON v. ROUND (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 190; 22 L. J. Ch. 322; 20 L. T. O. S. 118; 17 Jur. 563; 1 W. R. 26; 42 E. R. 844, L. C.

3181. — —.]—A. so devised his estate of G. that no female issue of any son of B., his first devisee, could take or inherit. B. being himself possessed of another estate of C., & having succeeded to the G. estate, made a will by which he devised his original estate C. to his sons successively in tail male; then to the children of his sons in tail general; then to his own eldest daughter for life. He added a shifting clause, declaring that his own devised estates should not be held or enjoyed by any one of his sons or daughters, or his, her, or their issue, after such son or daughter, or his, her, or their issue, should have come into possession of the estate devised by A.; but that as often as such estate of A. should come to the possession of any of his, B.'s, sons or daughters, or any of their issue, that then the person next in remainder under the limitations of his, B.'s, will, should be entitled to the C. estate; & so from time to time, as often as the event might happen, in such manner & as if the person so becoming possessed of the G. estate had died, or was then dead, without issue:—Held: "issue" here only meant those who would take under the limitations anterior to the devise "to the person next in remainder," & excluding them alone from taking under those limitations. The effect of the shifting clause was therefore simply to propel or accelerate the next remainder, but not to carry over the estate in a different class of remainder.—JELlicoe v. GARDINER (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 323; 5 New Rep. 465; 34 L. J. C. P. 282; 13 L. T. 127; 11 Jur. N. S. 249; 13 W. R. 528; 11 E. R. 1357; sub nom. GARDINER v. JELlicoe, 20 C. B. N. S. 198, 11 L.

3182. — Effect of statement that divested party "otherwise provided for"—Where provision referred to invalid.]—By a marriage settlement a sum of stock was settled, subject to the husband's & wife's life interests therein, upon trusts for the children & issue of the marriage, except an eldest son entitled to certain settled estates, as the husband & wife, or the survivor of them, should appoint, & in default of appointment, for the children, except as aforesaid, in equal shares, the shares of sons to be vested at twenty-one, of daughters at twenty-one or marriage, & it was provided that if the husband should die in his his wife's lifetime, leaving an only child, a son, such son should be entitled to the whole trust fund, but if the wife should survive the husband, & there should be only two children or only one child, except as aforesaid, who should attain twenty-one or marry, such two only children or one only child, except as aforesaid, should not be entitled to any part of the trust fund, but it should go to the husband absolutely, as in that event such two children or one child, except as aforesaid, were otherwise provided for by a deed of even date creating a charge upon the settled real estates. There were two children of the marriage, a son who died an infant & a daughter who married, & became, on her brother's death, entitled to the settled estates. The wife survived the husband. The deed purporting to create a charge upon the settled estates, turned out to be invalid:—Held: upon the construction of the settlement, & without resting the decision upon the invalidity of the charge, the daughter took an absolutely vested interest in the trust fund, & it did not go to the husband's representative. Semble: if it had been otherwise, the invalidity of the charge would have been sufficient to displace the claim of the husband's representative.—CARTER v. DUCIE (EARL) (1871), 41 L. J. Ch. 153; 25 L. T. 656; 20 W. R. 228.

3183. — Provisoes avoiding jointures & portions.]—Testatrix, by will dated in 1860, devised freeholds to the use of trustees & their heirs, upon trust for E. for life, remainder to the use of C., the first son of E., for life, without impeachment of waste, remainder to the use of his first & other sons successively in tail male; with remainders in like form to the use of the third, passing over the second, fourth, & other younger sons of E. for life, & their respective first & other sons in tail male, with divers remainders over. The settlement contained powers to the sons of E. thereinbefore named of jointuring & of charging portions. By letters patent, dated in Apr. 1864, the barony of B. was conferred upon E. for life; & after her death, upon R., the second son of E., & the heirs male of his body; & in default of such issue, to the third, fourth, & fifth sons of E., & the heirs male of their bodies respectively. The letters patent contained a proviso, that if any person taking thereunder should succeed to the earldom of D., & there should then or thereafter be a younger son, or heir male of a younger son, then the succession to the barony should devolve upon the son of E., or the heir who would be next entitled to the barony. Testatrix, by a codicil, dated in May, 1864, revoked the devise contained in her will & in lieu thereof devised the freeholds to trustees, upon trust, as soon as conveniently might be after her decease, to "convey, settle, & assure" the same "in a course of entail, to correspond as nearly as may be with the limitations" of the barony, & "the provisos affecting the same contained in the letters patent," . . . & with all such "powers, provisos, declarations, & agreements" as the trustees should consider proper, or as their counsel should advise. E. died; & the House of Lords having declared that the estates devised by the codicil ought to be limited in strict settlement to R. & the younger sons of E. for their respective lives, without impeachment of waste, with remainder to their first & other sons in tail male: that such settlement ought to contain powers of jointuring & charging portions for younger children to the limits contained in the will; & that in the settlement there ought to be inserted a shifting clause in the words of the letters patent:—Held: (1) the settlement ought not to contain a clause postponing the vesting of portions until the death of the person creating them; (2) the settlement ought not to contain a proviso avoiding jointures & portions in the event of the estates shifting on the accession of the earldom.—*HOLMESDALE (VISCOUNT) v. *Annotations:—*Reid. Randall v. Russell (1817), 3 Mer. 190; Re Biss, Biss v. Biss, [1903] 2 Ch. 40.

3189. —.]—A., under a voluntary settlement of which it did not appear that she had notice, was entitled to certain leaseholds held for lives, for the term of her life with remainder to B. Under a subsequent voluntary settlement she took a life interest in the same leaseholds with an absolute power of appointment over the residue of the leasehold interest. While in possession of the property she took a renewed lease of it, & died having appointed all her interest to C.:—Held: the renewal enured to the benefit of B.—WATERS v. BAILEY (1843), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 219; 63 E. R. 96.

3190. —.]—There is no authority for the general proposition that if a person only partly interested in an old lease obtains from the lessor a renewal, he must be held a constructive trustee of the new lease, whatever may be the nature of his interest or the circumstances under which he obtained the new lease. A person renewing is only held to be a constructive trustee of the new lease if, in respect of the old lease, he occupied some special position by virtue of which he owed a duty towards the other persons interested: as, for example, in the case of a renewal by a tenant for life of settled leaseholds, or by a partner of a partnership lease, or by a mtgee. of a mtged. lease. In all such cases the new lease is treated as engrafted on or as forming part of the original lease.

A lessor granted a lease for seven years of a house in which the lessee carried on a profitable business. On the expiration of the term, the lessor refused to renew, but allowed the lessee to remain as tenant from year to year at an increased rent. During that tenancy the lessee died intestate, leaving a widow & three children, one being an infant. The widow took out administration to her husband's estate, & she & the two adult children, one of whom was a son, continued to carry on the business under the existing yearly tenancy. The widow & son each applied to the lessor for a new lease for the benefit of the estate, which he refused to grant, but, having determined the yearly tenancy by notice, he granted to the son “personally” a new lease for three years at a still further increased rent.

In an action which had in the meantime been instituted by the three children, including the infant, against the administratrix for administration of intestate's estate, the administratrix applied to have the new lease treated as having been taken by the son for the benefit of the estate & for an account of the rents & profits received by him:—Held: the evidence took the case out of *Ex p. 3185 i. Absence of direction in settlement—Tenant for life not bound to renew.]—G. being possessed of a chattel interest under a leasee of the See of

Dublin, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal, bequeathed it to trustees, to the use of E. for life with divers limitations over, & with a power to the trustees to sell the same, & invest the produce in the purchase of freehold lands, to be settled to the same uses:—Held: there was no obligation imposed on E., the tenant for life, to renew.—O'FERRALL v. O'FERRALL (1834), L. & G. temp. Plunk. 79.—IR.

showed that the right or hope of renewal had been determined by the lessor himself before the son intervened, so that the new lease could not be treated as an accretion to the estate of the deceased, & also the son had in no way abused his position nor stood in any fiduciary relation towards nor owed any duty to the other persons interested in the estate; & he was therefore entitled to retain the lease for his own benefit.

The cases which really demand full consideration are those where the person renewing the lease does not clearly occupy a fiduciary position. On inquiry into those cases it appears to me, as a result, that a person renewing is only held to be a constructive trustee of the renewed lease if, in respect of the old lease, he occupied some special position & owed, by virtue of that position, a duty towards the other persons interested.

Take, for example, the case of a tenant for life under a settlement of leaseholds. Although not a trustee for the remaindermen, yet his position is not that of a stranger as regards them. He owes, by virtue of his position, certain duties towards them in respect of the settled property; & if, by virtue of his position, he is enabled to obtain a renewal of the lease, equity clearly demands that the new right obtained in virtue of the old should be regarded as a graft on the old, & be treated accordingly as settled property (ROMER, L.J.).—Re Biss, Biss v. Biss, [1903] 2 Ch. 40; 72 L. J. Ch. 473; 88 L. T. 403; 51 W. R. 504; 47 Sol. Jo. 383, C. A.

3191. — No direction for renewal—Effect of special provision.]—Where the tenant for life of leaseholds in settlement, being under no obligation to renew obtains an extension of the term, he is a trustee, for those claiming under the settlement; & the fact of the settlement containing a special provision that a particular renewal shall enure to the benefit of the trust, does not prevent the application of this general rule.

Leaseholds were settled on A. B. for life, with remainder to his wife for life, with remainder to such child or children as he should appoint, & in default amongst them equally. A. B. renewed the leases in his own name, & by his will confirmed the settlement, & gave all "his freeholds & leaseholds" to his son, & a legacy to his daughter; he died, having other leaseholds besides those settled:—Held: the will was not an execution of the power; & the daughter was not to be put to her election.—*TANNER v. After the date of his will, A. surrendered the existing lease, & obtained a renewed lease. 3218. ——— Payment of whole cost of renewal—Lien for proportionate share.]—(1) On a devise of successive interests in leases for lives or years, where testator directs that the leases are from time to time to be renewed, without more, the fines & expenses of renewal are to be borne by the tenant for life & remainderman, or parties successively entitled, in proportion to their actual enjoyment of the estate, & not in proportion to an extent of enjoyment to be determined speculatively, or by a calculation of probabilities.

There is no difference in the rule as to the apportionment of fines for renewal between the devisees of successive interests in the estate, whether the leases are for lives or for years.

(2) If testator provides a specific fund for the renewals, or directs that the renewals shall be raised or borne by the parties in a certain manner, or in certain proportions, such direction supercedes the general rule; but if trustees, having power to direct the manner in which the fines shall be raised, do not exercise the power, the ct. will pursue the general rule which would be adopted in the absence of any direction as to the manner of providing for the fines.

Qu. : whether there is any difference in the rule of apportionment in cases where the parties take successive interests under wills, & in cases where such interests are taken under settlements by deed.

Qu. : whether trustees, having power to raise the fines out of the rents & profits, or by mtge., or otherwise, as they should think fit, might so act as to throw the burden on the parties, in proportions different from those in which it would be distributed by the general rule of the ct.

(3) Where the tenant for life pays the whole fine or renewal, he will have a lien on the estate for the proportion which shall ultimately appear to be chargeable on the remainderman, or parties entitled in succession; & where the remainderman renews, or the renewal is effected by means of a mtge. of the estate, the tenant for life may be required to give security to the remainderman for a proportionate part of the fine, calculated upon the assumed duration of the life interest; & if that interest should endure longer than such assumed period, he may be required to give further security, without prejudice in either case to the actual amount which, at the determination of his interest, shall appear to be his due proportion of the fine. —*JONES v. (2) Although it may be that, when provision is made of a fund for renewal, the remainderman will not suffer, this is not the principle, for the principle is that the remainderman ought to bear so much of the capital paid for renewal as may not be paid by the tenant for life under the security which he has given.

(3) The ct. will not retain the income of the tenant for life, because he may become liable to give security for the payments on account of renewals, before the occasion for giving such security has arisen.

(4) A rule that the obligation of the tenant for life of property subject to fines for renewal is satisfied by keeping down the interest only of the amount necessary to be paid for the renewal, would be unjust if the tenant for life survived the first cestui que vie, & a second renewal was necessary in his lifetime, for then the tenant for life would have had the whole benefit of the first renewal; & the rule therefore is that the tenant for life is bound, not only to bear the interest of the sum paid for the renewal, but to contribute towards the payment of such sum.

(5) A rule, which attributed one-third of the expense of renewal to the tenant for life, & two-thirds to the parties in remainder, would not remove the injustice; & therefore the ct. holds that the amount of contributions of the tenant for life & remainderman are to be determined by the amount of the benefit which they respectively derive for the renewal. — *HUDLESTON v. SUB-SECT. 5.—PURCHASE OF REVERSION.

See Law of Property Act, 1922 (c. 16), sched. XV.

3231. Purchase by tenant for life—Whether for benefit of remainderman.—Tenant for life of an ecclesiastical lease who purchases the reversion is considered in equity as a trustee for the remainderman, & is entitled to a charge on the estate for the purchase-money.—MASON v. HULKE (1874), 22 W. R. 622.

3232. ———.]—A tenant for life & sole trustee of settled estates, by will, purchased reversions in fee of leases for lives, his own life being one, & for years, parts of the settled estates, & the estates were conveyed, as to the reversion of the lease for lives, to him upon the trusts of the will; & as to one of the reversions of the leases for years to him absolutely; & as to the other reversion of the leases for years to him upon trusts of the will. He died while the leases for years would have been running out, & without having declared any intention that the purchase-moneys were to enure for the benefit of those entitled under the will. The first tenant in tail died in tenant for life's lifetime intestate, leaving a widow, & a son heir in tail:—Held: as to all the reversions purchased, the estate of the tenant for life was entitled to be repaid the purchase-moneys; as regarded the legal personal representative of the first tenant in tail, both the estates of which there had been leases for years must be treated as being subject to those leases for the benefit of his first tenant in tail's estate; & as to the estate conveyed to the tenant for life absolutely, it belonged to the legal personal representative of the first tenant in tail; & as to the other estate conveyed to him upon the trusts of the will she was entitled to a leasehold interest of the same extent as the term would have conferred.

A tenant for life of leaseholds for years is not to contribute to the expense of renewal beyond a proportion calculated in reference to the extent of his enjoyment of the newly created interest, although the settlement may contain a trust for renewal out of rents & profits.—ISAAC v. WALL (1877), 6 Ch. D. 706; 46 L. J. Ch. 576; 37 L. T. 227; 25 W. R. 844.

3233. ———.]—The doctrine that a renewal of leaseholds by a tenant for life enures for the benefit of the remaindermen applies equally to a purchase of the reversion.

Testatrix devised leaseholds, renewable by custom, to J. P. for the residue of the term, & after the death of J. P., during the residue of the term, to the children of J. P. in equal shares. J. P. renewed the leaseholds more than once, & finally purchased the reversion:—Held: the fee simple in the property passed by the devise in the will to the children of J. P., & became subject to the trusts of the will.—PHILLIPS v. PHILLIPS (1885), 29 Ch. D. 673; 54 L. J. Ch. 943; 53 L. T. 403; 33 W. R. 863, C. A.

SECT. 4.—SETTLEMENTS OF PERSONALTY TO DEVOLVE AS REALTY.

Creation of entailed interest in personal property.—See, now, Law of Property Act, 1925 (c. 20), s. 130.

3236. Postponement of vesting—"As far as the rules of law or equity will permit."—A bequest or settlement of chattels upon the same limitations as real estate, whether immediate or by way of trust executed, vests them absolutely in the first tenant in tail at birth, & this whether the limitations of the chattels be expressed in extenso or created by reference to the limitations of the realty; & such reference may be effectually made either by declaring that the chattels are to go upon the limitations of the realty or by saying that they are to be treated as heirlooms.

The addition of the words "as far as the rules of law or equity will permit" & the circumstance that the legal interest is left in exors., will not prevail to alter the general rule or make the trusts executory.

Semble: where the trusts of the chattels are executory as in the case of covenants to settle, particular restrictions, as to the attainment of twenty-one or otherwise, may be implied for the purpose of keeping the realty & personalty together. Doubtful words tending to restrict the interest of the chattels to those who come into possession of the realty, will not overrule the operation of the general canons of construction, nor suspend the interest until possession of the realty is acquired. But clear words imposing such a restriction will overrule the ordinary construction of a bequest or settlement of heirlooms.

The rule is that which was established in Foley v. Burrell, No. 3243, post, & is favourable to the contention of those who insist that the chattels rest in the first tenant in tail. But the full extent of that authority is no more than this, that doubtful words tending to restrict the interest in the chattels to those who come into possession of the real estate, will not overrule the operation of the general canons of construction, or have the effect of suspending the interest until the time when possession of the realty is obtained (PAGE WOOD, V.-C.).—SCARSDALE (LORD) v. CURZON (1860), 1 John. & H. 40; 29 L. J. Ch. 249; 3 L. T. 29; 6 Jur. N. S. 209; 70 E. R. 653.

3238.—Tenant in tail by purchase under twenty-one.—By a settlement of real estates made in 1877, plate, pictures, & chattels were assigned to trustees "upon trust to permit the same to be used, held, & enjoyed with the mansion house aforesaid by the person who for the time being shall be entitled to the said mansion house under the limitations thereof herein contained." yet so that for the effect of transmission they should not vest absolutely in any person thereby made tenant in tail male by purchase who should not attain the age of twenty-one years. The eldest son attained twenty-one years but died in the lifetime of the tenant for life. On the death of the tenant for life in 1907, the second son, an infant, claimed to be entitled to these heirlooms as tenant in tail male in possession:—Held: as a question of construction, there was sufficient indication of intention on the part of the settlor these heirlooms should go with the mansion house & vest only in a tenant in tail male in possession, & consequently, they vested in the second son, though liable to be divested in the event of his dying under twenty-one.—Re CHESHAM'S (LORD) SETTLEMENT, VALENTIA (VISCOUNT) v. CHESHAM (LADY), [1909] 2 Ch. 329; 78 L. J. Ch. 692; 101 L. T. 9; 25 T. L. R. 657; 53 Sol. Jo. 197, C. A.

3239. Whether executory trust of personality created—Limitations of settled land—Direction to "release & convey."—(1) A settlement, on marriage, of real estate upon trust for the intended wife for life, remainder to the husband for life, & after the death of the survivor, "in trust for & to be released & conveyed unto" the children, as the parents or the survivor should appoint; in default, "in trust for & to be released & conveyed unto" the children as tenants in common in tail; & in default of issue, if the wife should survive the husband, "in trust for & to be released & conveyed unto" the wife, "her heirs & assigns for ever." By the same deed, personal property was assigned to the same trustees, upon trust to pay the income & principal "to such person & persons, for such uses, ends, intents & purposes, & in such manner & form, & subject to the same powers, provisos, contingencies, declarations & agreements as were thereinbefore expressed concerning the payment by the trustees of the rents & profits of the said real estate thereby conveyed, & concerning their release & conveyance of the same, or as near thereto as circumstances & the nature of the case would admit":—Held: this trust of the personality was not rendered executory by reference to the direction to release & convey the real estate, such direction being merely superadded to a distinct declaration of trust of such real estate.

(2) This construction was not altered by a proviso immediately following the limitation of the personal estate, that the ultimate limitation in favour of the heirs of the wife should, with respect to the personal estate, be construed to be for her next of kin; the meaning of such proviso being only that if, by the failure of the preceding limitations, the real estate should at any time become vested in possession in the heirs of the wife, the personality, which was settled upon corresponding trusts, should belong to her next of kin. There was only one child of the marriage, who died an infant in the lifetime of his father. On the subsequent death of the father:—Held: such child took an absolute interest in the personality, subject to open & let in other children, if any.—DONCASTER v. DONCASTER (1856), 3 K. & J. 26; 2 Jur. N. S. 1066; 69 E. R. 1007.

3240. Effect of ultimate limitations of personality—Trust for next of kin.—DONCASTER v. DONCASTER, No. 3239, ante.

3241. Whether heirlooms settled to devolve with land "insurable property."—Chattels settled as heirlooms are "insurable property" within Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 18, & small variations in detail between the trusts of these "heirlooms" & of other property comprised in the same settlement where such trusts are substantially the same will not prevent this other property being held upon the "same trusts" as the heirlooms within Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), s. 18 (2). Consequently, where certain chattels were by a settlement vested in trustees upon trust to be enjoyed by the person for the time being entitled to the freehold of real estate settled by the same settlement, & under the settlement other personal property was settled upon such trusts as those upon which it would have been held if it had been proceeds of sale of the settled realty made under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), the trustees were held entitled to insure the "heirlooms" against fire, & to pay the premiums out of the income of the other settled personality, although no power to insure was contained in the settlement.—Re EGMONT'S (EARL) TRUSTS, LEFROY v. EGMONT (EARL), [1908] 1 Ch. 821; 77 L. J. Ch. 479; 98 L. T. 826; 24 T. L. R. 783.

See now, Trustee Act, 1925 (c. 19), s. 19.

3242. Whether power over chattels imported—Land subject to power of appointment.—By a settlement made by a father & his eldest son certain freehold hereditaments were appointed & conveyed to such uses & trusts & subject to such powers as the father & son should by deed appoint, & in default, & until, & subject to any such appointment, to the use of trustees for a term of a thousand years upon trust to raise certain annual sums & subject thereto to the use of the father for life, & after his death for his eldest son for life, with remainder to his first & other sons successively in tail male, with remainder to the use of the second son of the settlor for life, & then to his first & other sons successively in tail male; with remainders over. By the same indenture certain jewels were assigned to the trustees upon trust

Sect. 4.—Settlements of personally to devolve as realty. Sects. 5 & 6.]

that they should allow the same to devolve & be enjoyed, so far as the law would permit, as heirlooms along with the settled hereditaments. By a subsequent indenture made in purported exercise of the power conferred on them the father & eldest son appointed that the trustees of the settlement should stand possessed of the jewels in trust for the father absolutely. Upon a summons by the father & son asking for a declaration that under the trust in the settlement they had a joint general power of appointment over the jewels corresponding to but exercisable independently of their joint general power of appointment by deed of the settled hereditaments:—Held: the ct. was bound to import into the trusts of the chattels a general power of appointment corresponding with the first limitation of the realty as the only means of securing unity of ownership in the event of the realty being withdrawn from the settlement, & the settlors desiring to maintain unity of ownership.—Re PENTON'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS, *PENTON v. 3243. Whether tenant for life must give security—Sufficiency of inventory—Unless goods in danger.]

On the death of pltf.'s mother, who survived her husband, one of her exors., the other having renounced, refused to deliver up the diamonds to pltf., the heir, & raised the question as to their forming part of the assets of the mother:—Held: the diamonds formed no part of the assets of the mother, but belonged to the family as heirlooms.—*SEALE v. The mother destroyed the recipe & verbally communicated the contents to her eldest son for the benefit of his brothers & sisters. Upon a bill filed against him by some of the younger children, he was declared to hold the secret upon the trusts of the settlement & was decreed to account for the profits made by him by the sale of the medicine after his mother's death, & as a sale was impracticable, an issue was directed to ascertain the value of the secret.—*GREEN v. SECT. 6.—SETTLEMENTS OF INSURANCE POLICIES.

3251. Covenant to effect policy—Insurance becoming impossible.]—By a Scotch marriage settlement dated Aug. 18, 1873, the husband assigned to trustees two policies on his life for £5,000 each, expiring respectively on July 2, & July 3, 1875; & he covenanted "on or before July 2, 1875," to insure his life in the names of the trustees in the sum of £10,000; the existing & future policies to be held upon trusts for his wife & children. The husband took no steps towards effecting a new policy until July 1, 1875, shortly before which date his health, which had previously been good, had become so bad, that he was unable to effect an insurance, & in Sept. following he died:—Held: the life having become uninsurable on July 1, 1875, did not relieve the husband from the obligation to insure or pay damages, & accordingly his estate was answerable in damages to the trustees of the settlement.—Re ARTHUR, ARTHUR v. WYNNE (1880), 14 Ch. D. 603; 49 L. J. Ch. 550; 43 L. T. 46; 28 W. R. 972.

3252. Policy containing condition against assignment—Whether subject to settlement.—A marriage settlement contained a covenant by the settlor to settle his estate & interest in any property or estate of or to which he should become possessed or entitled during the marriage by devise, bequest, purchase, or otherwise. He afterwards effected some policies of insurance on his life, one of which was subject to a condition that "it should not be assignable in any case whatever":—Held: (1) the policies were property to which the settlor had during the marriage become entitled by purchase within the specific words of the covenant, & the covenant was divisible, & could be enforced as to that property by a ct. of equity; (2) the effect of the condition against assignment was merely to make the policy non-assignable at law, as it would have been prior to the Policies of Assurance Act, 1867 (c. 144), & did not prevent the settlor from dealing with the beneficial interest in it in accordance with his covenant.—Re TURCAN (1888), 40 Ch. 3253. Bonus—Whether subject to trusts of settlement.—A policy of insurance for £3,000 on A.'s life was assigned to trustees, & by a deed of even date, trusts were declared of it by the description of "the sum of £3,000 for which A.'s life was insured," & power was given to B. to dispose of it by will. B. after reciting the settlement, bequeathed £1,000 part of the sum of £3,000 to A. & the remaining sum of £2,000 to C. At A.'s death, £9,000 was received under the policy:—Held: the whole fruits of the policy were subject to the trusts of the settlement, & passed by the bequests to A. & C. in proportion to their legacies.—COURTNEY v. FERRERS (1827), 1 Sim. 137; 5 L. J. O. S. Ch. 107; 57 E. R. 530.

3254. — — —.]—In pursuance of the provisions of a marriage settlement, the husband insured his life in the names of the trustees, in a specified insurance office, for a certain sum, which, upon his death, was to be received & applied by the trustees upon the trusts of the settlement. Additions were made to the policy by the insurance co., as profits or bonus. The husband became bkpt., & died uncertificated:—Held: the assignees of the husband were not entitled to the sums so added to the policy, but the same were to be held by the trustees upon the trusts of the settlement.—PARKES v. BOTT (1838), 9 Sim. 388; 8 L. J. Ch. 14; 59 E. R. 407.

Annotation:—Consd. Domville v. Lamb (1853), 1 W. R. 246.

3255. — — —.]—The trustees of a marriage settlement were directed to pay the premiums & other expenses of a policy of insurance to be effected in some office in England or Ireland on the life & in the name of B. the husband, out of the income of the property forming the subject of the settlement. They were further directed to stand possessed of the policy & of a sum of £4,000 thereby to be raised & secured upon trust, after the death of B., for the wife & the children of the marriage. B., on his part, covenanted to execute an assignment of the policy "together with the sum of £4,000 sterling, to be insured upon the trusts & for the purposes aforesaid." Prior to the date of the settlement B. had effected an Irish policy for £4,000, Irish currency, on his life, & after the execution of the settlement he assigned this policy to the trustees. Subsequently the trustees allowed the Irish policy to drop, & in its place effected an English policy, on the life of B., but in their own names, for £3,666 13s. 4d., which sum they were advised was equivalent to £4,000 Irish currency. This later policy was to be held by the trustees on the same trusts as those declared concerning the Irish policy & the trustees paid the premiums, as directed by the settlement, out of B.'s life estate. Many years afterwards the trustees, on discovering that it was doubtful whether they had acted in compliance with the actual trusts of the settlement, obtained from B. a deed of indemnity. B. by his will bequeathed all the bonuses on the policy upon certain trusts. On a bill filed by some of the children of the marriage:—Held: the bonuses were subject to the trusts of the settlement & did not pass by the will of B.—WARREN v. WYBAULT (1866), 15 L. T. 155; 12 Jur. N. S. 639.

3256. — — — Option to apply bonus in reduction of premiums.—Bonuses on a policy:—Held: to be subject to the trusts of a marriage settlement.

Upon the construction of a settlement:—Held: a policy effected in the names of trustees was itself settled; but under the covenant of the husband & the rules of the co., the husband was entitled to an option to have any bonus applied in reduction of the premiums. Bonuses having been declared, the husband continued to pay the full premiums:—Held: on his death, the bonuses were accretions to the trust, & did not belong to his exors.—*GILLY v. with certain persons as trustees to pay, during his life, all premiums & other moneys, & do & perform all such acts, matters, & things as should be requisite for keeping on foot a policy of assurance previously effected by him on his own life; & the policy contained a proviso, declaring that it should be void in case the party should die by his own hands. The party was afterwards drowned in the River Thames; & by the verdict of a jury, returned in an action at law, directed by the ct. to be brought by the exors. of the settlor against the assurance co., it was found "that the settlor threw himself into the River Thames, intending to destroy himself, but that at the time of committing the act he was incapable of judging between right & wrong":—Held: the trustees of the settlement were not entitled to claim as against the settlor's estate the sum secured by the policy.—*DORMAY v. 3281. Covenant to effect new policy to replace existing one—Failure to perform.—By the terms of a marriage settlement, £1,000, secured by a policy of insurance on the life of the intended wife's father, was to be paid to the intended husband, provided he had previously effected an insurance on his own life for a similar amount; if not, it was to be paid to the wife. It then directed that if the insurance should not have been effected, or if the husband & wife should be both dead when the £1,000 should be received by the trustees, it should be paid to the issue of the marriage. The husband covenanted to effect an insurance within six months after the decease of the wife's father, to secure the payment of the sum of £1,000 at his decease. By a clause at the end of the settlement, it was directed that in default of the husband effecting the insurance the £1,000 should be invested, & the interest paid to the husband until he effected it, & then he was to receive the principal. The insurance was not effected within the time mentioned:—Held: the husband might effect the insurance at any time during his life.—BUSH v. WATKINS (1851), 14 Beav. 425; 51 E. R. 199.

3282. Policy settled without covenant to pay the premiums—Mortgage of policy—Mortgagees priority to cestui que trust.—A. voluntarily assigned a policy on his life to trustees for his infant son, if he attained twenty-five; but if he died under that age & A. should think proper to keep up the policy, upon trust for C. A. covenanted to pay the premiums during the life of his son only, & in the event of A. ceasing to pay the premiums, he should be at liberty to sell the policy & retain the money. The son died under twenty-five, A. mortgaged the policy, covenanting to pay the premiums, which he did:—Held: on the death of A., the produce of the policy belonged to the mtgees., & not to C.—PEDDER v. MOSELY (1862), 31 Beav. 159; 7 L. T. 205; 54 E. R. 1099.

3263. Advowson settled on successive persons in tail—Condition as to presentation—Effect of dis-tail.—By deed of settlement dated in 1783 an advowson was limited to H. & his issue male in strict settlement, "upon this express condition & limitation" that the person who should at any time thereafter be seised of or entitled to the advowson under the deed should from time to time, as the church should become vacant, present a Fellow of J. College. On failure of such person presenting as aforesaid, & from & after such failure, the advowson should remain to the use of the Master & Senior Fellows of J. College. One of the persons entitled under the deed having suffered a recovery & conveyed the fee simple of the advowson to deft.'s predecessor in title:—Held: in a suit by the college, the advowson was limited in trust, not on condition, & on failure of deft. to present a fellow, the gift over took effect in favour of the Master & Seniors.—*ST.
